21st December, 1921,*] [To Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and Union of South Africa: My telegram of the 24th December, 1921†] I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information regarding the communication to the French Government of the revised declaration respecting Article 5 of the International Air Convention.

Enclosure in No. 8.

(No. 1191.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1., 25th April, 1922.

WITH reference to Lord Hardinge's despatch No. 2480 of 2nd September last,
I transmit to you herewith a copy of correspondence between this department, the Air Ministry and the Colonial Office, relative to the ratification of the International Air Convention.

2. As you will see from paragraph 7 of the Air Ministry's letter of 6th March last the French form of declaration designed to replace the reservation in regard to Article 5, whilst at the same time fulfilling the object of the Canadian reservation was not acceptable to His Majesty's Government, and after consultation with the Dominion Governments it has now been recast in the following form:—

"The undersigned, the representatives of Belgium, the British Empire, France, Greece, Japan, Portugal, the Serb-Croat-Slovene State and Siam, duly authorized, have declared that until there has been an opportunity to obtain the grant of derogations under the additional Protocol to the Convention their respective Governments may postpone the application of the provisions of Article 5 of the Convention in respect of the Signatory States which have not yet ratified, and in respect of Spain, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, the Netherlands, Denmark, Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Monaco."

3. The position of Ireland in connexion with ratification of the Convention is at present under consideration, but it is generally agreed that there is no occasion to defer communication to the French Government of the revised form of declaration.

4. I accordingly request that you will submit the above text to the French Government with the view of obtaining their concurrence, and, through them, that of the other signatory Powers participating in the first deposit of ratifications.

SIR,

Downing Street, 16th June, 1922.

In my despatch Dominions No. 210, of the 21st May, 1921,* I had the honour to transmit to you a copy of a note addressed to the French Minister for Foreign Affairs regarding the ratification of the International Air Convention and Protocol. It will be seen from the Minister's reply, a copy of which was enclosed in that despatch, that the French Government proposed to submit to the other Governments concerned the two reservations subject to which His Majesty's ratification was to be deposited.

2. In August, 1921, the French Government intimated that the Government of Japan had objected to the use of the word "reservation"; the French Government concurred in this objection and proposed to substitute, for the first of the reservations referred to above, a "declaration" in similar terms, of which they suggested the text. The French Government also raised objection to any specific reservation or stipulation regarding the position of Canada in relation to the United States.

3. After discussion a declaration recast in the following form was submitted to the French Government. [The declaration is printed in enclosure in No. 8.]

4. To this declaration the French Government agreed, subject to the addition of Bolivia to the list of signatory States, and His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris accordingly deposited His Majesty's ratification of the Convention and Protocol on the 1st June and signed the Protocol of deposit of ratifications.

République Française, Ministère des Affaires étrangères,

MONSIEUR LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

Paris, le 18 mai, 1922.

PAR lettre en date du 27 avril dernier, vous avez bien voulu me faire savoir que le Gouvernement britannique suggère que la déclaration proposée par mon prédécesseur dans sa communication du 31 août 1921,* relative à la ratification de la Convention aérienne internationale, soit remplacée par un texte qui, en français, serait le suivant.

"Les soussignés, Représentants de la Belgique, l'Empire Britannique, la France, la Grèce, le Japon, le Portugal, l'Etat Serbe-Croate-Slovène et le Siam, dûment autorisés ont déclaré que leurs Gouvernements respectifs pourront différer en ce qui concerne les Etats signataires qui n'ont pas encore déposé leurs ratifications, ainsi que l'Espagne, la Suisse, la Norvège, la Suède, les Pays-Bas, le Danemark, la Finlande, l'Esthonie, la Lettonie et Monaco, l'application des dispositions de l'article 5 de la Convention, jusqu'à ce qu'il soit possible d'accorder les dérogations prévues au Protocole additionnel à ladite Convention."

Je donne mon entière approbation à cette formule, en indiquant seulement qu'il y aura lieu d'ajouter la Bolivie à la liste des signataires de cette déclaration, puisque le Gouvernement bolivien m'a notifié qu'il était en mesure de participer au premier dépôt des ratifications sur la Convention.

Je crois devoir vous signaler, en outre, qu'il y aurait sans doute intérêt, pour les Etats au regard desquels la Convention sera en vigueur, à connaître dans quelle mesure certain d'entre eux auront usé de la faculté prévue dans cette déclaration. Il serait donc utile qu'une centralisation de ces divers renseignements eut lieu; ce sera naturellement par les soins de la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne dès son institution, mais en attendant le Gouvernement français, chargé des diverses notifications relatives à la Convention, pourrait recevoir et notifier ces diverses communications.

La formule suivante pourrait en conséquence être ajoutée à la déclaration ci-dessus:

"Les décisions prises par lesdits Gouvernements, quant à la faculté ci-dessus de différer l'application des dispositions de l'article 5 en ce qui concerne les Etats énumérés, seront notifiées au Gouvernement de la République française, qui en informera les divers Etats contractants."

"Dès que la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne sera instituée, ces notifications seront adressées à ladite Commission qui en avisera les Etats contractants."

L'attention des Etats qui effectueront le dépôt de leurs ratifications avant l'institution de la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne sera attirée, au moment de ce dépôt, sur utilité de faire une déclaration semblable à celle formulée plus haut.

Je considère enfin, d'accord avec le Gouvernement britannique, qu'il est très désirable que la Convention aérienne entre en vigueur à une date aussi rapprochée que possible et je propose de fixer au 1er juin la date du premier dépôt des ratifications. Je vais en aviser sans retard les Gouvernements belge, bolivien, grec, japonais, portugais, serbe-croate-slovène et siamois.

Je vous communique dès à présent le projet de procès-verbal du dépôt des ratifications; je vais également l'adresser aux autres Etats à même de participer à ce dépôt.

Cette Convention entrera en vigueur, conformément aux clauses finales, quarante jours après ce premier dépôt pour tous les Etats y ayant participé.

Dès ce premier dépôt, la Convention se trouvera ratifiée par la majorité des Etats signataires, dans le sens de l'article 34 de la Convention. Le Gouvernement français pourrait donc convoquer à Paris, conformément aux termes dudit article, la première réunion de la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne, pour une date qui suivra d'aussi près que possible la mise en vigueur de la Convention.

MAURICE HERBETTE.

OCTOBRE, 1919, ET SUR LE PROTOCOLE ADDITIONNEL À LADITE CONVENTION EN
DATE À PARIS DU 1^{er} MAI 1920.

EN exécution des clauses finales de la Convention portant réglementation de la navigation aérienne, en date à Paris du 13 Octobre 1919, signé par les Etats-Unis, la Belgique, la Bolivie, le Brésil, l'Empire Britannique et le Canada, l'Australie, l'Union Sud-Africaine, la Nouvelle-Zélande, l'Inde, la Chine, Cuba, l'Equateur, la France, la Grèce, le Guatemala, l'Italie, le Japon, Panama, la Pologne, le Portugal, la Roumanie, l'Etat-Serbe-Croate-Slovene, le Siam, l'Etat tchéco-Slovaque et l'Uruguay, et à laquelle ont accédé le Pérou par déclaration en date à Paris du 22 juin 1920, le Nicaragua par déclaration en date à Paris (du 31 décembre 1920 et le Libéria par déclaration en date à Paris) du 29 mars 1922, les soussignés se sont réunis au Ministère des Affaires étrangères à Paris, pour procéder au dépôt des ratifications sur ladite convention et les remettre au Gouvernement de la République française.

Les instruments des ratifications de la Belgique, la Bolivie, l'Empire Britannique, la France, la Grèce, le Japon, le Portugal, l'Etat Serbe-Croate-Slovene, le Siam ont été produits et ayant été, après examen, trouvés en bonne et due forme, ont été confiés au Gouvernement de la République française pour rester déposés dans ses archives.

Les soussignés Représentants de la Belgique, la Bolivie, l'Empire Britannique, la France, la Grèce, le Japon, le Portugal, l'Etat Serbe-Croate-Slovene et le Siam dûment autorisés, ont déclaré que leurs Gouvernements respectifs pourront différer en ce qui concerne les Etats signataires qui n'ont pas encore déposé leurs ratifications, ainsi que l'Espagne, la Suisse, la Norvège, la Suède, les Pays-Bas, le Danemark, la Finlande, l'Esthonie, la Lettonie, et Monaco, l'application des dispositions de l'article 5 de la Convention, jusqu'à ce qu'il soit possible d'accorder les dérogations prévues au Protocole additionnel à ladite Convention. Les décisions prises par lesdits Gouvernements quant à la faculté ci-dessus de différer l'application des dispositions de l'article en ce qui concerne les Etats énumérés, seront notifiées au Gouvernement de la République française qui en informera les divers Etats contractants. Dès que la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne sera instituée, ces notifications seront adressées à ladite Commission qui en avisera les Etats contractants.

Conformément aux clauses finales de la Convention, le Gouvernement français donnera connaissance à tous les Etats contractants des dépôts de ratifications qui seront ultérieurement effectués.

Une copie certifiée conforme du présent procès-verbal sera communiquée, par le Gouvernement français, à tous les Etats signataires.

En foi de quoi les soussignés ont signé le présent procès-verbal.

AIR MINISTRY to COLONIAL OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 12.]

Air Ministry, Adastral House, Kingsway, London, W.C.2.

SIR,

27th March, 1922.

I AM commanded by the Air Council to state for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies that they have had under consideration certain questions as to the manner of exercising the votes at the disposal of the British Empire on the International Commission for Air Navigation to be established under Article 34 of the International Convention.

2. It will be observed that, under that Article, although each of the British Dominions and India is entitled to a separate representative on the Commission, Great Britain, the British Dominions and India are to count as one State for the purpose of determining the number of votes at their disposal, and that the number of votes at the disposal of each of the five principal States (including the British Empire as one of the five) depends upon the number, for the time being, of other contracting States. It is anticipated that, at the outset of the Commission (which is to be established as soon as a majority of the States signatory to the Convention have notified their ratification to the French Government), the number of votes at the disposal of the British Empire will be two. This number will, of course, increase from time to time under the formula in the fifth paragraph of Article 34 as the number of the contracting States outside the five principal States increases by fresh ratification or by adhesions to the Convention: the total number of British Empire votes appears, however, unlikely to increase beyond four or five for a considerable time to come.

3. In these circumstances the question arises how the British Empire vote is to be exercised as regards questions on which a difference of opinion exists between component parts of the Empire. It might be possible to provide for this by means of preliminary meetings between representatives of Great Britain, the Dominions and India, at which the attitude of the Empire in regard to pending questions would be discussed, and the direction of the Empire vote on the Commission determined by, if necessary, a preliminary vote. This suggestion is, however, made only tentatively: apart from other considerations, it is not clear that time would always admit of such a procedure. The Council are also disposed to the view that the interest of Great Britain in the Commission and in civil aviation generally so largely outweighs that of any of the individual Dominions as to require that, under any such arrangement, Great Britain should, at all events for the present, be given a predominant voice.

4. It would appear, however, that a somewhat similar problem may already have arisen in connexion with the Council of the League of Nations. On that body, as the Air Council understand, the British Empire, including the Dominions and India, is represented as a whole and has a single vote. The Council are not aware what arrangements exist for ascertaining and, as far as possible, giving effect to the views of the Dominions in regard to matters coming before the Council of the League: it may be, however, that a useful precedent for solving the problem indicated in paragraph 3 above is to be found here, or in connexion with some other international agreement or Convention to which Mr. Churchill may be able to direct attention. Inasmuch as the duties of the International Commission for Air Navigation relate so largely to matters of a technical and non-political character, it is not suggested that the parallel between that body and the Council of the League of Nations can be regarded as exact.

5. I am to add that while the terms of the Air Navigation Convention do not appear to preclude the splitting of the British Empire vote on the Commission, such a course appears to the Council to have substantial disadvantages. It would reduce the voting power of the Empire (indeed, it would cancel it, so long as the number of votes is only two) and it might tend to encourage disagreement between the component parts of the Empire.

6. The Council would be glad to be furnished with Mr. Churchill's observations on the matter in general, and particularly as regards the points suggested in paragraph 4.

7. A copy of this letter is being sent to the India Office, together with a request for the observations of that Department.

I am, &c.,
J. A. WEBSTER.

SIR, Downing Street, 2nd May, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th of March* regarding the manner of exercising the votes at the disposal of the British Empire on the International Commission for Air Navigation, and to invite reference to the letter from this Office of the 14th of November† and to your letter of the 29th of November,‡ on the subject of the representation of the Union of South Africa on the Commission.

2. As regards the third paragraph of your letter under reply, it appears to Mr. Churchill that the only satisfactory course is to regard the representatives of the various parts of the Empire on the Commission as constituting a British Empire Delegation, similar to those present at the Peace Conference, the Washington Disarmament Conference, and the Genoa Conference, and that every effort should be made by discussion to secure unanimity as to the manner in which the votes at the disposal of the British Empire should be cast. Mr. Churchill thinks it unlikely that this result cannot be achieved without detriment to any paramount interest of this country, having regard to the personal and professional qualifications which will doubtless be possessed by the officer who will represent the Air Council.

3. I am to add, with reference to paragraph 4 of your letter, that the position in the case of the Council of the League of Nations does not appear to afford any guidance in dealing with the present question.

I am, &c.,

REPRESENTATION OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE ON THE INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION

nomination of British representatives to serve on the International Commission for Air Navigation.

In view of the fact that ratifications by the majority of States signatory to the International Convention for the regulation of Air Navigation will, it is anticipated, be formally deposited about 1st June, and that the first meeting of the International Commission will be convened by the French Government for early in July, the Council request that, subject to Mr. Churchill's concurrence, the Governments of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand may be asked by cable to forward at a very early date the names of their respective representatives for communication, together with the nominations of Great Britain and India, through the Foreign Office to the French Government.

In this connexion it will be recalled that in the case of the Union of South Africa, the Council undertook, at the request of the Governor-General, that the representative of Great Britain should also act as the Union Government's representative on the Commission, the High Commissioner in London being kept in close touch with the proceedings of that body, and his advice sought on any questions involving the interests of South Africa.

SIR, Downing Street, 8th June, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2nd June‡ on the subject of the representation of the British Empire on the International Commission for Air Navigation, and to transmit to you, for the information of the Air Council, a copy of a telegram§ to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, and New Zealand.

2. Mr. Churchill observes that no mention is made in your letter of Newfoundland. There would, however, seem to be no reason why Newfoundland should not be represented on the Commission. Article 34 of the Aerial Navigation Convention provides that the Commission shall be composed of " . . . one representative of Great Britain and one of each of the British Dominions and of India . . . "; there is no limitation to the British Dominions whose representatives signed the

* 363: not printed; it confirmed No. 36 in Dominions No. 81. † No. 37 in Dominions No. 81. ‡ No. 13. § No. 14.

Convention, and presumably the reference must be to all the self-governing Dominions.

Article 40 similarly provides that "The British Dominions and India shall be deemed to be States for the purposes of the present Convention." Unless the expression "the British Dominions" is interpreted as including Newfoundland, there will be no power to terminate the Convention separately in respect of Newfoundland. It would, however, be only appropriate and in accordance with the usual procedure in the case of Conventions of this nature that the power of separate termination should be exercisable in respect of Newfoundland. The real distinction drawn in the Convention is between the self-governing Dominions, which are to be regarded as separate States, and the Colonies not possessing responsible Government, which under Article 1 are included with the Mother Country.

3. No difficulty, moreover, will arise as to voting power if Newfoundland also is represented on the Commission, since, for the purpose of voting "Great Britain, the British Dominions and India" count as one State.

4. If the Air Council concur in the above views, Mr. Churchill would propose to send to the Governor of Newfoundland a telegram similar to that which has been sent to the Governors-General of the other Dominions.

Government of Canada is of opinion that Canada's representative should understand clearly what it means to share trans-continental frontier with such power as United States more so because Government of United States has not ratified International Air Convention. Squadron Leader Robert Leckie, Officer of Royal Air Force, now believed to be on duty in England, who is Canadian, and until recently was employed in Canada, is thoroughly conversant with situation and, if Air Ministry can spare his services, Government of Canada would desire him to act as Canada's representative, but he would be required to keep in touch with High Commissioner for Canada and to refer to him whenever Canadian interests were involved.—BYNG.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 22.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, 26th June, 1922.

I AM directed by the Earl of Balfour to state that he has received from the Air Ministry a copy of your letter to that Department of the 8th instant,* regarding the representation of Newfoundland on the International Commission for Air Navigation, and to offer the following observations thereon.

2. The right of Newfoundland to be represented on the Commission must, in Lord Balfour's opinion, depend upon whether it was the intention of the signatories of the International Air Convention, when signing that instrument, to include Newfoundland among the British Dominions referred to in paragraph 3 of Article 34. So far as His Lordship is aware there is no ground for assuming that the words "each of the British Dominions" were intended by the signatories to mean more than the four Dominions which were separate parties to the Treaty of Versailles, they being the only Dominions known to the international world in connexion with the Peace Settlement of 1919 and to the League of Nations, under whose direction the International Commission for Air Navigation will be placed.

3. The fact that Newfoundland is treated within the Empire as a self-governing Dominion does not entitle her to be regarded as such for the purposes of Article 34 of the International Air Convention, the interpretation of which depends not upon domestic usage within the Empire, but, as already stated, upon the meaning attached to the phrase "British Dominions" by the framers and signatories of the Air Convention.

4. As regards Newfoundland's power of withdrawal from the Convention, which is dealt with in the third paragraph of your letter, Lord Balfour sees no way at present in which this could be effected independently of Great Britain in the event of his view of Newfoundland's position being that generally adopted by the signatories of the Convention. It is a matter for regret that the necessary provision was not made at the time when the instrument was drafted.

5. I am to request that these considerations may be brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and that Lord Balfour may be informed whether Mr. Churchill considers it really essential for Newfoundland to be separately represented on the Air Commission and, if so, in what way he would suggest that the endeavour to secure her that position be made.

[Answered by No. 24.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 8th July, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th of June,‡ regarding the representation of Newfoundland on the International Commission for Air Navigation, and to request you to inform the Earl of Balfour that, in deference to the wishes expressed by His Lordship, Mr. Churchill has not yet telegraphed to Newfoundland on the lines suggested in the letter from the Colonial Office to the Air Ministry of the 8th June§; in any case it would not seem essential that Newfoundland should be represented at the first meeting of the International Commission.

Mr. Churchill, however, attaches great importance to the principle involved, on account of its bearing on the position of the Irish Free State when established.

It will be remembered that the position of the Free State in relation to the Aerial Navigation Convention was discussed at the meeting of the Irish Technical Sub-Committee on the 3rd of April, when representatives of the Foreign Office were present. As the result of that discussion, and the subsequent decision of His Majesty's Government on the questions raised, the correspondence|| enclosed has been exchanged with the Provisional Government. From that correspondence it will be seen that the Provisional Government was informed that the Aerial Navigation Convention would apply to the Irish Free State when ratified, but a pledge was given that the necessary steps would be taken at the instance of the Free State Government with a view to putting the Free State, in relation to the Air Convention and other Conventions already in force, in the same international position as the other self-governing Dominions, in accordance with the Treaty.

* No. 14. † No. 17. ‡ No. 18. § No. 15. || Nos. 152 and 153.

The adoption of the construction of Articles 34 and 40 of the Air Convention, which was proposed in the Colonial Office letter of the 8th of June to the Air Ministry, affords the great advantage that without any modification of the Convention, it would secure the separate representation of the Irish Free State on the International Commission, and the right of separate termination of the Convention in respect of the Free State.

For this reason Mr. Churchill hopes that Lord Balfour will find himself able to accept the interpretation of the Articles in question which was suggested in the letter of the 8th of June,* leaving it to any Foreign Power which so desires to raise any question. As explained in the letter referred to, no difficulty should arise as to voting power if Newfoundland is represented on the International Commission, and the position would be the same as regards the Free State, since, for the purpose of voting, "Great Britain, the British Dominions and India" count as one State.

A copy of this correspondence is being sent to the Air Ministry.

C. T. DAVIS.

MONSIEUR L'AMBASSADEUR,

J'AI l'honneur de vous rappeler qu'aux termes du Protocole additionnel à la Convention portant réglementation de la navigation aérienne, en date à Paris du 1^{er} mai, 1920, il a été prévu que les Etats contractants pourraient demander des dérogations à l'application immédiate de l'article 5 de la Convention.

Ce Protocole additionnel avait été préparé en vue de permettre aux Etats ayant ratifié la Convention et ayant conclu des accords avec d'autres Etats non encore parties à la Convention de laisser subsister ces accords.

La Convention est entrée en vigueur le 11 juillet et la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne, chargée d'examiner les demandes de dérogations, s'est réunie à cette date. Il y a donc urgence à ce que les Gouvernements désireux d'obtenir des dérogations adressent leurs demandes au Gouvernement Français, s'ils ne l'ont déjà fait, conformément au paragraphe 2 du Protocole additionnel.

Comme l'examen de ces demandes, la communication de l'avis de la Commission internationale de navigation aérienne aux Etats contractants et la réponse de ces derniers nécessitent des délais, les Puissances ayant déjà ratifié sont convenues par une déclaration insérée dans le Procès-Verbal de dépôt des ratifications, de différer provisoirement l'application des dispositions, de l'article 5 de la Convention en ce qui concerne les Etats signataires qui n'ont pas encore déposé leurs ratifications ainsi que quelques Etats nominalement désignés; d'après cette déclaration c'est au Gouvernement Français que les Puissances ont à notifier leurs intentions à ce sujet.

Vous estimerez, sans doute, utile, d'appeler sans retard l'attention de votre Gouvernement sur la présente communication.

WITH reference to my despatch [Not to Newfoundland: Dominions Treaty No. 37] [To Newfoundland: No. 125] of the 19th of August,* regarding Article 5 of the International Air Navigation Convention, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [Your Royal Highness] [you] to inform your Ministers that the Air Council have pointed out that, in view of the fact that the question of the amendment or rescission of this Article of the Convention is to be the subject of discussion at the next meeting of the International Commission for Air Navigation in London in October next, it would appear inopportune at present to institute steps for the purpose of obtaining the grant of specific derogations under the Additional Protocol. A formal notification is consequently being made to the French Government for communication to the International Commission and for notification to the other contracting States of the intention of His Majesty's Government to postpone, in accordance with the terms of the declaration made by the British Ambassador in the protocol of deposit of ratification of the Convention on the 1st of June last, the application of the provisions of Article 5 in respect of the signatory States which have not yet ratified, and in respect of Spain, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, the Netherlands, Denmark, Finland, Estonia, Latvia and Monaco.

SIR,

Paris, 5th September, 1922.

ARTICLE 25 of the Convention relating to the Regulation of Aerial Navigation, dated in Paris the 13th October, 1919, is worded as follows:—

Each contracting State undertakes to adopt measures to ensure that every aircraft flying above the limits of its territory and that every aircraft wherever it may be, carrying its nationality mark, shall comply with the regulations contained in Annex D. Each of the contracting States undertakes to ensure the prosecution and punishment of all persons contravening these regulations.

Paragraph 16 of Annex H. provides as follows:—

In addition to any penalties which may be imposed by local law for infringement of the preceding regulations, such infringement shall be reported to the State in which the aircraft is registered and that State shall suspend for a limited time, or permanently, the certificate of registration of the offending aircraft.

These two provisions provide for the infliction of penalties by a State in respect of infringements committed outside its territory.

Article 25 provides for the prosecution and punishment by a State in respect of infringements of the regulations laid down in Annex D. committed by any aircraft wherever it may be, carrying the nationality mark of such State.

Paragraph 16 of Annex H. requires a State in which an aircraft is registered and to which an infringement by such aircraft of the regulations of the said Annex is reported by another State, to suspend either for a limited time, or permanently, the certificate of registration of the offending aircraft.

It appears, under these circumstances, that it is for contracting States to take the necessary legislative or administrative measures for giving effect to the provisions of Article 25 of the Convention and paragraph 16 of Annex H.

The International Commission for Air Navigation, having examined this question during the course of its First Session, instructed me to call your attention to the desirability of taking such measures.

I have, &c.,

ALBERT ROPER,

General Secretary.

Air Ministry,

ANTARCTIC: FUTURE CONTROL.

47114/S

No. 40.

COLONIAL OFFICE to LAW OFFICERS, AND LAW OFFICERS' REPORT.

GENTLEMEN,

Downing Street, 27th November, 1922.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to submit to you a point which has arisen in connexion with proposals for administration of certain territorial waters.

His Majesty's Government, in conjunction with the Governments of Australia and New Zealand, have, for reasons which are summarized in the Secret despatch of 6th February, 1920,* of which a copy is enclosed, adopted a policy of extending British control over the Antarctic regions. It is held that the most important practical step in this direction is the assertion of British sovereignty over the Ross Sea coasts and their hinterland. A Secret memorandum† on the best method of so asserting sovereignty, which formed the basis of discussion between the three Governments in 1921, is enclosed.

The question has now been advanced by the receipt of an application from two Norwegians for whaling licences in the territorial waters of the coasts of the Balleny Islands and Ross Sea. These gentlemen have stated in conversation that application to His Majesty's Government was advised by the King of Norway; and their action is regarded as valuable support to the British claim. The licence, which will yield a certain amount of revenue and requires the vessels employed by the Licensees to call during each voyage at a port in New Zealand for purposes of inspection, is being issued by the Treasury, but contains a clause providing for transfer, if desired, to the Government of New Zealand. It is clearly convenient, in view of the fact that administration and control of the Licensees can only be carried on from a New Zealand port, that the control of the coasts covered by the licence, which are included within the area considered to belong to the New Zealand sphere, should be transferred to the Dominion forthwith.

* No. 39 in Dominions No. 75.

It will be observed that the Secret memorandum enclosed contemplated alternative methods of effecting this transfer; either by an Order in Council under the Colonial Boundaries Act, 1895, which would require previous resolutions of both Houses of the Dominion Parliament, or by the issue of Letters Patent appointing the Governor-General for the time being of the Dominion to be Governor for the Antarctic territory, with accompanying Instructions to exercise his powers on the advice of his Ministers for the Dominion. The New Zealand Government have indicated their preference for the latter method and desire an issue of Letters Patent in the form of the draft marked "C" in the Secret memorandum.

This course also commends itself to His Majesty's Government as being more appropriate to a territory already part of His Majesty's Dominions, but entirely uninhabited, and as likely to attract less attention. It has, however, now been suggested to His Grace that such Letters Patent may not be consistent with the British Settlements Act, 1887.

By Section 6 of that Act the expression "British Settlement" means any British possession which has not been acquired by cession or conquest and is not, for the time being, within the jurisdiction of the Legislature of any British possession. The British claim to the lands and islands of the Antarctic between the meridians of 160 degrees east and 150 degrees west rests on discovery, not on cession or conquest, the territories being at the time of discovery, and now, wholly uninhabited, and never having been at any time inhabited, except for a few months by scientific expeditions. It would appear, therefore, that although never settled or likely to be settled, they fall within the definition of British settlement in the British Settlements Act, 1887, unless it can be held that uninhabited lands are excluded altogether from the operation of the Act.

If the Antarctic territories are thus British settlements it would appear that, as the provision in section 3 for the delegation of the powers of the Crown is obviously impossible of application, regulations for peace, order and good government can only be made by His Majesty in Council, and that the Governor-General of a Dominion cannot be empowered by Letters Patent to make such regulations.

In this connexion I am to refer to Reports by your predecessors in office, dated the 29th February, 1912, and the 22nd June, 1915 (paragraph 3),* resulting in the passing of the Pacific Islands Regulations (Validation) Act, 1916. Copies of these Reports are enclosed.

I am to ask that you will take this letter and its enclosures into consideration, and report:—

(1) Whether the uninhabited lands of the Antarctic which are claimed as British territory by virtue of British discovery are British settlements within the British Settlements Act, 1887.

(2) If the answer to the preceding question is in the affirmative, whether it is possible in respect of such uninhabited territory to confer on the Governor-General of New Zealand by Letters Patent or otherwise, the powers, including the power of legislation, proposed in the Draft Letters Patent ("C").

(3) If the answer to the second question is in the negative, whether any convenient method can be advised for transferring the government of such territories to the Government of the Dominion of New Zealand, other than procedure under the Colonial Boundaries Act, 1895; and

(4) Generally.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

* Law Officers' Opinions Series, Vol. viii., Nos. 155 and 184.

REPORT.

WE have taken the matter into our consideration, and in obedience to Your Grace's commands, have the honour to report:—

(1) In early days it was maintained that discovery of previously unknown territory in itself conferred an absolute title upon the State by whom the discovery was made. But in our opinion it is now well settled that this is not the law. Discovery offers an inchoate title which is perfected by occupation or by acts of ownership exercised over a long period and acquiesced in by other Powers. It follows in our opinion that it would be unwise to proceed by way of annexation in the Antarctic, and that the Government is right to assert existing British sovereignty in the region now in question. If this course be adopted, in our opinion it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the territories in question are "British possessions" which have not been acquired by cession or by conquest, and therefore that they are "British settlements" within the Act of 1887.

The answer to the first question, therefore, is in the affirmative.

(2) In our opinion it is possible to confer upon the Governor-General of New Zealand the powers proposed in the draft Letters Patent, but this can only be done by Order in Council and not by way of Letters Patent.

(3) If an Order in Council is made on the lines of the draft Letters Patent it does not, in our opinion, involve any alteration of the boundaries of the Dominion of New Zealand. In our opinion there is nothing unconstitutional in entrusting such powers as are conferred by the draft Letters Patent to the Governor-General of a British self-governing dominion without incorporating the territory for which the powers are to be exercised in that dominion, provided, of course, that the consent of the dominion Ministry is first obtained. It would, therefore, be unnecessary to proceed on the Colonial Boundaries Act of 1895. If the Order in Council were to be made in the form suggested, it might be possible at some later date to incorporate the Ross Dependency in the Dominion of New Zealand by subsequent Order in Council, and to procure the necessary resolutions from the Dominion Parliament assenting to such incorporation. The fact that the Ross Dependency had long been administered by the Governor-General of that Dominion would probably facilitate the passing of such resolutions.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

2. The delay in renewing this Convention is due to a request by the Danish Government that, although a Convention had been signed on 3rd May, 1921, two separate Conventions for Denmark and Iceland respectively should be substituted for that Convention before ratification.

3. The only difference in the text of these Conventions and that of the Convention signed on 3rd May, 1921, but not ratified, is that, apart from the separate mention of Iceland, the word "renew" has been substituted for the words "hereby undertake to renew" in Article I of each of the two Conventions. The Danish and Icelandic texts conform to this amendment.

4. The ratifications of these Conventions were exchanged with the Danish Minister on the 28th of July.

My LORD,

Downing Street, 23rd March, 1922.

WITH reference to my telegram of the 21st March,* on the subject of the ratification of the Arms Traffic Convention, Your Excellency's Ministers are aware that the difficulty in securing the ratification of this Convention has always been the doubt as to the attitude of the United States Government in the matter.

2. During the course of the Washington Conference, a suggestion was made by Sir A. Balfour to the United States Secretary of State for the adoption of a resolution which would place on record the intention of the Powers represented, to accept the provisions of the Convention, this declaration being accompanied by a reservation on the part of the United States, reserving its assent to any provisions of the Convention which require disputed questions to be submitted to the League of Nations. This suggested resolution was, however, never discussed, and no definite indication of the attitude of the United States Government was given.

3. The matter, therefore, remains as indicated in my telegram of the 5th September† last, i.e., His Majesty's Government are ready to ratify as soon as the other Principal Allied and Associated Powers are also prepared to do so, subject to safeguards being provided against the Convention being rendered nugatory by the action of non-signatory States. So far as His Majesty's Government are concerned, no further communication to the League of Nations is considered to be called for at present.

I have, &c.,

[My LORD,] [SIR,]

WITH reference to my despatches Dominions No. 256 of the 28th of June, 1921,* and Dominions No. 93 of the 22nd of March,† I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington forwarding a Memorandum from the United States Secretary of State intimating that the United States Government are unable to ratify the Arms Traffic Convention.

(Confidential.)

Mr. Chilton to the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston.—(Received 22nd August.)

(No. 933.)

My LORD,

Washington, 9th August, 1922.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch No. 730 of the 6th June, 1921,‡ relative to the application of the Arms Traffic Convention, I have the honour to transmit herewith copy of a memorandum addressed to me by the Secretary of State intimating that the United States Government feel themselves unable to ratify the Convention in question.

I have, &c.,

H. G. CHILTON.

Mr. Hughes to Mr. Chilton.

THE Secretary of State presents his compliments to the Chargé d'Affaires ad interim of Great Britain, and, referring to the desire expressed by the Embassy that this Government should ratify the Arms Traffic Convention signed at Saint-Germain, 10th September, 1919, begs to say that most careful study has been given the question, and that the Government of the United States is in cordial sympathy with efforts suitably to restrict traffic in arms and munitions of war.

As evidence of its interest in the matter, it may be recalled that by a joint resolution approved on the 22nd April, 1898, as amended on the 12th March, 1912, the following provision was made with respect to the regulation of the shipment of arms from the United States:—

"That whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export, except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe, any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress."

* No. 56 in Dominions No. 81. † Not printed: it enclosed correspondence dealing with the measures being taken by the Italian Government, pending the ratification of the Convention.

‡ Enclosure in No. 56 in Dominions No. 81.

By a resolution approved on the 31st January, 1922, this provision of law was extended so as to include any country in which the United States exercises extra-territorial jurisdiction.

After a careful examination of the terms of the Convention, it has been decided that the objections found thereto render impossible ratification by this Government.

While the application of the Convention to certain designated areas or zones, extending in effect the Brussels Convention, may fulfil a useful object, the plan of the present Convention is much broader. As has been pointed out, the distinctive feature of this plan is not a provision for a general limitation of armament, but the creation of a system of control by the signatory Powers of the traffic in arms and munitions, these signatory Powers being left free not only to meet their own requirements in the territories subject to their jurisdiction, but to provide for supplying each other with arms and munitions to the full extent that they may see fit.

There is particular objection to the provisions by which the contracting parties would be prohibited from selling arms and munitions to States not parties to the Convention. By such provisions this Government would be required to prevent shipments of military supplies to any of the following Latin-American countries (which it is understood have not signed or adhered to the Convention), viz., Argentina, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Honduras, Mexico, Paraguay, Uruguay and Salvador, however desirable it might be to permit such shipments, merely because they are not signatory Powers and might not desire to adhere to the Convention.

Finally, it may be observed that the provisions of the Convention relating to the League of Nations are so intertwined with the whole Convention as to make it impracticable for this Government to ratify, in view of the fact that it is not a member of the League of Nations.

Commercial Treaties affecting; Inquiry from Danish Government.

No. 48.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 266.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 28th July, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of a note from the Danish Minister relative to the position of the self-governing Dominions in respect of commercial treaties. I should be glad to receive the observations of your Ministers as to the terms of the reply to Count Ahlefeldt-Laurvig.

2. I may observe that as regards questions I. and II. in the Note, the position is that Columbia, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Mexico, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland agreed to the proposal of His Majesty's Government in 1911 respecting the right of the self-governing Dominions to withdraw from existing commercial treaties. The Commonwealth of Australia, including Papua and Norfolk Island, have taken advantage of the agreements, and have withdrawn from the commercial treaties with all the above-mentioned States, and the Union of South Africa has withdrawn from the Treaty with Mexico. Subject to the observations of your Ministers, His Majesty's Government would propose to explain on the above lines.

3. As regards question 3, it is proposed to reply that no foreign countries have, in virtue of these agreements, denounced their treaties with respect to any of the oversea Dominions.

4. It is presumed that question 4 refers only to obligations under commercial treaties, and the position would appear to be that the commercial treaties in force in respect of the Commonwealth of Australia are those with the Argentine Republic, 1825, Italy, 1883 (except as regards South Australia); Morocco, 1856, Peru, 1850, Venezuela, 1825, and Muscat, 1891 (renewable annually).

5. As regards question 5, it is proposed to say that no commercial treaties have recently been concluded affecting the relations of Australia with foreign countries. His Majesty's Government would be glad to know what reply the Commonwealth Government would wish to be made as regards commercial arrangements with other British Dominions.

I have, &c.,

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL.

Enclosure in No. 48.

(No. 160/64 D.1.)

MY LORD,

12th May, 1922.

You will be aware that after the denunciation by Australia in 1914 of the Anglo-Danish Treaties of 13th February, 1660-61, and 11th July, 1670, in conformity with the Copenhagen Protocol of 9th May, 1912, the Danish Government approached His Britannic Majesty's Government* with a view to the establishment of an arrangement for the regulation of the commercial intercourse between Denmark and Australia. In reply, Lord Grey of Falloden, in a note dated January, 1915, drew attention to the fact that neither the Danish nor the Australian laws made any discrimination between the goods of Treaty and non-Treaty countries, for which reason the Australian Government failed to perceive that any practical advantage would be derived from the proposed agreement. This state of things having now been altered by the Australian Customs Tariffs Act of 25th March, 1920, and 16th December, 1921, according to which different tariffs may be applied to goods of Treaty and non-Treaty countries, the Danish Treaty Commission desires to investigate whether an arrangement might be concluded between the Danish and Australian Governments for the purpose of securing to Danish goods the application of the Australian Intermediate Tariff.

As the Treaty Commission is at the same time inquiring into the general Treaty position of the British Dominions, I have the honour, in obedience to instructions, to request the favour of your Lordship's reply to the following questions:—

1. What countries have agreed to the proposal made by the British Government in 1911 concerning the withdrawal of the Dominions from the operation of treaties?

2. What Dominions have taken advantage of the stipulations of the agreements in question in order to effect their withdrawal, and in relation to which countries?

3. Have any foreign countries, and if so which, in virtue of the said agreements, denounced their treaties with respect to any of the Dominions?

4. Is the Commonwealth of Australia still bound by any ancient treaty obligations?

5. Have any commercial treaties lately been concluded between Australia and any foreign countries or British Dominions?

In submitting the above questions, I venture to ask your Lordship to be good enough to cause a few copies of the treaties referred to under section 5, should any such exist, to accompany your reply.

I have, &c.,

The Right Honourable

The Marquess Curzon of Kedleston,

WITH reference to your letters of the 12th July and of 1st December last* and Board of Trade letter of the 12th December last,† I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit herewith, to be laid before Mr. Secretary Churchill, a copy of further correspondence‡ with His Majesty's Minister at La Paz regarding the Convention between the United Kingdom and Bolivia for the prevention of false indications of origin on goods, signed at La Paz on 5th April, 1920.

2. Lord Curzon considers that, since the Convention contains no ratification clause, and therefore came into force from the date of signature, it will not be advisable to proceed with an exchange of notes defining its scope as contemplated in the previous instructions sent to Mr. O'Reilly. If no exchange of notes takes place, no question of the definition of the United Kingdom will arise.

3. Subject to Mr. Churchill's concurrence the Secretary of State proposes to instruct His Majesty's Minister at La Paz accordingly.

Proposed Commercial Treaty. Imposition of Duties under Safeguarding of Industries Act.

No. 54.

COLONIAL OFFICE to BOARD OF TRADE.

(Extract.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 11th August, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to request you to inform the Board of Trade that he has had under consideration your letter of the 21st June,§ regarding a proposed Commercial Treaty with Czecho-Slovakia.

* No. 52. † The letter from the Board of Trade expressed concurrence in the proposal in No. 51.

‡ Nos. 51 and 52. § 29905: not printed; it enclosed a draft Commercial Treaty of which Articles 3, 9 and 10 are printed as annexures.

2. It is observed that Article 3 of the draft Treaty provides that His Majesty's Government may make an Order under Section 3 (1) (b) of the Safeguarding of Industries Act in respect of Czecho-Slovak goods, but that three months' notice of their intention shall be given, and that it shall be open to the Czecho-Slovak Government to terminate the Treaty on the date when the Order takes effect. As the Board of Trade are aware from other correspondence (e.g., that as to the agreement with Latvia regarding the estates of deceased seamen), Mr. Churchill deprecates the insertion in a Commercial Treaty to which the self-governing Dominions and the Colonies may adhere, of provisions applicable on the British side only to the United Kingdom, and in the present instance the proposed stipulations give rise to two difficulties:—

(1) If the Government of any Dominion or Colony which had acceded to the Treaty desired to take action in respect of Czecho-Slovak goods precisely similar to that contemplated by the Safeguarding of Industries Act, it would be unable to do so on the same terms as His Majesty's Government (i.e., by giving three months' notice and leaving the Czecho-Slovak Government to terminate the Treaty if they wished), but would be compelled to give twelve months' notice of withdrawal under Article 10.

(2) If His Majesty's Government made an Order under the Act and the Czecho-Slovak Government terminated the Treaty in consequence, this termination would presumably, under the terms of the Article as now worded, apply, not only to the United Kingdom but also to any Dominions and Colonies which had acceded, and this would be the result, not of any action taken by the Dominion and Colonial Governments concerned, but solely of action taken by His Majesty's Government in respect of the United Kingdom.

3. Mr. Churchill would, therefore, urge that, if possible, Article 3 should be replaced by an Article in general terms, which would be applicable to any Dominion or Colony acceding to the Treaty, and he would suggest some such form of words as the following, which has been adapted from the draft Commercial Treaty with Latvia:—

"Nothing in this Treaty shall be held to prohibit the imposition in His Britannic Majesty's territories of special rates of customs duty on specified articles of Czecho-Slovak origin, other or higher than those levied on similar articles the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country, in cases where such special rates of customs duty are levied in pursuance of legislation of general application enabling the imposition of such duties on articles the produce or manufacture of any country, where such articles are being sold or offered for sale in the part of His Britannic Majesty's territories concerned at prices which by reason of depreciation in the value in relation to sterling of the currency of the country in which the articles are produced or manufactured, are below the prices at which similar articles can be profitably produced or manufactured in the part of His Britannic Majesty's territories concerned, and that by reason thereof employment in that part of His Britannic Majesty's territories is being or is likely to be seriously affected.

Nevertheless, no such special rates of customs duty shall be imposed on goods manufactured in Czecho-Slovakia, until the expiration of three months from the date on which the Czecho-Slovak Government have been notified of the intention of the Government of the part of His Britannic Majesty's territories concerned to impose such duty. In the event of such notice being given this Convention shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article 10, at the request of the Czecho-Slovak Government cease to have effect as between Czecho-Slovakia and such part of His Britannic Majesty's territories from the date on which the Czecho-Slovak goods in question become liable to the special duty referred to."

4. If this amendment is proposed to the Czecho-Slovak Government, Mr. Churchill would be glad if it can be made clear to them that it is designed to facilitate the accession of the Dominions and Colonies to the Treaty.

5. I am also to suggest that it would be well to explain to the Czecho-Slovak Government at some stage before the negotiations are completed:—

(a) That the Irish Free State, after its establishment, will be deemed to be included in the expression "self-governing Dominions" (see paragraph 6 (f) below).

(b) That it is desired that it should be open to the Irish Free State to accede at any time within one year from the date of its establishment in the event of its being established after the ratification of the Treaty.

7. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Foreign Office.

I am, &c.,

E. J. HARDING.

REVISED DRAFT TREATY BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.
(Extracts.)

Article III.

Notwithstanding the provisions of this Treaty His Majesty's Government shall be entitled to make an Order under Section 2, subsection 1, paragraph (b) of the Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921, applying to goods of any class or description manufactured in Czecho-Slovakia the special Customs duty provided for in Part II of the Act on the ground that such goods are being sold or offered for sale in the United Kingdom at prices which, by reason of depreciation in relation to sterling of the currency of Czecho-Slovakia, are below the prices at which similar goods can be profitably manufactured in the United Kingdom, and that by reason thereof employment in any industry in the United Kingdom is being or is likely to be seriously affected.

His Majesty's Government, nevertheless, undertake that no such Order shall be made against goods manufactured in Czecho-Slovakia, until the expiration of three months from the date on which they have notified to the Czecho-Slovak Government their intention to make it. In the event of such notice being given this Convention shall, notwithstanding the provisions of Article X at the request of the Czecho-Slovak Government cease to have effect from the date on which the Czecho-Slovak goods in question become liable to the special duty above referred to.

Article IX.

The stipulations of the present Treaty shall not be applicable to India or to any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates unless notice of accession shall have been made on behalf of India or of any such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate by His Britannic Majesty's Representative at Prague before the expiration of one year from the date of the exchange of ratifications of the present Treaty. Nevertheless, the produce of the soil or industry of India or of any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates shall enjoy in Czecho-Slovakia complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment (subject to the reserve contained in Article IV) so long as India or such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate shall accord to the produce of the soil or industry of Czecho-Slovakia treatment as favourable as that accorded to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country.

Article X.

The present Treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications shall be exchanged at London as soon as possible. It shall come into force immediately upon ratification and shall remain in force for five years from that date. In case neither of the Contracting Parties shall have given notice to the other twelve months before the expiration of the said period of five years of the intention to terminate the present Treaty, it shall remain in force until the expiration of one year from the date on which either of the Contracting Parties shall have given such notice.

As regards India and the British Dominions, Colonies, Possessions and Protectorates which may have acceded to the present Treaty in virtue of the provisions of Article IX either of the Contracting Parties shall have the right to terminate it separately at any time upon giving 12 months' notice to that effect.

3. As regards the proposal of the Colonial Office that collapsed exchange duties should be dealt with generally in an Article which would be applicable to any part of the Empire which adhered to the Treaty, I am to point out that the acceptance of Article 3 of the draft Treaty by the Czecho-Slovak Government would, in the Board's view, rest upon the fact that the Article relates to a specified Act of Parliament, with the terms of which that Government is familiar, and on the reasonable assumption that there is very little likelihood of an Order being made under Section 2 (1) (b) of the Act in respect of Czecho-Slovakia. If general words are substituted for the specific reference to the Act, the Czecho-Slovak Government may well feel some doubt as to what the future may hold, even in the case of the United Kingdom, while as regards other parts of the Empire their fears may make the Treaty quite unacceptable if a general provision of this character is included. The obligation on His Majesty's Government to give three months' notice of the application of collapsed exchange duties to Czecho-Slovak goods and the right of the Czecho-Slovak Government to regard the Treaty as terminated in that event, if they so desire, may possibly make even a clause in general terms acceptable, and the Board accordingly do not desire strongly to oppose the suggestion that such a clause should be put forward. They are anxious, however, that a Treaty regulating the commercial relations of the United Kingdom with Czecho-Slovakia should be concluded and that the negotiations should not be unduly prolonged. Accordingly they would suggest, for the consideration of the Secretary of State, that the proposal should be put forward to the Czecho-Slovak Government in the most tentative manner. In this connexion the Board do not desire to suggest any amendment in the wording of the clause as set out in paragraph 3 of the Colonial Office letter under reference.

No further communication on the subject had been received in the Colonial Office up to the end of 1922.

(Union of South Africa.)

FOLLOWING from Prime Minister to your Prime Minister:—

Begins: I am happy to inform you that His Majesty's Government have now decided, in complete agreement with Lord Allenby, upon a declaration to Egypt which terminates the Protectorate while fully preserving the status quo with regard to the special interests of the British Empire in Egypt. This declaration has been framed in close accordance with the views expressed at the Imperial Conference and carries out the principles there laid down.

The terms of settlement offered by His Majesty's Government in November, together with the documents published in December, were communicated to you at the time. In consequence of the failure of the negotiations the Ministry resigned, and minor disturbances took place in several towns which were easily suppressed. There have been some political murders, and attempts were made to organize a commercial boycott and a general strike of Government servants, but with little success. Just after Christmas Zaghloul Pasha, the leader of the Nationalist agitation, having declined to refrain from further political activity, was exiled under Martial Law with his five principal lieutenants. They are now en route to Seychelles.

Meanwhile, negotiations were pursued by Lord Allenby with a view to the formation of a Ministry, and in January he submitted proposals with that object to this Government. The gist of these was that Great Britain should immediately terminate the Protectorate and recognize Egypt as an independent Sovereign State, reserving for future discussion and agreement the measures necessary to protect the special interests of the British Empire in Egypt. We regarded these proposals as inadmissible, since the form of reservation proposed appeared to us inadequate as a guarantee for our special interests which would rest on no juridical basis when Protectorate was terminated, and would therefore depend only on such agreements as Egyptian Ministers might in future be prepared to negotiate. We accordingly suggested an alternative procedure under which we would declare our readiness to recommend the termination of the Protectorate to Parliament as soon as Egyptian Ministers had concluded agreements with us sufficiently safeguarding British interests. Lord Allenby declared that this proposal would be inconsistent with his own undertakings to Egyptian statesmen, and that he could not hold out any hope of securing an Egyptian Ministry to take office upon it. We thereupon asked him to come home for consultation, which has led to very satisfactory results.

As all recent negotiations have been without results it has been decided to proceed to the termination of the Protectorate on the basis of a unilateral Declaration which is telegraphed to you herewith.* This pronouncement, while recognizing Egypt as an independent Sovereign State, lays down the position which we claim in Egypt vis-à-vis all other Powers, and enumerates the matters in which the maintenance of our special position is vital to Imperial security. In all these matters the status quo is maintained, but we declare our willingness to negotiate specific agreements upon them with the Egyptian Government at some later date when they desire it and circumstances promise success. In the meantime the Egyptians will be free to develop national institutions in accordance with their aspirations.

* Not printed here. The Declaration is printed on pp. 29 and 30 of [Cmd. 1592].

In communicating the substance of this Declaration to foreign Powers we propose to announce that the termination of the British Protectorate over Egypt involves no change in the status quo as regards the position of other Powers in Egypt. We propose to declare that the welfare and integrity of Egypt are necessary to the peace and safety of the British Empire which will therefore always maintain as an essential British interest the special relations between itself and Egypt, long recognized by other Governments. In calling attention to these special relations as defined in the Declaration recognizing Egypt's independence, we propose to declare that we will not admit them to be questioned or discussed by any other Power; that we will regard as an unfriendly act any attempt at interference in the affairs of Egypt by another Power; and that we will consider any aggression against the territory of Egypt as an act to be repelled with all the means at our command.

The Declaration is to be handed to the Sultan by Lord Allenby on 28th February. It will be presented to Parliament here the same afternoon. Text follows in separate telegram. D. Lloyd George. Ends.

(No. 504.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 28th August, 1922.

THE attention of His Majesty's Government has recently been directed to the necessity of providing treaty arrangements for the reciprocal surrender of fugitive criminals between this country and [Bulgaria,] [Czecho-Slovakia,] [Esthonia,] [Poland,] They entertain no doubt that the Government of that country will agree with them that the conclusion of such treaty arrangements at an early date would be expedient in the interests of both countries, in order that the requirements of justice may be duly provided for, and they would suggest that negotiations might be opened immediately.

2. I accordingly transmit to you herewith copies of a draft treaty which has been prepared on the model of extradition treaties formerly concluded between Great Britain and a large number of foreign countries. I shall be glad if you will communicate this draft treaty to the [Bulgarian] [Czecho-Slovak] [Esthonian] [Polish] Government for their early consideration, and will state that in the event of their acceptance of the draft, His Majesty's Government will be happy to proceed to the conclusion of a treaty on this basis for regulating the extradition of fugitive offenders between the two countries.

3. It may be necessary to add subsequently a provision in Article 17 of the draft extradition treaty defining the position of Ireland after the constitution of the Irish Free State; and you should explain this to the Government to which you are accredited in making this communication.

WITH reference to Mr. Robertson's despatch, No. 7 Treaty of 7th March, 1914, relative to former negotiations with the Brazilian Government for the conclusion of an extradition treaty between Great Britain and Brazil, to replace that denounced by the Brazilian Government in 1913, I transmit to Your Excellency herewith a copy of a letter from the Home Office† suggesting the resumption of those negotiations and the submission to the Brazilian Government of a draft treaty in the form enclosed herewith. 2. I shall be glad if Your Excellency will accordingly approach the Brazilian Government, and submit for their early consideration copies of the draft treaty, adding that, should it meet with their acceptance, His Majesty's Government will be pleased to proceed to the conclusion of the treaty.

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W.1, 29th August, 1922.

On the 2nd September, 1920, I had the honour to transmit to you copies of a draft extradition treaty, for the consideration of the Government of Finland, with a view to the conclusion of a treaty arrangement to regulate the surrender of fugitive criminals between Great Britain and the Republic of Finland.

2. It appears to His Majesty's Government that it would be very desirable to bring to a conclusion at as early a date as possible, the negotiations for the proposed treaty, and I should be glad if you would be so good as to inform me whether the Government of Finland have yet been able to give their consideration to the matter. At the same time I take the opportunity to transmit to you prints of the draft treaty which has, in the meantime, been amended in certain particulars so as to give fuller and more definite scope to the proposed arrangement. I have the honour to request that in communicating these prints to your Government you will inquire whether the draft now submitted meets with their approval, and to add that in this event I shall be happy to take the necessary steps with you for the signature and completion of the treaty in due form.

3. It may be necessary subsequently to include in Article 17 of the draft a provision defining the position of Ireland after the constitution of the Irish Free State, but any such adjustments of the text can be made on my learning from you that the Government of Finland approve it in other respects.

SIR,

Downing Street, 10th February, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th November,* relative to the contemplated exchange of notes to regulate temporarily commercial relations between the United Kingdom and Finland.

2. In view of the stipulations included in the contemplated agreement with regard to the application of the Safeguarding of Industries Act, it would be difficult in any case to frame for insertion in the agreement provisions for its eventual extension, if so desired, to the Dominions and Colonies. The altered circumstances as regards Ireland render it necessary, however, to consider whether the contemplated agreement should apply even to the whole of the United Kingdom. Mr. Churchill is of opinion that His Majesty's Government should not of their own motion include Southern Ireland in any commercial agreement under negotiation with a foreign country now that there has come into existence in Southern Ireland an authoritative body responsible for the government of Southern Ireland. He is further of the opinion that this course should be followed also in respect of Northern Ireland, until Northern Ireland has declared under the provisions of the Irish Treaty whether or not she will form part of the Irish Free State.

3. Mr. Churchill would accordingly urge that steps should be taken to confine the scope of the contemplated agreement with Finland to Great Britain, and in the circumstances he would not propose that any action should be taken at present with a view to its eventual extension to other parts of the Empire.

4. A copy of this letter has been sent to the Board of Trade.

DRAFT AGREEMENT.

His Britannic Majesty's Government and the Finnish Government have agreed as follows:—

The Finnish Government, in view of the fact that the existing laws and regulations of Great Britain in regard to measurement of tonnage of merchant ships are in substantial agreement with those of Finland, hereby signify their readiness that they will deem the British ships, whose certificates of registry and other national papers duly issued by the competent British authorities are dated on or after the 1st January, 1895, to be of the tonnage denoted in the said documents and exempt such ships from being remeasured in any port or place within the Finnish territory, or in localities under the control of Finland, on condition that His Britannic Majesty's Government will engage that similar treatment shall be accorded to ships which have their ports of registry either in the territories of Finland, or in other localities under the control of Finland, and which are equipped with certificates of registry or other national papers duly issued by the competent Finnish authorities on or after the 2nd January, 1921, and that such ships shall be exempted from being remeasured in any place within His Britannic Majesty's Dominions or under His Britannic Majesty's protection or control.

Either of the contracting Governments may, on giving to the other twelve months' notice to that effect, terminate this agreement either as a whole or separately in respect of any of the following parts of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, viz., the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, Newfoundland, and His Majesty's Indian Empire.

In the event of the agreement being terminated in respect of any such part of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, the agreement shall cease to apply to British ships registered therein.

The subject was discussed at the Cannes Conference but negotiations were suspended owing to the fall of M. Briand, and the subsequent negotiations with M. FOLLOWING from Mr. Lloyd George for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Negotiations regarding the Anglo-French Treaty are suspended temporarily owing to the fall of the Briand Government in France. On my way home from Cannes I saw Poincaré in Paris, and told him that the change of government in France did not, of course, affect British policy in regard to treaty and other matters discussed at Cannes. Poincaré explained that as his government was not yet formed he could only state his views personally and provisionally. He then proceeded strongly to press for reinforcement of the treaty by a military convention binding us as to the forces that should be maintained in peace. This, I said, would be entirely against spirit of British policy, and also against public opinion both in Britain and Dominions. Should German disarmament prove illusory, such a convention might be desirable, but there was no ground for it in facts or even potentialities of the present situation. France could rely on Britain's promise to stand by her in case of direct and unprovoked invasion by Germany. If Britain's word seemed insufficient to her, further discussion would be unprofitable, and draft treaty would be withdrawn. Poincaré said that as soon as his Cabinet had had time to consider the matter he would communicate with us. He also stated that the limitation of the treaty to ten years might be inconvenient, and I promised to consider any representations he might make on that point. Possibly he is too far committed to Chauvinists by his recent speeches and articles to be able to modify attitude which he adopted in interview, but whole political situation in France is uncertain. It is our intention to adhere to the principles of policy set out in the memorandum* handed last week to Briand; this was based on discussions at the recent Imperial Conference. Secretary of State is sending by mail texts of this and similar memorandum† presented to Italy, and of draft Franco-British Treaty.‡

Begins: I wish to thank you for your message regarding the political position in France, and its bearing on the negotiations for an Anglo-French Treaty which have been in progress. (Paraphrase.)

28TH JANUARY. My Prime Minister asks me to transmit the following personal message for Mr. Lloyd George:—

Begins: I think it right and proper to inform you of the views which I and my colleagues take of the proposed Anglo-Belgian* and Anglo-French treaties, of which we have received the drafts. We heartily approve your statesmanlike efforts towards the financial and economic reconstruction of Europe, and the general reduction of military burdens on peoples. But both from the point of view of the British Empire and of the general interests of the world we consider the price too great if French support for your plans could be secured only by means of a prolonged military alliance. This raises a fundamental issue for the Empire which may vitally affect its future. The position so far as South Africa is concerned remains the same as that explained by my predecessor in his correspondence with you at Paris. There is no prospect of the treaties being ratified by the Union Parliament, and we do not propose to submit them for the purpose. But a grave situation may arise if some States of the Empire are bound to action, while others are free in a far-reaching military alliance of this description. Under such circumstances, were a European war to break out during the next ten years, the alliance might mean the dissolution of the British Empire. In our opinion it is only at an Imperial Conference, where the whole subject is thoroughly considered, that a departure in policy which may carry such consequences should be decided on.

By exceptional good fortune, the British Empire has just escaped from the Japanese Alliance; the proposal now is that we should enter into another alliance which may in future become even more embarrassing. The case for this proposed Anglo-French treaty is really not as good as that for the earlier treaty with France, under which the United States of America was to be our partner; in the case of that treaty the League of Nations could limit its duration. At that time the disarmament of Germany was not yet complete, and France had not yet stood forth as the great military power in Europe. Now, when France does not require the guarantee against the aggression of Germany and looks upon it as an insult, the treaty is to be renewed, and French Government definitely propose that it shall have the form of a prolonged reciprocal military alliance, pure and simple, between France and Great Britain against Germany.

I need not point out that such a military alliance would be a plain denial of the new spirit among nations, would be a reversion to those evil practices by which the Great War was brought about, and would become a precedent for alliances of a similar nature among other nations. Thus the British Empire would have put itself into the invidious position of having led the reaction, when, from its professed ideals and great position, it should have assumed moral leadership among the nations. It is possible that the economic reconstruction of Europe may not materialise; in that case the only tangible result may be our alliance with a state whose present reactionary policy fills with alarm both Europe and America, and creates special danger for the British Empire. It is with the utmost reluctance that we have come to the conclusion that before a final decision is reached we ought to make the position of South Africa clear, in view of the fact that the New Zealand Government has notified you of her cordial approval of both treaties, and that silence on our part might be misunderstood. Ends.

13TH DECEMBER. Secret. Your Secret telegram 11th December.* Following from my Prime Minister for Prime Minister.

Begins: Secretary of State for the Colonies has sent me message regarding the results of the London Reparations Conference. I sincerely trust that the French coercive proposals and further occupation of Germany will not be agreed to by British Government. Unwise policy of France in the Near East has already lost us fruits of the Great War in that region, and done grave damage to British prestige.

Poincaré seems bent on pursuing even more fatal policy as regards Germany. If this policy is persevered in the British Empire should be clearly and unequivocally dissociated from it, as ruin it will cause will not be confined to Central Europe. Lausanne Conference seems already to be leading to rehabilitation of Turkey, which must be severe threat to British interests. And if France succeeds in addition in dragging the British Empire into Central European catastrophe, results for us too will be most disastrous. In the summer of last year when similar drastic action over Upper Silesia question was threatened by France, Imperial Conference, which was then sitting, passed unanimous resolutions warning France of attitude of united British Empire. This was communicated to the French Ambassador by Lord Curzon, and immediately had great effect. If the position at adjourned Conference becomes desperate I suggest that similar united warning in name of the whole Empire should be made to France and should be followed if necessary by open dissociation from France. I would make this further suggestion that, while France threatens further occupation of Germany, practically tearing up Peace Treaty, no concession should be made her in respect of her War loan liability. War debts of Allies to Great Britain should be used as weapon to secure policy of real appeasement in Europe, and should only be forgone for that purpose and in that event. That reparation sum must be reduced to reasonable amount and moratorium granted against stabilization of mark is now generally admitted.

If Allies at Paris Conference cannot agree on details, question should be remitted to Council of League or other impartial authority. It might be even politic for us to suggest President of the United States as arbitrator. Any remission of War debts which the British Government might be disposed to make should be conditional on France desisting from isolated coercive measures and agreeing with Allies to a policy of appeasement. Public opinion will universally approve policy of this sort. Only chaos and ruin, from which none will escape, least of all France, will be produced by Poincaré's policy. Ends.

SECRET. Following for General Smuts from Prime Minister.

Begins: Many thanks for your telegram of 13th December.* You will see from the Press summary of my speech last week in the House of Commons on the Reparations Conference, which I hope you have seen and had time to read, that British Government's view on many of the points you raise coincides with your own. I am not hopeful of the result of the Conference which it is proposed to hold in Paris on the 2nd January, and, indeed, to me the only chance of success appears to depend on American intervention, and that is very unlikely.

I will certainly take into consideration your suggestion regarding a declaration in the name of all Dominions as well as of Great Britain. When the Conference of Prime Ministers was sitting this was easy; but when explanations had to be made by cable, probably without a long interval being available, such a declaration would, I fear, be difficult to arrange. Ends.

(2) Commercial Convention of 1882.

No. 77.

COLONIAL OFFICE to BOARD OF TRADE.

[Answered by No. 78.]

(Extract.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 17th February, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th November, 1921,† regarding the application to the Dominions and Colonies of each party of the Convention of 1882 between the United Kingdom and France, and to express his regret that it has not been found possible to furnish a reply at an earlier date.

2. The title of the 1882 Convention is "Convention between Great Britain and France to regulate the . . . relations between the two countries," and the preamble is similarly worded. In the 1903 "Return of most-favoured-nation clauses in existing Treaties of Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and Foreign Powers"[Cd. 1807], no suggestion is made that the Convention is applicable, on the British side, except in respect of the United Kingdom: on the contrary, the footnote on page 13 of the Return makes it clear that Article I, paragraph 2, of the Convention was not construed as referring to the Colonies. Further, when the measures to carry out Resolution XIX of the Imperial Conference of 1911 were under consideration, the Convention was not included in the "List of Treaties binding on the Dominions" supplied in the letter from the Foreign Office of the 18th July, 1911,‡ which, it is understood, was prepared, in consultation with the Board of Trade. Lastly, it is clear from the First Report (page 2) and the Third Report (page 5) on Commercial Treaties, drawn up by Mr. G. J. Stanley, C.B., C.M.G., in 1917 and 1918, that he also took the view that the application of the 1882 Convention was limited, on the British side, to the United Kingdom.

3. On the other hand, it is to be presumed, in accordance with the opinions given by the Law Officers of the Crown in 1899 and 1911,§ that the benefits of Article X extend, so far as France and Algeria are concerned, to all British subjects.

* No. 75.

† No. 99 in Dominions No. 81. ‡ No. 212 in Dominions No. 39. § Nos. 206A and 232A in Vol. V., and No. 137 in Vol. VII. of Law Officers' Opinions.

The position in this respect was explained to the Dominions and Colonies in Mr. Chamberlain's Circular despatch of the 2nd December, 1899,* of which a copy is enclosed, and the same point has arisen on various occasions since that date: it was, for instance, referred to in Lord Milner's Confidential telegram of the 16th December, 1920,† regarding the Agreement with Germany as to restitution of property under Article 297 of the Treaty of Versailles: a copy of this telegram is enclosed.

4. Under this view of the position, no question of inequality as between the two parties, whether substantial or formal, arises on the present occasion, as French citizens connected with the French Colonies obtain the same privileges in the United Kingdom as British subjects connected with the Dominions and Colonies obtain in France. The position is, in fact, the same as under the recent agreement for waiving visas on passports of British subjects and French citizens travelling to France and the United Kingdom, respectively, a feature of which is that it applies irrespective of the part of the world from which the traveller comes.

5. As regards the denunciation of the Convention by the French Government, Mr. Churchill has no objection to Mr. Piesse being informed of the position as proposed in your letter.

 SIR, 35, Old Queen Street, London, S.W.1, 31st March, 1922.
 I AM directed by the Board of Trade to enclose, for your information, copy of a letter* from His Majesty's Consul at Nouméa (New Caledonia) in which he forwards an inquiry by Mr. E. L. Piesse, of the Prime Minister's Department at Melbourne, regarding the Convention of 1882 between this country and France.

2. The matter has been very carefully considered by the Board of Trade in consultation with the Colonial Office, and the following conclusion has been come to, which I am to request you to communicate to Mr. Piesse.

3. His Majesty's Government have never regarded, and do not now regard, this Convention or any of its provisions as applying to the Oversea Dominions and Colonies. The Convention is defined in the preamble as "A Convention to regulate the commercial and maritime relations of the two countries, as well as the status of their subjects," and it is the opinion of His Majesty's Government that the word "Dominions" in Article X must be construed by reference to the remaining provisions of the Convention: that is to say, it cannot be held to apply to the Oversea Dominions. So far as Australia is concerned, the point does not appear to be one of any practical importance, since Australia has adhered to the International Convention for the protection of industrial property signed in Paris in 1883.

4. It is, of course, understood that the benefits of Article X would be enjoyed in France and Algeria by all British subjects, no matter in what part of the Empire they reside, and that, conversely, all French citizens, whether residing in France itself or in any of the French overseas possessions, would enjoy the benefits of Article X in the United Kingdom.

5. The Convention has been denounced by the French Government, and is now terminable on three months' final notice being given by either party.

I am, &c.,

R. W. MATTHEW,
 For the Comptroller General.

 Melbourne.

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd September, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 10th of April,† and previous correspondence relative to the question whether the Anglo-French Convention of 1882 is in force in the Dominions and Colonies, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to transmit to you, to be laid before the Board of Trade, a copy of a letter from the Foreign Office, dated the 10th of June, 1918, advising that it is clear from the correspondence relating to the negotiation of the Convention that it was not intended that its provisions should apply to the Colonies of either party.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

Enclosure in No. 80.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 10th June, 1918.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Balfour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd ultimo, in which, in connexion with the claim of the French Vice-Consul in Trinidad for exemption from payment of the local War Contribution Tax, you inquire whether Article XI of the Anglo-French Convention of 28th February, 1882, can be considered to be in force in that Colony.

I am to state for the information of Mr. Secretary Long that the correspondence relating to the negotiation of the Convention has been examined, and that it appears clear that the stipulations of the Convention are not intended to apply generally to the Colonies of either of the contracting parties. It further appears that in the draft submitted by His Majesty's Government, an Article was inserted to make the Convention applicable to Colonies, but was rejected altogether by the French Government.

Article XI of the Convention was included in the British draft, as its provisions appeared to be necessary in order to secure complete personal most-favoured-nation treatment for subjects. In the case of a British Colonial subject in France, its benefits could be claimed for him as a British subject eo nomine, but it is not thought that His Majesty's Government could claim those benefits on behalf of a British subject in a French Colony, to which the stipulations of the Convention do not apply.

Mr. Balfour is of opinion therefore that Article XI of the Convention is not in force in Trinidad.

I am, &c.,

W. LANGLEY.

MR. W. S. FIELDING (MINISTER OF FINANCE, CANADA) TO THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

MY LORD DUKE, Claridge's Hotel, Paris, 30th October, 1922.
 I AM in Paris for the purpose of continuing negotiations begun with our Government by the French Consul-General at Montreal several months ago, with a view to better commercial relations between France and Canada. Before coming to Paris I called at the Colonial Office and explained my mission to the officials of the Department, who kindly agreed to ask for me the co-operation of the Foreign Office. Since my arrival in Paris I have seen His Majesty's Ambassador, Lord Hardinge, and have explained the situation to him.

I am now in a position to state that there is every probability that my negotiations with the French Government will reach a satisfactory conclusion. As it is desirable that the agreement which may be made shall take the form of a treaty, I have the honour to ask that the necessary authority for the negotiation of a treaty be issued through the Foreign Office.

In the year 1907 I was entrusted by our Government at Ottawa, along with another Canadian Minister, with a similar mission, and a treaty was then made with France. His Majesty was advised to issue authority to my Canadian colleague and myself for the negotiation of the treaty, and we were associated for the purpose with His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris of that day, the late Lord Bertie. My recollection is that no special commission was deemed necessary in the case of the Ambassador, as his general powers covered all needed authority, but a special commission was issued to my Canadian colleague and myself. I assume that the procedure now will be substantially the same. I shall be glad if the good services of the Colonial Office and Foreign Office can now be given in a similar way.

The authority desired is to myself, as Minister of Finance, and to my colleague, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Mr. Lapointe is at present in Geneva, attending the International Labour Conference, but will probably be here in time to sign the treaty.

I hope that the communications that I have already had with the Colonial Office will be deemed sufficient for the purpose. If, however, there is any matter in which either the Colonial or Foreign Office desires further information on the subject, I shall, on receipt, of a telegram, proceed to London immediately.

I have, &c.,
 W. S. FIELDING.

S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, Canada, regarding the negotiations now in progress with the French Government for the conclusion of a commercial agreement.

2. The Secretary of State would be glad if arrangements could be made to prepare as soon as possible and send to His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris, Full Powers enabling Mr. Fielding, and his colleague, Mr. Lapointe, to sign any treaty or convention arising out of the present negotiations.

It will be noted that Mr. Fielding desires that His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris should be associated with the Canadian representatives in the signature of the Treaty. The Duke of Devonshire assumes that the Full Power already in possession of His Majesty's Ambassador is sufficient for this purpose.

3. The full style and title of the two Canadian Ministers are:—

2. The Rules governing this subject were published in the Union Government Gazette of the 14th March, 1911, under Government Notice No. 447, and 5th December, 1911, under Government Notice No. 1948, copies of which are hereto attached for the information of His Royal Highness.

3. It will be seen that there is no necessity to notify the extension of the Convention to the Union in order to give judicial aid at the request of the French Courts, and Ministers would be glad to know whether in France reciprocal privileges are granted in respect of Letters of Request from the Union. If the Convention represents the only method by which litigants in the Union can enjoy reciprocal advantages in France, it would be desirable to accept the Convention on behalf of the Union Government, it being made clear that a notification to that effect will not necessitate the repeal or amendment of the existing Supreme Court Rules, under which the authorities of the Union could continue to act.

4. As regards the extension of the Convention to the Mandated Territory of South-West Africa, Ministers beg to state that the Rules of Court framed for the conduct of the proceedings of the High Court of South-West Africa contain provisions similar to those mentioned above, and copies of Government Notice No. 6, published in the South-West Africa Gazette of the 20th January, 1920, are also hereto attached for the information of His Royal Highness. If a formal notification is necessary to secure reciprocal advantages in France, it would be advisable therefor to extend the Convention also to South-West Africa.

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 6th October, 1922.

WITH reference to your despatch, Dominions No. 254, of the 25th July,* I have the honour to inform you that my Ministers advise me that the Government of New Zealand do not desire that the Convention with France respecting legal proceedings in civil and commercial matters should be extended, at present, to New Zealand, or to the Mandated Territory of Western Samoa.

[Answered by No. 93.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 2nd March, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 17th December last† regarding the ratification by His Majesty The King of the Conventions relating to Freedom of Transit and Waterways and the Additional Protocol to the latter Convention agreed upon at Barcelona in March and April, 1921, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to state, for the information of Mr. Secretary Churchill, that certified copies of the Instruments approved by the Barcelona Conference have now been received through the Cabinet Offices.

2. I am to transmit a revised draft of the preamble and conclusion to the Instrument of Ratification, in which the words "or any territory under their authority" have been added after "... South Africa," in accordance with the suggestion contained in paragraph 5 (a) of your letter under reply.

3. With regard to the first sentence of paragraph 4 and paragraph 5 (b) of your Department's letter of the 17th December,* His Majesty's ratification, as drafted, already includes the ratification of the two Conventions and of the Additional Protocol to the Waterways Convention, accepting paragraph (a), on behalf of New Zealand and the ratification of the two Conventions only on behalf of the colonies not possessing responsible government and protectorates. The original signature on behalf of New Zealand is sufficient to bring that Dominion undoubtedly within the terms of the Instrument of Ratification, the other overseas Dominions not signatory to the Conventions being expressly excluded from His Majesty's ratification. Similarly Sir H. Llewellyn Smith's signature of the two Conventions covers the colonies and protectorates. The Colony of Newfoundland, which is not a member of the League of Nations, is, however, in an exceptional position, in view of the express statement made by Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith at the Barcelona Conference on the 19th April, 1921; and for this reason a special Declaration that the ratification "shall be deemed to apply" to the colony has been inserted in the text of the revised draft.

4. In these circumstances I am to invite Mr. Churchill's concurrence in the draft Instrument of Ratification and the draft Declarations now enclosed, which have been carefully prepared to meet the requirements of individual members of the British Empire as well as those of the Empire as a whole; and I am to ask the favour of an early reply, in order that these Instruments may be sent as soon as possible to the Offices of the Cabinet, for deposit with the Secretariat of the League of Nations.

I am, &c.,

G. H. VILLIERS.

GEORGE, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, etc., etc., etc. To all and singular to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

(Inseratur—in 2 texts—English and French.)

We, having seen and considered the Conventions, Statutes and Protocol aforesaid, have approved, accepted and confirmed the same in all and every one of their Articles and Clauses, as We do by these Presents approve, accept, confirm and ratify them for Ourselves, Our Heirs and Successors; engaging and promising upon Our Royal Word that we will sincerely and faithfully perform and observe all and singular the things which are contained and expressed in the Conventions, Statutes and Protocol aforesaid, and that We will never suffer the same to be violated by any one, or transgressed in any manner, as far as it lies in Our power. Provided, however, that this Our Ratification of the said Conventions, Statutes and Protocol shall not be deemed to apply in respect of Our Dominion of Canada, Our Commonwealth of Australia or Our Union of South Africa, or any territory under their authority, but shall be deemed to apply to Our Colony of Newfoundland. For the greater testimony and validity of all which, We have caused Our Great Seal to be affixed to these Presents, which We have signed with Our Royal Hand.

No. 93.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 94.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th March, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2nd March* with regard to the ratification of the Conventions relating to Freedom of Transit and Navigable Waterways and the Additional Protocol to the latter Convention agreed upon at Barcelona in March and April, 1921.

2. In the circumstances Mr. Churchill will not press the suggestion made in paragraph 5 (b) of the letter from this Department of the 17th December, 1921,† that the position as to New Zealand should be set out in a Declaration to the Secretariat of the League of Nations, provided that it is made clear to the League Secretariat that His Majesty's ratification includes ratification of both Conventions and the Additional Protocol (in its wider form) on behalf of New Zealand as a Member of the League.

3. As regards Newfoundland it is observed that the draft Instrument of Ratification provides for the ratification of the Additional Protocol (as well as the Conventions and Statutes) on behalf of Newfoundland, while provision is also made in the draft Declaration for accession to the Protocol in its wider form on behalf of the Island. In view of the fact that the Additional Protocol was signed by Sir H. Llewellyn Smith only on behalf of the United Kingdom and New Zealand, it would appear that the correct procedure to adopt in the case of Newfoundland is that of accession. Accordingly Mr. Churchill would suggest that, in lieu of the words "but shall be deemed to apply to our Colony of Newfoundland" in the Instrument of Ratification there should be substituted the words "but Our Ratification of the said Conventions and Statutes shall be deemed to apply to our Island of Newfoundland." It seems desirable also that the first Declaration should be amended by removing Newfoundland from the list of "Colonies and Protectorates" so that the Declaration would read "for Newfoundland and for the following British Colonies and Protectorates."

4. The question also arises whether some special provision for the Irish Free State should not be made in the ratification. Mr. Churchill's feeling on this point is that it would be desirable to leave it open to the Irish Free State to decide whether or not it will be a party to the three instruments in question, and he would suggest that this might be effected by adding a further proviso to the Instrument of Ratification on the following lines:—

"Provided further that this Our Ratification of the said Conventions, Statutes and Protocol shall not be deemed to apply to the Irish Free State, if notice to that effect shall be given within six months of its constitution."

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 15th March, 1922.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 14th March, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 9th instant,* relative to the ratification of the Conventions relating to Freedom of Transit and Navigable Waterways and the Additional Protocol to the latter Convention agreed upon at Barcelona in March and April, 1921, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to state, for the information of Mr. Secretary Churchill, that His Lordship concurs in the amendments proposed by Mr. Churchill to the text of the draft Instruments of Ratification of the Conventions and Protocol, with the exception of the suggested proviso relating to the Irish Free State.

2. No precedent can be found for a ratification which reserves the right to annul it in part in the event of a certain constitutional change taking place in the dominions of the ratifying state; and it seems unlikely that foreign powers would accept the addition to the Instrument of any clause of this nature. It will, moreover, be out of the question that any such clause should be attached to the ratification of the treaties recently concluded at Washington.

3. I am therefore to suggest that, if necessary, such informal arrangements may immediately be made with the Provisional Government of the Irish Free State as may be required to ensure that His Majesty's ratification may be given without delay in the case of the Barcelona Conventions, and, in the case of the treaties resulting from the Washington conferences, as soon as the question of ratification arises, in a form which will be legally binding upon the whole of Ireland both before and after the constitution of the Irish Free State.

I am, &c.,

G. H. VILLIERS.

Note.—The position of the Irish Free State in this connexion was considered by a Sub-Committee of the Irish Committee of the Cabinet (see Nos. 151 and 152).

9TH FEBRUARY. Your telegram 27th January,* Genoa Conference. Letter from Italian Ambassador to Canadian Prime Minister has not been received yet. Government of Canada is anxious to learn as soon as possible exact wording of this invitation and to be informed, first, if more than one delegate is to be invited, and, second, is invitation to the effect that Canada is to be represented at Genoa Conference by her own delegates or is invitation being extended to Government of Canada as part of larger delegation to represent British Empire?—BYNG.

General Tariff. In like manner products of Canada entering Greece are subject to General Tariff of that country. Canada has three-column Tariff. First column is British Preferential Tariff, which applies to commerce between Canada and most British countries. Second column is known as Intermediate Tariff. This in part applies to number of foreign countries, but Greece is not one of them. Third column is General Tariff, and applies to all countries, including Greece, with which Canada has no reciprocal understandings. Several months ago, Acting Consul-General for Greece, Montreal, communicated with then Government of Canada expressing desire to open negotiations for Commercial Agreement. General election was pending at the time. This was followed by change of government, and little later by session new parliament which only recently terminated. On account of these circumstances Government of Canada has not been in position to take up this important question. (DOT/6124/F1.)
(Overseas Trade. A. No. 6.)

COPY OF A COMMUNICATION, DATED 19TH MAY, 1922, FROM HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTER, GUATEMALA, TO THE DEPARTMENT OF OVERSEAS TRADE.

MY LORD,

His Majesty's Consul at Tegucigalpa (Mr. Lyall) has forwarded to me copies of his despatches, Nos. 13 and 15 in this series of the 18th and 26th ultimo, respectively, reporting a new law in Honduras affecting foreign insurance companies.

The Decree (No. 107 of 10th April, 1922), which came into force on the 18th ultimo, obliges foreign insurance companies of all kinds to deposit in the National Treasury of Honduras a sum of $50,000 United States Currency, as a guarantee for their policy holders; they are also obliged to have a representative legally established in the country.

No foreign company could risk depositing so large a sum as $50,000 with the Honduran Government; moreover, the deposit is without interest, and thus is equivalent at 12 per cent. to a tax of $6,000 per annum; all the insurance business will therefore pass into the hands of the native companies, the most prominent of which is the "Ahorro Hundureno."

I am informed from a private source that the Decree was passed in consequence of the action of a United States concern—the Pan-American Life Insurance Company—in refusing to pay a $10,000 life insurance claim made by the relatives of a Honduran who died shortly after taking out a policy; the insurance was said to be fraudulent, but the claimants had sufficient political influence to have the Decree passed as a reprisal.

* Enclosure 2 in No. 129.

I instructed Mr. Lyall on the 10th instant to protest against the Decree as a violation of Article 1 of our Commercial Treaty of 1910 with Honduras, on the ground that it amounts to the imposition of a tax on British insurance companies, to which native companies are not liable. Actually the only British companies working in Honduras, appear to be the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Toronto, and the Western Assurance Company of Canada. Canada, I believe, has not acceded to the Treaty of 1910, but I am instructing Mr. Lyall to base his protest on general British interests.

I have, &c.,
H. GAISFORD.

Enclosure 2 in No. 131.

(Translation).

EXMO. SNR. MINISTER, British Consulate, Tegucigalpa, 13th May, 1922.
I HAVE the honour to refer Your Excellency to Decree No. 107 of the National Congress published in La Gaceta, No. 5912, of 18th April, 1922, respecting the treatment of foreign insurance companies operating in the Republic, and beg to request Your Excellency's opinion, as that of your Government, as to whether it is intended to bring within the scope of said Decree British insurance companies, established, or to be established, in the country.

I am instructed by His Majesty's Government to request also of Your Excellency that, if such is the application of said Decree, how Your Excellency's Government reconciles same with the terms of the Anglo-Honduran Treaty of 1910, Article I., Paragraph 3 of which says:—

"The subjects or citizens of each of the contracting parties shall not be subject in respect of their persons or property, or in respect of their commerce or industry, to any taxes, whether general or local, or to imposts or obligations of any kind whatever, other or greater than those which are or may be imposed upon native subjects or citizens, or subjects or citizens of the most favoured nation."

From this quotation, it will be evident to Your Excellency that same is in complete disaccord with the terms of the aforementioned Decree which seeks to discriminate between National and British insurance institutions, and specifically precludes provision for the payment of interest on the large sum exacted from the latter by way of deposit.

His Majesty's Government authorizes me to state that the receipt of the views of Your Excellency's Government will be welcomed on this subject, which is of considerable importance to British interests.

I have, &c.,
G. LYALL,
His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires.

EXCMO. SR. DR. DON VICENTE MEJIA COLINDRES,
Minister for Foreign Affairs,
Present.

Enclosure 3 in No. 131.

(Translation.)

Department of Foreign Affairs,
Republic of Honduras,
Tegucigalpa, 23rd June, 1922.

HONOURABLE SIR,
IN relation to your attentive Note of 13th May last, in which you referred to Decree No. 107, issued by the National Congress and published in La Gaceta, No. 5912 of 18th April ultimo, I have the honour to transcribe to you the communication, which says:—

"Ministry of State for Government and Justice, Republic of Honduras, Tegucigalpa, 22nd June, 1922.—Mr. Minister.—I have the honour to refer to your attentive Note of 13th May last, with which you forwarded to me a communication addressed to you by His Excellency G. Lyall, His Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, having as its object the securing of the opinion of this Government with respect to the application of Legislative Decree No. 107, issued on 30th March last, and published in La Gaceta, No. 5912, of 18th April, ultimo, with reference to British insurance companies, and in view of Article 1, Paragraph 3 of the Anglo-Honduran Treaty of 1910. Replying to your Note I beg to state that in the opinion of my Government, the mentioned Legislative Decree is not applicable to British insurance companies, in virtue of the stipulations of the mentioned Anglo-Honduran Treaty, for otherwise such companies would be in a juridical situation different from that which our laws recognize towards national companies; that is to say, with greater obligations than the latter. Notwithstanding the above, I deem it convenient to state that foreign companies, including those of British nationality, are always subject to the formality of recognition by the Executive Power of Honduras, and of appointing their agents in the country with the express authorization of the said Executive Power, since these same obligations apply equally to the Honduran institutions. With reference to these points, I beg to refer to Articles 8 of the "Foreigners Law," 58 of the Civil Code, and 285, No. 7, 286, 287, 289, and 315 of the Commercial Code.

With assurances of special consideration, I beg to remain,

Yours, &c.,
(Signed) CORONADO GARCIA.

To the Minister for Foreign Affairs."

I take this opportunity to reiterate to you the assurance of my distinguished consideration.

V. MEJIA COLINDRES.

The Honourable George Lyall,
His Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, Present.

TRANSLATION OF CLAUSES REFERRED TO IN NOTE OF THE MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE REPUBLIC OF HONDURAS, DATED 23RD JUNE, 1922, RELATING TO THE OPERATION OF FOREIGN COMPANIES.

Foreigners Law.—Chapter 1. Article 8.—"Foreign juridical entities enjoy in Honduras all the rights conceded by the laws of the country of their domicile, provided that same are not contrary to the laws of Honduras, and have been recognized by the Executive Power."

Civil Code.—Article 58.—"The civil capacity of corporations will be regulated by the laws which have created them or recognized them; that of associations by their statutes, and that of foundations by the rules governing their institutions, through approval by the Executive Power when the association or foundation are not created by the State."

Commercial Code.—Article 285.—"The deed of the Society's incorporation should state:—

No. 7.—The method of administration, the functions of the administrators, and the faculties reserved to the general meeting of shareholders."

Article 286.—The statutes of limited liability companies will be submitted for the approval of the Executive Power, and in the same way any alterations or modifications made in them.

Article 287.—The prorogation of societies constituted for a definite period, will also be submitted for the approval of the Executive, and similar authorization is necessary for their dissolution if same occurs before the stipulated period, or in cases not prescribed by Law.

Article 289.—The Executive shall not give its approval, if from an examination of the deed of incorporation, it appears the capital is not effective, or that its realization is insufficiently assured, or that it is not proportionate to the magnitude of the company's operations, or that the regulations of the company do not offer to the shareholders guarantees of good administration, the means of fiscalising the operations of the managers, and the right to know regarding the investment of its funds.

Article 315.—Foreign limited liability companies cannot establish agents in Honduras without the express authorization of the Executive Power.

Agents who act for these Companies without obtaining governmental authorization, will be personally responsible for the fulfilment of the contracts they make, and subjected to all the responsibilities previously established without prejudice to any action that may be taken against the said companies.

Note.—The question of the position under Commercial Treaties of companies incorporated in a Dominion which had not acceded to the Treaty was discussed in the minutes on this paper (37437/22). It was pointed out that the question had been dealt with, so far as the Industrial Property Convention was concerned, in Nos. 153 to 158 of Dominions No. 51.

FOREIGN OFFICE to OFFICES OF THE CABINET.

[See No. 133.]

THE Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs presents his compliments to the Secretary to the Cabinet, and, with reference to the letter* from the Secretariat-General of the League of Nations, dated the 14th February, communicated to the Foreign Office by Sir Maurice Hankey on the 7th instant, notifying the ratification by Bulgaria of the draft conventions adopted by the International Labour Conference at Washington, invites Sir Maurice Hankey's attention to the incorrect phraseology used by the League Secretariat in describing the ratifications of the draft conventions.

2. The phrase "His Britannic Majesty's Government" used in sub-paragraphs 3, 4, 5 and 6 of the Secretary-General's letter is incorrect; and the descriptions given in those sub-paragraphs do not clearly indicate what parts of the British Empire have ratified the draft conventions.

3. Sir Eyre Crowe would suggest that the Secretariat of the League should be invited in future to use the phrase "British Empire (not including . . .)" in the same way as in sub-paragraph 6 the phrase "Denmark (not including Greenland)" is used; e.g., the correct phraseology of sub-paragraph 6 would have been: "already ratified by Greece, Roumania, the British Empire (not including Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa)."

SIR, Downing Street, 13th April, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd March† enclosing a copy of a letter to the Cabinet Office regarding the ratification of the draft Conventions adopted by the International Labour Conference at Washington.

* Not printed: the phraseology referred to was "Convention concerning unemployment (already ratified by Greece, Roumania, His Britannic Majesty's Government, India, Sweden, Denmark (not including Greenland), Finland, and Bulgaria)."

† Not printed: it enclosed copy of No. 132.

2. Mr. Churchill's view is that the wording of Article 421 of the Treaty of Versailles, which provides that the Members of the International Labour Organization will apply Labour Conventions which they have ratified to their Colonies, Protectorates and Possessions which are not fully self-governing so far as those Conventions are applicable, definitely precludes ratification of such Conventions in respect of the Colonies not possessing responsible Government and Protectorates. Similarly this wording would preclude ratification in respect of Newfoundland, since it is not possible to regard the United Kingdom and Newfoundland in combination as a single Member of the International Labour Organization possessing Colonies. In this connexion I am to enclose a copy of a letter* to the Ministry of Labour, and I am also to invite reference to paragraph 3 of the letter from this Department of the 27th April, 1921.† It was understood from paragraph 4 of your letter of the 5th May, 1921,‡ that Lord Curzon admitted the correctness of the view set out above.

3. In actual fact the draft Conventions mentioned in your letter were ratified by Orders of the Lords of the Council stating that the Conventions had "in respect of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland obtained the consent of the authority or authorities within whose competence the matter lies." It will be seen that the ratification was expressly confined to the United Kingdom.

4. If it is thought that the phrase "ratified by His Britannic Majesty's Government" in the letter from the Secretary-General of the League of Nations of the 14th February§ is not appropriate in view of the fact that in the other cases mentioned in the letter the name of the ratifying country is given, it would appear that this objection could be met by making it clear that the ratification by His Britannic Majesty's Government of the particular Conventions mentioned was in respect of the United Kingdom.

5. I am further to explain that under the new Constitution of Malta, the position of that Colony with regard to draft Labour Conventions will be the same as that of Newfoundland, in so far as the subject matter is one in regard to which responsible government has been granted to the Colony.

6. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Cabinet Office.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

 WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch, No. 234 of the 13th June, 1921,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a note from the French Government explaining the reasons for which they are unable to recognize the accession of the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia to the International Sanitary Convention, 1912. His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn your Ministers' wishes as to the action which should now be taken.

2. In this connexion it will be remembered that the reservations of the Commonwealth Government are not the only ones which have been made in regard to Article 9 of the Sanitary Convention, since in ratifying the Convention reservations were made by the United States, Spain, and Panama, all of which were accepted by the signatory Powers. The reserve made by the United States of America to Article 9 in the Protocol of Deposit of Ratifications reads as follows:—

"The representative of the Government of the United States of America has declared that his Government has ratified under the reserve that nothing in Article 9 of the Convention will be considered as prohibiting the United States from taking special quarantine measures against the infection of their ports which unusual sanitary conditions may render necessary. Whilst making this reserve, the Government of the United States does not contemplate any infringement of the basic regulations of the Convention."

3. One possible way out of the present difficulty might be for the Commonwealth Government to make their reserve in respect of Article 9 in precisely the same language as the United States of America. It would appear that the other parties to the Convention, having accepted the United States reserve, could hardly refuse to accept a similar reserve made totidem verbis by another party. Such a course, if adopted, would appear also to dispose of the French contention that the Commonwealth reservations are contrary to the spirit of Article 159 of the Sanitary Convention.

MONSIEUR L'AMBASSADEUR,

PAR lettre du 23 mai, 1921, vous avez fait part à mon prédécesseur de l'intention du Commonwealth d'Australie d'adhérer à la Convention sanitaire internationale du 17 janvier, 1912. Cette adhésion étant accompagnée de deux réserves, il n'a pas paru possible d'en prendre acte, sans consulter, au préalable, les Gouvernements des Etats qui sont parties à la Convention.

Il résulte des réponses reçues que plusieurs Gouvernements ne font pas d'objections à ces réserves, mais qu'un certain nombre d'entre eux estiment, comme le Gouvernement français, d'abord que des réserves sont incompatibles avec l'article 159 de la Convention sanitaire qui vise l'adhésion pure et simple, ensuite que l'une de ces réserves va à l'encontre des dispositions formelles de l'article 9; c'est celle d'après laquelle une localité où des cas de peste ont été constatés, soit sur l'homme, soit sur les animaux, ne cesserait d'être considérée, en Australie, comme contaminée que s'il est établi que, depuis la constatation du dernier cas de peste chez l'homme ou chez les rongeurs, les recherches des rongeurs infectés ont été poursuivies pendant un délai de six mois et si, pendant cette période, aucun rongeur infecté n'a été découverte.

Etant donnée cette situation, le Gouvernement français ne peut, à son regret, prendre acte de l'accession du Commonwealth d'Australie à la Convention sanitaire du 17 janvier, 1912.

LA Conférence Internationale pour l'étude des Epizooties, qui s'est réunie à Paris du 25 au 28 mai, 1921, a recommandé la création à Paris d'un Office international pour la lutte contre les maladies infectieuses des animaux. Elle a exprimé le désir que cet office, placée sous l'autorité d'un Comité, composé des délégués techniques des divers états, fût rattaché à l'Office international d'Hygiène publique, sous réserve de l'approbation des Gouvernements adhérents à la Convention internationale de Rome, du 9 décembre, 1907.

D'autre part, la Conférence a émis le vœu "que le Gouvernement français prépare un projet de Convention sur les bases des résolutions adoptées par elle, communique ce projet à tous les pays représentés à la Conférence et invite les Gouvernements intéressés à désigner des plénipotentiaires pour la signature de ladite Convention, dans le plus bref délai possible.

En conformité des résolutions de la Conférence, le Gouvernement français a fait 1° Préparer, par ces services compétents, un projet d'arrangement pour la création à Paris d'un Office international des epizooties, 2° Editer une brochure reproduisant le compte rendu sténographique des séances de la Conférence.

En transmettant ces documents au Gouvernement britannique l'Ambassadeur de France a l'honneur de demander à Son Excellence le Principal Secrétaire d'Etat de Sa Majesté aux Affaires Etrangères si le Gouvernement anglais est disposé à envoyer des pleins pouvoirs à son représentant diplomatique à Paris, pour la signature d'une Convention identique au projet établi par le Gouvernement français, ou s'il estime qu'il conviendrait d'apporter des modifications tant au texte de l'arrangement qu'au texte des statuts.

En outre le Gouvernement français serait très heureux de savoir si le Gouvernement britannique n'a pas d'objection au rattachement éventuel de l'Office des Epizooties à l'Office international d'Hygiène publique.

EN réponse aux lettres de Votre Excellence, en date des 2 juin et 15 septembre derniers, le Gouvernement de la République me prie de faire savoir au Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique qu'il estime qu'il appartiendra aux Etats adhérents à l'Office en question de décider si cet office doit être rattaché à l'Office International d'Hygiène Publique, s'il doit l'être à la Société des Nations, si l'on peut et s'il faut le rattacher à aucun d'eux. Dans l'opinion du Gouvernement français, il suffit que l'un des Etats adhérents s'oppose au rattachement pour que le rattachement soit impossible. De plus, l'Office des Epizooties ne pourra être rattaché à l'Office International d'Hygiène Publique que du consentement unanime des Etats qui font partie de cette dernière institution internationale.

Sans doute, l'article 24 du Pacte de la Société des Nations dispose que tous les bureaux internationaux créés après la constitution de la Société des Nations seront placés sous l'autorité de la Société. Mais, dans l'opinion du Gouvernement de la République, ce texte ne peut lier que les signataires du Traité de Versailles; il ne s'impose pas aux pays tels que la République Argentine qui, non signataires du Traité de Versailles, ont été représentés à la Conférence chargée d'étudier la création de l'Office des Epizooties. D'autre part, il ne faut pas perdre de vue que les Etats-Unis d'Amérique ont déclaré se refuser au rattachement à la Société des Nations de l'un quelconque des organismes internationaux dont ils font partie. Or, les Etats-Unis ont également eu un délégué à ladite conférence.

[Answered by No. 149.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 23rd November, 1922.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd October,* enclosing a copy of a Note from the French Ambassador on the subject of the proposed creation of an International Veterinary Bureau.

2. The arguments of the French Government are somewhat difficult to follow, and the Secretary of State feels doubtful whether the Note should be communicated to the Dominion Governments until further consideration has been given to the views expressed in it. From the draft Convention enclosed in your letter of the 11th of April,† it is observed that it is definitely intended that the proposed Bureau should be attached to the International Health Office, if the countries participating in that organization agree. The International Health Organization has not been placed under the direction of the League of Nations, because the United States of America, one of the participating countries, has refused its assent. No question arises as to the position of the International Health Office under Article 24 of the Covenant of the League, because, being one of the "international bureaux already established," it can only be placed under the direction of the League "if the parties to such Treaties consent."

3. It is not easy to understand why the French Government take the view that Article 24 of the Covenant binds only the signatories of the Treaty of Versailles, but, even if this view were correct, the question remains whether any country which is bound by Article 24 can escape the obligation imposed by the second sentence ("All such international bureaux . . . hereafter constituted shall be placed under the direction of the League") by arranging that a new Bureau shall be attached to an existing Bureau which is not under the direction of the League, or by admitting to participation in the new Bureau a country which is free to refuse to allow it to be placed under the direction of the League, and will, in fact, exercise that right.

4. The Secretary of State will be glad to receive Lord Curzon's further observations on the subject.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

(Received 6th December, 1922.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 5th December, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 23rd ultimo,‡ I am directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to state that the correct interpretation of Article 24 of the Covenant of the League of Nations appears to him to be open to argument.

2. From the practical point of view there is evidently much to be said in favour of the opinion expressed by the French Government that new international bureaux such as the proposed Veterinary Bureau can only be placed under the League if all the participating Powers consent, provided that, as the French Government no doubt intend to be understood, no power which is bound by Article 24 can be regarded as at liberty to withhold its consent. It would create an almost intolerable situation if that article were to be interpreted so rigidly as to prevent the participation of a state not a member of the League in the work of an international bureau unless it consented to the bureau being placed under the direction of the League. If a non-member state objected on principle to its being so placed there would be an end to effective co-operation involving international machinery between that state and members of the League. Such a result would not only be most inconvenient but would be precisely contrary to the whole object of the Covenant of the League, viz.,

* No. 145. † 17392: not printed; it forwarded a copy of Enclosure in No. 141 and the draft Convention. ‡ No. 148.

the promotion of international co-operation. At the time of the drafting of the Covenant it was expected that all states would become members of the League. Owing to various political developments this expectation has not so far been verified, and until its fulfilment the Covenant should not, when it can be avoided, be read in such a way as to hinder co-operation between nations inside the League and nations outside it.

3. It is, however, evident that this view based on practical considerations must, if accepted, be applied with caution. It is doubtful whether it is strictly correct in law, and clearly no encouragement should be given to a non-member state to insist on a bureau in which its participation was desired being kept outside the League organization. At the same time Lord Curzon feels that practical necessity may drive members of the League in certain cases to agree to such a course, and he would not advocate the adoption by His Majesty's Government on technical legal grounds of a rigid attitude which would prevent participation by the United States, for instance, in a useful international bureau if such participation were likely to be valuable. He proposes, therefore, at a suitable moment, to inform the French Government that His Majesty's Government agree that the consent of all parties is necessary if the proposed Veterinary Bureau is to be placed under the League, but that in their view no state which is bound by Article 24 of the Covenant can withhold its consent.

4. The view apparently held by the French Government that Article 24 binds only those governments which originally signed the Covenant and not those which subsequently adhered to it appears to be of very doubtful validity, but there does not seem to be any necessity for contesting it at the present moment at any rate.

I am, &c.,

G. H. VILLIERS.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 151.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th March, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that a question has arisen as to the position of the Irish Free State in relation to Treaties which have been signed but are awaiting ratification.

2. The position in connexion with the Conventions and Additional Protocol agreed upon at Barcelona in March and April, 1921, is dealt with in a separate letter* of even date, but Mr. Churchill would be glad if he could be supplied with a list of any other Treaties now awaiting ratification (apart from those signed at Washington as a result of the Disarmament Conference) in order that the position of the Irish Free State may be considered in relation to each.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 5th April, 1922.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 5th April, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 9th March† in regard to the position of the Irish Free State in relation to treaties which have been signed but are awaiting ratification, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit herewith a copy of the list of such agreements (apart from those signed at Washington during the recent Conference) which was communicated unofficially to your department on the 24th ultimo.

2. It was then explained that arrangements were being made for the exchange of ratifications of the Anglo-French Protocol respecting the New Hebrides of 6th August, 1914,* to take effect as from 18th March, 1922, and that the arrangements would shortly be completed for the exchange of ratifications of the Convention of 2nd February, 1922, with France regarding civil procedure.† The former of these two agreements does not concern Ireland, and the latter refers to civil procedure in France and England only.

3. At the request of this Department the Colonial Office gave special consideration to the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Spitzbergen Treaty, the treaty regarding Bessarabia,‡ the Aaland Islands Convention,§ the agreement with Hungary in regard to Section III of Part X of the Treaty of Trianon|| and the Convention and Protocol with Siam¶ in regard to the settlement of matters arising out of Article 296 of the Treaty of Versailles (Enemy Debts). Unofficial communications have been received from your Department in regard to each of these agreements, to the effect that their ratification need not be delayed by any question as to the position of the Irish Free State. His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris has therefore been instructed to deposit at the French Ministry for Foreign Affairs the ratification of the Treaty regarding Bessarabia of 28th October, 1920‡; and arrangements are being made by the Cabinet Offices for the deposit of the King's ratification of the Aaland Islands Convention of 10th October, 1921,§ with the Secretariat of the League of Nations as soon as possible. As soon as the necessary arrangements have been completed, steps will be taken for the ratification of the Spitzbergen Treaty of 9th February, 1920, the Agreement with Hungary of 20th December, 1921,|| and the Convention and Protocol with Siam of 20th December, 1921.¶

4. The consideration of the question of the ratification of the Treaties regarding the Near East, signed on 10th August, 1920, viz., the Treaty of Sèvres and the Treaties concerning the affairs of Greece, Thrace and Armenia, has been postponed pending the result of present negotiations.

5. Lord Curzon understands that the question of ratifying the treaties signed at the Washington Conference,†† the Air Convention,‡‡ the Barcelona Conventions,§§ and other Agreements, the ratification of which is still outstanding, was considered at the Colonial Office by a sub-committee of the Irish Committee of the Cabinet, who will submit to the Cabinet their recommendations as to the procedure to be followed.

I am, &c.,
F. E. ADAM.

No. 152

COLONIAL OFFICE to THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND.

[Answered by No. 153.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd May, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Churchill to inform you that action is being taken to secure that any International Conventions which may be negotiated before the legal establishment of the Irish Free State will either:—

(a) Not apply to the Free State at all; or

(b) Not apply unless or until the Government of the Free State has decided that it desires to accede; or

(c) Contain a provision enabling the Irish Free State to withdraw from their operation.

2. International Conventions already in force will continue to apply to the Irish Free State when it is established unless or until they are modified. The necessary steps will be taken at the instance of the Free State Government with a view to putting the Free State in the same international position as the other self-governing Dominions in accordance with the Treaty.

3. In the same class with these Conventions are included International Conventions signed prior to the legalization of the Treaty and now due for formal ratification, such as the International Air Convention concluded in 1919, the Treaties concluded at the recent Conference at Washington, at the Second Assembly of the League of Nations, and at Barcelona in 1921.

Commercial Treaty of 1883. Imposition of depreciated currency duty on imports into New Zealand.

No. 154.

THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 18th March, 1922.)

[Answered by No. 155.]

SIR,

New Zealand Government Offices,

415, Strand, London, W.C.2., 17th March, 1922.

I AM directed by the High Commissioner to enclose a copy of a memorandum which has been handed to him by Dr. F. Giannini, of the Italian Embassy, London.

As will be seen from this memorandum the levying under recent New Zealand legislation of "depreciated currency duty" on Italian goods is regarded by the Italian Government as being contrary to the terms of the Anglo-Italian Commercial Treaty of June, 1883.

It is a fact that New Zealand levies special duty on certain classes of goods imported from countries whose currencies are depreciated, the rate of such duty varying according to the extent of the depreciation. I regret being unable to forward a copy of the relative Statute in its present form, the text of a recent amendment not having yet been received.

Before communicating with New Zealand, the High Commissioner desires to ascertain, if possible, the opinion of the British Government as to whether the levying of such duty is actually an infringement of the treaty provisions. I shall therefore be grateful if you will kindly refer the matter to the proper quarter and advise me the outcome as soon as possible, at the same time forwarding a copy of the relative Article or Articles of the Treaty.

I am, &c.,

T. E. DONNE,

Secretary to the Department.

Enclosure in No. 154.

1. The commercial relations between Italy and New Zealand are governed by the provisions of the Anglo-Italian Commercial Treaty of June, 1883, to which New Zealand has adhered.

Such Treaty contains a clause which grants to the contracting countries the treatment of the Most Favoured Nations in respect of Custom duties, and the Italian Government have accordingly given to goods imported into Italy from New Zealand the benefit of the lowest rate of duty. Further, goods imported from New Zealand have also received the most favourable treatment in respect of import restrictions, being placed exactly on the same footing as British goods.

2. The New Zealand Tariff, as modified by the Customs Amendment Act, 1921, provides for a surtax on goods imported from countries with depreciated exchanges, and the Italian Government submits that such surtax cannot be applied to Italian goods as it would be against the terms of Art. 2 of the Commercial Treaty referred to above. The contention of the Italian Government is fully endorsed by the fact that the British Government have recognized that they are precluded by the said Art. 2 from making any Order imposing higher duties or special tariff on Italian goods of any class or description on the ground of the state of the Italian exchange which are not imposed on the importation of similar goods from all other foreign countries. The British Government have thus agreed that the provisions of the second part of the Safeguarding of Industries Act concerning the Anti-Dumping Duty on goods imported from countries with depreciated exchanges, cannot be applied to Italian goods.

3. For the same reasons the Italian Government take the view that Italian goods imported into New Zealand should be dutiable under the intermediate Tariff, if and when such favourable treatment is accorded to any other country.

No. 155.

COLONIAL OFFICE to THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND.

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 31st May, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 17th March,* enclosing a copy of a memorandum from the Italian Commercial Delegation on the subject of the special duty imposed on goods imported into New Zealand from countries having a depreciated currency, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to request you to inform the High Commissioner that the question whether the issue of orders under Section 2 (1) (a) or Section 2 (1) (b) of the Safeguarding of Industries Act would conflict with obligations in certain commercial treaties between this country and foreign countries, including the Anglo-Italian Commercial Treaty of 1883, has already been considered. I am to enclose, for the confidential information of the High Commissioner and the New Zealand Government, copies of a case submitted to the Law Officers of the Crown and of the Law Officers' opinion. In view of the opinion a letter was sent to Dr. Giannini, of which a copy is enclosed. It will be observed that the relevant provision of the Treaty is quoted in the case submitted to the Law Officers.

2. As New Zealand is a party to the Treaty in question, similar considerations would appear to apply to the levying of depreciated currency duty on Italian goods in New Zealand, and it would not be possible to refute the contention of the Italian Government referred to in your letter of the 17th March,* so long as the imposition of the duty placed Italy on a footing less favourable than that enjoyed by any other foreign country.

3. I am to add that commercial treaties affording most-favoured-nation treatment, to which New Zealand is a party, exist also with the following countries:

Argentine Republic.	Liberia.
Colombia.	Nicaragua.
Costa Rica.	Norway.
Denmark.	Spain.
Egypt.	Sweden.
Greece.	Switzerland.
Honduras.	Venezuela.

A similar position to that described in the preceding paragraph would apparently arise if it were proposed to impose depreciated currency duty on goods produced in those countries.

4. A copy of this correspondence is being sent to the Governor-General.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

Enclosure 1 in No. 155.

(Extract.)

THE Law Officers are accordingly requested to advise the Board of Trade:—

(1) Whether having regard to the terms of the American Treaty of 1815 and to the construction which the Americans themselves have placed upon that Treaty, His Majesty's Government would contravene the most-favoured-nation clause of the Treaty by issuing an Order under Section 2 (1) (a) of the Safeguarding of Industries Bill with regard to articles imported from America, there being no evidence of dumping from other countries at the time of making the Order.

(2) Whether having regard to the terms of the Italian Treaty of 1883, the Belgian Note of 1898, or the Japanese Treaty of 1911, the issue of Orders under either Section 2 (1) (a) or Section 2 (1) (b) of the Bill with regard to articles imported from Italy, Belgium, or Japan, as the case may be, would conflict with the obligations of His Majesty's Government under the Treaty or Note above referred to; and

(3) generally upon the case.

Enclosure 2 in No. 155.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

SAFEGUARDING OF INDUSTRIES BILL.

OPINION OF THE LAW OFFICERS OF THE CROWN AND MR. W. BOWSTEAD.

In the light of the information contained in our instructions we are inclined to think upon the whole that measures applied impartially for the prevention of unfair competition cannot properly be considered a contravention of the most-favoured-nation clauses in Commercial Treaties. We therefore answer the questions as follows:—

(1) No, we think not.

(2) We think that the issue of orders under Section 2 (1) (a) of the Bill with regard to articles imported from Italy, Belgium, or Japan would not conflict, but that the issue of orders under Section 2 (1) (b) would conflict, with the obligation of His Majesty's Government under the respective Treaty or Note.

GORDON HEWART.
ERNEST M. POLLOCK.
W. BOWSTEAD.

Enclosure 3 in No. 155.

DEAR DR. GIANNINNI,

27th June, 1921.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 18th June with regard to the possible application of Part II. of the Safeguarding of Industries Bill to Italian goods.

With reference thereto I desire to call your attention to the proviso to Sub-section (2) of Clause 2 of the Bill and to state for the information of your Government that the Board of Trade take the view that they are precluded by Article II. of the Anglo-Italian Commercial Treaty of 1883 from making any Order imposing any duties on Italian goods of any class or description on the ground of the state of the Italian exchange which are not imposed on the importation of similar goods from all other foreign countries. So far as these provisions of this part of the Bill are concerned, your Government may rest assured that, so long as the Anglo-Italian Treaty in question is in force, no such differential duties will be imposed on Italian goods.

The only other duties which could be imposed on any Italian goods under Part II. of the Bill are those which might be called for, should evidence be produced that any Italian manufacturers or groups of manufacturers were selling goods in the United Kingdom, or offering them for sale, at prices below those at which similar goods were being sold in Italy, and that employment in any industry in the United Kingdom was being, or was likely to be, seriously affected in consequence. In such event it might become necessary to consider whether a duty should be levied not on all Italian goods of the class in question, but only on such goods as were in fact sold in the United Kingdom at such prices. You will realise that the safeguarding of a British industry from the effects of what we regard as the unfair competition of an individual foreign exporter or group of exporters raises somewhat different considerations from those which arise in regard to the general advantages which the exporters as a whole in a particular foreign country may conceivably enjoy as the result of the state of the exchange.

I am not, however, aware of any case in which dumping of this character from Italy has been alleged, and I understood, moreover, in the course of our conversation, that in your opinion it was not likely in present circumstances that any Italian manufacturer would seek to sell his goods in this country at a price lower than he could command in the home market. If this be so it is clear that, so long as existing conditions are maintained, Part II. of the Bill would have no application to any Italian goods.

I am, &c.,

H. FOUNTAIN.

I shall not fail to inform you without delay so soon as the matter is decided.

[Answered by No. 166.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 23rd February, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that he has had under consideration your letter of the 5th November, 1921,† renewing the suggestion that an inter-departmental conference should be held to discuss the proposal that future Commercial Treaties should be so drawn up as to exclude British subjects connected with a non-adhering Dominion from the benefits conferred by the Treaties on British subjects as such.

2. Mr. Churchill's objections to this proposal were set out in detail in the letter from this Department of the 16th September, 1921,‡ and may be summarized as follows: (1) The present model form of Treaty was adopted after consultation with the Dominions, and any such modification as that proposed could only be adopted after further similar consultation; (2) the principle hitherto followed is based on opinions of the Law Officers of the Crown and has been adopted in communications with foreign Governments as a matter of settled policy: nothing has occurred to suggest that this policy should be varied; (3) no distinction of principle exists between the right of His Majesty's Government to extend diplomatic protection to British subjects connected with the Dominions and the right to secure by Treaty any particular rights for such British subjects, and as a matter both of principle and of practical convenience it is highly desirable that the personal rights of all British subjects in a foreign country should stand on the same footing; (4) in any case the matter cannot be considered in relation to the Dominions only, and it is probable that considerable difficulty would be experienced in defining precisely which British subjects were to be regarded as belonging to any particular part of the Empire.

3. These objections still seem to Mr. Churchill to be most cogent. The first has been emphasized subsequently by the insistence of the New Zealand Government (see Governor-General's Confidential despatch of 23rd September enclosed in the letter from this Department of 23rd November§) on the desirability of securing most-favoured-nation treatment in Siam for the Dominions.

4. Apart from the difficulties referred to in paragraph 2 of this letter, Mr. Churchill sees the gravest objections of principle to the proposal, which he can only regard as tending to impair the unity of the Empire. He has the less hesitation in urging this view having regard to the stress laid upon the principle of common citizenship in the Articles of Agreement with Ireland and the undesirability that the commencement of the new régime in Ireland should be marked by the adoption of a new attitude on the part of His Majesty's Government in the matter of the position, under Commercial Treaties, of British subjects connected with the overseas Dominions. If the maintenance of the principle of common citizenship was important before the signature of the Irish Treaty, it is, in Mr. Churchill's opinion, vital at the present day.

5. In the circumstances Mr. Churchill hopes that Lord Curzon will agree that negotiations for future commercial treaties should continue to be based on the understanding that any rights secured can be claimed on behalf of all British subjects. It is, however, recognized that the form of Colonial Article in future Commercial Treaties will require modification in view of the pending establishment of the Irish Free State; on this point I am to invite reference to the letter from this Department of 10th February* relating to the proposed agreement with Finland.

6. I am to add that the position of mandated territories in relation to Commercial Treaties is discussed in the letter from this Department of the 9th February.†

7. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Board of Trade.

† No. 202.

‡ No. 165.

Begins: At last year's Conference, as you know, we discussed question of admission of Germany to League of Nations, and it was agreed generally that her admission was desirable. Subsequently, I talked matter over informally with Wirth at Genoa, and recently we have been considering the best means of approaching France and Germany in order to make our views known.

We have come to conclusion, with regard to France, that the most hopeful plan is to let French Government know that we are generally in favour of Germany's admission to the League, and the Acting Foreign Secretary has already spoken to the French Ambassador in this sense. It seems inadvisable to enter into formal discussions since a direct proposal would probably lead to refusal.

As regards Germany, British Ambassador at Berlin is being authorized to sound the German Government, and if the symptoms are favourable, to encourage them to make application for membership before the next meeting; and also to let them know that representatives of British Government at next Assembly will be prepared to support Germany's admission to membership of the Council, though, of course, we can say nothing about the line that France will take. Ends.

SIR,

Downing Street, 4th January, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that at the meeting of the Second Assembly of the League of Nations, held at Geneva in September last, various proposals for amending the Covenant of the League were under consideration. These proposals resulted from reports of three Committees, which I enclose herewith, viz., those on (a) Amendments to the Covenant,* (b) International Blockade,† and (c) Allocation of Expenses.‡

2. These reports were considered by Committees of the Second Assembly, copies of the reports of which are also enclosed, viz.: (1) Reports of the First Committee regarding amendments to the Covenant,§ (2) Reports of the Third Committee on the Economic Weapon of the League,|| (3) Report by the Fourth Committee as to Allocation of Expenses, with a supplementary memorandum by the Rapporteur to this Committee.¶

3. As the result of the work of these Committees, the Second Assembly adopted a series of resolutions and recommendations dealing with the various amendments to the Covenant which have been proposed. The accompanying memorandum sets out these amendments and the action taken with regard to them.

4. The amendments of the Covenant adopted by the Assembly are set out in a further memorandum enclosed. Your Ministers will observe, however, from the accompanying note†† drawn up by Mr. Balfour that an agreement was made between himself and the French delegation at Geneva that no action would be taken by His Majesty's Government or the French Government with regard to the ratification

REPORT OF THE INTER-DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER THE AMENDMENTS TO ARTICLE 16 OF THE COVENANT OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

(Extract.)

9. The Committee have, therefore, considered whether it might not be possible to combine both the ideas of residence and nationality, and to substitute some such phrase as "persons subject to the jurisdiction of the State" for those who are to be covered by the prohibitions enacted by the State enforcing the boycott. The first paragraph of Article 16 might, if this idea were adopted, be worded as follows:—

"Should any member of the League resort to war . . . it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between persons subject to their jurisdiction and persons in the covenant-breaking State, and the prevention of all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between persons in the covenant-breaking State and persons in any other State whether a member of the League or not.

11. The Committee are therefore of opinion (a) that the word "nationals" in Article 16 ought to be amended; (b) that, if France can be induced to accept the amendment adopted at Geneva, it should be ratified by His Majesty's Government; and (c) that, if France cannot be persuaded to ratify the proposed amendment, some such modification of paragraph 1 of the article should be proposed as a new amendment at the third assembly.

21. In conclusion, the Committee desire to draw attention to the fact that the protocol embodying the first amendment has already been signed by the representative of South Africa at the second assembly. The many difficulties surrounding the application and enforcement of the economic weapon will be sensibly increased if different parts of the Empire are bound by divergent stipulations on the subject, and they, therefore, recommend that all the Dominion Governments and India should be consulted and invited to co-operate in whatever policy may ultimately be decided on in connexion with the modification of Article 16.

Prime Minister's Office, Cape Town, 19th June, 1922.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Minute No. 3/4000 of the 1st June, transmitting for their consideration Dominions Treaty No. 17 of the 10th May, on the subject of the proposed amendment of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

Ministers have acquainted themselves with the report of the Inter-Departmental Committee appointed to consider the amendments to Article 16 of the Covenant, and are prepared to concur in the recommendations of the Committee contained in paragraph 11 of their report.

With regard to paragraph 21 of the report, in which reference is made to the fact that the Protocol embodying the first amendment to Article 16 of the Covenant has already been signed by the representative of South Africa at the Second Assembly, Ministers have instructed the High Commissioner for South Africa, who will be their representative, to associate himself with the Imperial Government and other Dominion Governments in regard to the proposed amendments, and, if possible, to substitute the amendments so decided for the Protocol which has already been signed.

Ministers concur in the view expressed that difficulties are likely to arise if different parts of the Empire are bound by divergent stipulations, and are prepared to co-operate wherever possible in order to advocate a common policy.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 3rd February, 1922.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit to you herewith the accompanying copies of correspondence which has passed between this department and the Board of Trade regarding the initiation of negotiations for the conclusion of a commercial agreement between the United Kingdom and Lithuania.

2. It will be observed that the Board of Trade in paragraph 4 of their letter of the 23rd December last, have inquired whether the proposed agreement should be restricted in its application to the United Kingdom only, or whether some provision should be made for extending its scope so as to include other parts of the Empire, should they so desire.

3. In this connexion it will be within the recollection of the Colonial Office that this department in their letter of 20th July last,† and subsequent correspondence, suggested that an inter-departmental conference should be held to determine the question of the formula to be employed providing for the adherence to permanent treaties of the Dominions, Colonies, etc. This suggestion met with the approval of the Board of Trade, but the Colonial Office were at that time unable to see their way to concurring in its adoption, and no further progress has been achieved in the matter.

4. It will be seen, however, from paragraph 3 of Foreign Office letter to the Board of Trade, of 3rd February, that this department has suggested that the same provisions should be inserted in the draft exchange of notes as were embodied in the agreement with Esthonia for enabling such of the Dominions, as should so desire, to accede to the temporary arrangement, and that the precedent established during the negotiations for the conclusion of that agreement with regard to the notification of the accession of Dominions, etc., might with advantage be followed on this occasion.

Enclosure 1 in No. 183.

(C. R. T. 6500/21.)

Board of Trade (Commercial Relations and Treaties Department),
Great George Street, London, S.W.1, 23rd December, 1921.

SIR,

WITH reference to your letter regarding the desirability of concluding some form of commercial arrangement between this country and Lithuania, I am directed by the Board of Trade to state that they concur in Lord Curzon's suggestion that some temporary agreement might be effected by means of an exchange of notes, to remain in force until succeeded by a definitive treaty to be concluded at some future date if and when de jure recognition is accorded to the Lithuanian Government by His Majesty's Government. In this connexion I am to refer to previous correspondence on the subject ending with the letter (C. R. T. 1158) which was addressed to you from this Department on the 8th April on the proposal then put forward for a United Kingdom-Lithuania Commercial Agreement. In that letter the Board pointed out that the negotiation of an arrangement presented considerable difficulties in view of the imminent introduction into Parliament of legislative proposals likely to affect to a considerable extent the foreign trade policy of this country (i.e., the Safeguarding of Industries Bill). The Bill in question has now, as Lord Curzon is aware, become law, and under its provisions orders may be made by the Board of Trade under certain conditions imposing duties on specified goods originating in countries where the currency is depreciated. The Board are, however, precluded from making such Orders in respect of the products of any particular country so long as there is in force between that country and the United Kingdom a Treaty or other arrangement which secures to the goods of the country concerned on importation into the United Kingdom full most-favoured-nation treatment in respect of Customs duties.

In the case of Finland, Lord Curzon will recollect that a special Article was included in the draft Exchange of Notes prepared in this Department and forwarded under cover of the Board's letter (C.R.T. 5674) of the 29th October,* reserving from the grant of full most-favoured-nation treatment to Finnish goods, the right of His Majesty's Government to levy special Customs duties under the Safeguarding of Industries Act. This reservation was considered necessary in the case of Finland as the Board anticipate that there are certain goods (notably paper) manufactured in that country in regard to which they may be called upon to put into force the provisions of Part II of the Safeguarding of Industries Act relating to the prevention of dumping resulting from depreciation of currency.

In the case of Lithuania, however, there are, so far as can be foreseen, no manufactured products (articles of food and drink being excluded in any case) in respect of which it is likely that applications will be received by the Board for the imposition of such special duties, and there is, therefore, so far as the Board are aware, no practical objection to His Majesty's Government entering into a commercial arrangement with Lithuania giving full most-favoured-nation treatment on both sides and containing no such reservation as was thought necessary in the case of Finland. Nevertheless, to safeguard the position of His Majesty's Government in this matter, the Board are of opinion that it is necessary to provide that the proposed arrangement shall be terminable at not more than three months' notice, so that it would still be possible, should the occasion arise, to make an Order under Section 2 (1) (b) of the Act.

Lord Curzon will observe that the accompanying draft exchange of notes applies to the United Kingdom only, and not to other parts of the Empire. It is presumed that there is no objection to an arrangement so limited when it is of a purely temporary character and probably destined to be superseded by a permanent treaty if and when de jure recognition is accorded to the Lithuanian Government.

* Sub-enclosure in No. 94 in Dominions No. 81.

Such a permanent treaty would, of course, have, in some form, to provide for application to the Dominions, Colonies, etc., though it is understood that the exact form of the appropriate provision in such a treaty has not yet been settled between your Department and the Colonial Office, and is to form the subject of an interdepartmental conference to be held shortly in accordance with the proposal contained in your letter of the 5th November.* Should, however, either the Colonial Office or the India Office desire that some provision should be made for extending the temporary arrangement to other parts of the Empire, Lord Curzon will, no doubt, arrange for the preparation, in consultation with the departments concerned, of the necessary paragraph for insertion in the draft exchange of notes.

In this connexion, I am to say that the Board presume that there is nothing resulting from the settlement with Ireland to preclude the use of the term the "United Kingdom" in future treaties and arrangements relating to Great Britain and Northern Ireland only.

Lord Curzon will recall, in connexion with the proposed commercial agreement with Latvia, that in despatch No. 247, of the 31st October, to His Majesty's Representative at Riga, the opinion was expressed that a settlement of claims of British subjects against the Lettish Government will be required before a Commercial Treaty could be signed. The Board presume that similar considerations will be borne in mind in connexion with the signing of an Agreement with Lithuania. So far as they are aware, there is only one case of importance outstanding at the present time, namely, the claim of Mr. Tilden Smith and the National Metal Bank against the Lithuanian Government. It is, however, understood that negotiations are going on between the two parties in this matter and that a satisfactory conclusion is not improbable.

There is possibly one further matter which might perhaps be borne in mind in this connexion, namely, the negotiations between the Marconi Company and the Lithuanian Government referred to in your letter of the 9th November for the grant of concessions in Lithuania in wireless matters. In view of the desirability of securing such concessions to British interests and excluding German concerns, the Board would suggest, subject to Lord Curzon's concurrence, that in any negotiations which might take place with the Lithuanian Government in the matter of the commercial arrangement, His Majesty's Representative might be instructed to bear in mind the desirability of securing the wireless concessions in question to the Marconi Company.

I have, &c.,

H. FOUNTAIN.

DRAFT EXCHANGE OF NOTES BETWEEN HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT AND THE LITHUANIAN GOVERNMENT RESPECTING COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

SIR,

IT being the desire of our respective Governments to establish close commercial relations between the United Kingdom and Lithuania, I have the honour to inform you that my Government is prepared to undertake on condition of reciprocity that British (Lithuanian) nationals, and goods, the produce or manufacture of the United Kingdom (Lithuania) shall enjoy in Lithuania (the United Kingdom) treatment which, subject to the special reservations referred to in paragraph 4 of this Note, shall be at least as favourable in all respects as that accorded to the nationals of, and goods the produce or manufacture of, the most-favoured foreign country. This treatment shall be accorded in all matters of commerce and navigation and as regards importation, exportation, and transit, and in general in all that concerns Customs duties and formalities and commercial operations, the establishment of British nationals in Lithuania (Lithuanian citizens in the United Kingdom), the exercise of commerce, industries and professions, and the payment of taxes.

2. British (Lithuanian) vessels shall enjoy in the ports, rivers, and territorial waters of Lithuania (the United Kingdom) treatment not less favourable than that accorded to Lithuanian (British) vessels or the vessels of the most-favoured foreign country, subject, however, to the right of the Lithuanian (His Britannic Majesty's) Government to reserve the coasting trade to Lithuanian (British) vessels.

* See No. 153 in Dominions No. 81.

3. The Lithuanian (His Britannic Majesty's) Government further undertake on condition of reciprocity to accord freedom of transit to persons, goods, vessels, carriages, wagons, and mails in transit to or from the United Kingdom (Lithuania) over Lithuanian territory (the United Kingdom) including territorial waters, and to treat them at least as favourably as Lithuanian (British) persons, goods, vessels, carriages, wagons, and mails respectively, or those of any other more favoured nationality, origin, importation or ownership as regards facilities, charges, restrictions and all other matters.

4. It is understood that nothing in this Agreement shall be held to confer any right or impose any obligation upon either party which might be in conflict with any general international convention to which the Lithuanian or His Britannic Majesty's Government is, or hereafter may be, a party.

5. Effect will be given immediately to the undertaking contained in this Note, and will continue to be so given until the conclusion of a definitive Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between the two countries, subject however to the right of either Party at any time to give notice to the other to terminate the arrangement, which shall then remain in force until the expiration of three months from the date on which such notice is given.

Enclosure 2 in No. 183.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1., 3rd February, 1922.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to refer to your letter No. C.R.T. 6500/21, of the 23rd December last, transmitting a provisional draft of the notes which it is proposed to exchange with the Lithuanian Government for the purpose of concluding a commercial agreement between the United Kingdom and Lithuania.

2. His Lordship concurs in the remarks of the Board regarding the possible bearing of the Safeguarding of Industries Act on the proposed agreement, and the desirability of granting full most-favoured-nation treatment on both sides; and also in the proposal that the agreement should be terminable at not more than three months' notice.

3. No decision has yet been reached regarding the formula to be employed providing for the adherence to permanent treaties of the Dominions, Colonies, etc., and this matter remains to be discussed by an interdepartmental conference. Steps are, however, being taken to ascertain from the India Office and the Colonial Office whether it is considered desirable that the temporary arrangement in question should be restricted in its application to the United Kingdom only, or whether some provision should be made for extending its scope so as to include other parts of the Empire if they should so desire. To cover this contingency, it is suggested that the following additions should be made to the draft exchange of notes:—

Firstly, an additional paragraph, worded as follows, should be inserted between paragraphs 3 and 4 of the draft note:—

"The foregoing stipulations will not be applicable to India or to any of His Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, or Protectorates beyond the seas, unless notice of accession to this arrangement shall have been given on behalf of India or any such Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate by His Britannic Majesty's Representative in the Baltic States before the expiration of _____ months from this date. Nevertheless, goods, the produce or manufacture of India or of any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, and Protectorates, will enjoy in Lithuania complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment, so long as India or such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate accords to goods the produce or manufacture of Lithuania, treatment as favourable as that accorded to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country."

Secondly, the following addition should be inserted at end of paragraph 5 of the draft note:—

"As regards India and the British Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, and Protectorates which may have acceded to this arrangement in virtue of the provisions of paragraph 4, either of our respective Governments shall have the right to terminate it separately on giving three months' notice to that effect."

It will be observed that the additional provisions proposed above are, to all intents and purposes, the same as those embodied in paragraph 4 and the last part of paragraph 5 of the Esthonian Agreement,* and it is suggested that the precedent established during the negotiations for the conclusion of that agreement, with regard to the notification of the accession of Dominions, etc., might with advantage be followed on this occasion.

4. His Lordship sees no reason at present to discontinue the use of the term "United Kingdom" in treaties and arrangements relating to Great Britain and North Ireland.

5. With regard to the Board's suggestion that the settlement of any outstanding claims of British subjects against the Lithuanian Government might be made the preliminary condition to the conclusion of any commercial agreement, I am to state that Mr. Tilden Smith, when recently discussing his claims in this department, made no complaint against his treatment by the Lithuanian Government, and it would appear reasonable to suppose that negotiations are proceeding smoothly between the two parties towards the attainment of a satisfactory settlement. While in full agreement with the general principle of the Board's suggestion, this department is unaware of any claims, other than that of Mr. Tilden Smith, which might be made the subject of negotiations. In these circumstances it is considered that there is not sufficient justification for instructing His Majesty's Minister in the sense proposed.

6. With regard to the Marconi contract, His Lordship feels unable to make any strong representations to the Lithuanian Government in view of the fact that the Company have already received the fullest possible measure of support, both here and in Lithuania, and in the opinion of His Majesty's Minister in the Baltic States the Marconi failures are largely due to the unsuitability of their representatives in those countries. This fact has been brought confidentially to the notice of the Marconi Company, who are understood to be taking steps to change their representative in Lithuania, and there would now appear to be reasonable prospects of an improvement in the Company's business relations with that country.

7. In connexion with the wording of the draft notes, I am to point out that the words "British nationals" are used in line 5 of the first paragraph, whereas the words "British subjects" appear in the last line but two of the same paragraph. It is considered preferable to employ the words "British nationals" in both instances, and it is proposed to amend the drafts accordingly.

8. I am to request that the Board of Trade will furnish their observations with regard to the amendments to the draft exchange of notes suggested in paragraph 3 of this letter.

I am, &c.,

J. D. GREGORY.

SIR,

Downing Street, 18th March, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3rd February,† regarding a proposed commercial agreement with Lithuania.

2. Mr. Churchill thinks it desirable that provision should be made for the accession, if desired, of the Dominions and Colonies, and he would suggest that the most convenient course would be to adopt throughout the agreement the form of words employed in the commercial agreement with Esthonia (Treaty Series No. 19 of 1920), with the substitution of the words "British subjects" for "British nationals," and the alteration of the period of notice from 6 months to 3 months, as proposed by the Board of Trade.

3. Mr. Churchill has considered whether any special provision is desirable to meet the special circumstances of Ireland, but, in view of the fact that the agreement would be terminable at three months' notice, he is of opinion that in the present case no special provision is necessary. The arrangement can (if desired) be reviewed on the establishment of the Irish Free State.

4. A copy of this letter is being sent to the India Office and the Board of Trade.

3. [His Britannic Majesty's] [the Lithuanian] Government further undertake on condition of reciprocity to accord freedom of transit to persons, goods, vessels, carriages, wagons and mails in transit to or from [Lithuania] [the United Kingdom] over [the United Kingdom] [Lithuanian territory], including territorial waters, and to treat them at least as favourably as [British] [Lithuanian] persons, goods, vessels, carriages, wagons and mails respectively, or those of any other more favoured nationality, origin, importation or ownership as regards facilities, charges, restrictions and all other matters.

4. The foregoing stipulations will not be applicable to India or to any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates beyond the Seas, unless notice of accession to this arrangement shall have been given on behalf of India or any such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate by His Britannic Majesty's representative in the Baltic States before the expiration of twelve months from this date. Nevertheless goods, the produce or manufacture of India or of any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions and Protectorates, will enjoy in Lithuania complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment, so long as India or such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate accords to goods, the produce or manufacture of Lithuania, treatment as favourable as that accorded to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, 22nd December, 1921.

THE memorandum of the 24th August, 1921,† containing the views of the Government of the United States concerning the Mandates for certain territories which, under the terms of the Treaties of Peace, ceased to be under the sovereignty of the enemy Powers, has received the fullest consideration of the British Government in concert with the Governments of the Allied Powers to whom those views were also communicated.

* No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

† Enclosure in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

The Government of the United States claims the right to take part in the disposition of these territories and raises, in this connexion, various points in regard to the consequences of the non-ratification by the United States of the Treaty of Versailles and of their non-participation in the war with Turkey.

In furtherance of the general principles governing the Mandates, as set out in the previous correspondence between the two Governments, the Government of the United States now submits for the consideration of His Majesty's Government certain modifications which it considers should be made in the texts of the British Mandates.

His Majesty's Government have the honour to state that they have never desired to deprive the United States of the fruits of a victory to which it contributed so generously.

They are quite willing to meet the wishes of the United States as regards the British Mandates, and it does not, therefore, seem necessary to enter into a detailed consideration of the general considerations contained in the American Note.

The co-operation of the United States in the making of peace was a necessary corollary of their co-operation in the War and in the victory. The Treaty of Versailles was the outcome of the co-operation. It was entered into by the Allied Powers upon the assumption that it represented the common views of all those who had taken part in its preparation after their combined effort to achieve the victory. It was upon the faith of this assumption that the Allied Powers undertook obligations, not only towards Germany, but also towards each other, and from which it is now impossible for them to escape.

The decision of one of the Allied and Associated Powers not to ratify the treaty does not modify the obligations which that treaty imposed upon those who have ratified it, nor release them from the pledges it contains; nor can they now enter into new engagements which would be inconsistent with its terms.

What is said above is pre-eminently true with regard to the overseas territories which formerly belonged to Germany. By the Treaty of Versailles, Germany renounced all her sovereignty over them; that renunciation was intended, as pointed out in the American note, to be indivisible; no part of that sovereignty remains to Germany to-day. But Germany parted with her sovereignty upon the terms laid down in the treaty. Among the conditions so laid down was the assurance that these territories would in future be administered by Mandatories on behalf of, and subject to, the general control of the League of Nations. By that engagement the Allied Powers are bound to stand; they are pledged not only to Germany, but to their own peoples to recognize and to accept the special rôle and function of the League of Nations in connexion with the Mandates over these territories; they can consent to no arrangement with any Power which is inconsistent with the pledges they have given.

In these circumstances His Majesty's Government put forward the following suggestions as calculated to meet the American proposals concerning the British Mandates in Central Africa. As regards the Mandates for territories in the Middle East, the position of such territories being still legally undefined, His Majesty's Government will make them the subject of a later note:—

1. The Government of the United States proposes that the words "citizens of States mentioned in the annex to the Covenant of the League of Nations" should be substituted for the words "nationals of States members of the League of Nations" in article 6 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, and in article 7 of the British Mandate for East Africa, in order that citizens of the United States may be covered by the provision.

In the first place this alteration would exclude from the provision States which, though not mentioned in the annex to the Covenant, have become members of the League since the date of the Treaty of Peace.

Secondly, it must be remembered that the aim of the Mandatory system is to make the Mandatory Power permanently responsible for the fulfilment of certain duties to those States which have adhered to the Covenant of the League of Nations. His Majesty's Government find it difficult, therefore, to accept a proposal that the terms of the Mandate should refer to any other States, whether by name or by collective definition.

It appears to His Majesty's Government that the best way to meet the wish expressed in the American note would be for the British Government to give to the Government of the United States a guarantee that citizens of the United States shall enjoy in all respects in the mandated territory the same rights and privileges as citizens of States members of the League of Nations, it being understood that they will be subject to the same conditions. This undertaking might be embodied in an exchange of notes.

The Government of the United States further expresses the wish that paragraph 3 of the same article shall stipulate that the Mandatory will not grant monopolistic concessions, and that the natural resources of the mandated territory shall not be monopolised by the Mandatory itself.

His Majesty's Government have no intention of granting concessions having the character of a general monopoly in the territories in question, nor of reserving such concessions to itself. It is necessary, however, in the interest of the mandated territory, that the mandatory should provide the territory with the fiscal resources which seem best suited to the local requirements and, for this purpose, should preserve the right to create monopolies for purely fiscal purposes. Similarly, it is necessary that the Administration should have the right to exploit, as it considers best, those of the natural resources which can be employed in the public interest, as, for example, water power, which could be utilized for the electrification of a railway or for lighting purposes.

The above considerations could be met by the insertion of the following new paragraph after paragraph 3 of article 6:—

Concessions having the character of a general monopoly shall not be granted. This provision does not affect the right of the Mandatory to create monopolies of a fiscal character or, in certain cases, to carry out the development of natural resources either directly by the State or by a controlled agency, provided that no monopoly of the natural resources for the benefit of the Mandatory shall result therefrom.

2. The Government of the United States asks that article 8 of the British Mandate for Tanganyika should be substituted for article 7 of the other African Mandates.

The object of the Administration at Washington is apparently to ensure as a right to American missionaries the freedom to exercise their vocation in Togoland and the Cameroons, which the British Government have given them hitherto in practice. This object can be achieved without making any change in the text of the Mandate. His Majesty's Government are prepared to give to the Government of the United States a similar guarantee as to equality of treatment, as is suggested above, as regards article 6.

His Majesty's Government are further prepared to declare that, in the mandated territories, missionaries shall have the right to acquire and possess property, to erect buildings for religious purposes, and to open schools, adding as a condition the words "in conformity with the local law."

The text of article 7 would, consequently, read as follows:—

"Subject to the provisions of any local law for the maintenance of public order and public morals, the Mandatory shall ensure in the territory freedom of conscience and the free exercise of all forms of worship, and shall allow all missionaries, nationals of any State member of the League of Nations, to enter into, travel and reside in the territory, for the purpose of prosecuting their calling, to acquire and possess property, to erect buildings for religious purposes, and to open schools, provided that they conform to the local law."

3. The Government of the United States asks for the addition to paragraph 2 of article 9 of the Mandate for Togoland and the Cameroons, of the words "provided always that the measures adopted to that end do not infringe the provisions of this Mandate," which occur in article 10 of the British Mandate for Tanganyika.

His Majesty's Government have no objection to this addition.

4. Finally, the Government of the United States expresses the wish that the consent of the United States shall be obtained before any alteration is made in the text of the mandates.

It would be difficult to insert in the mandate itself a provision of this nature as between the League of Nations and a Power which is not a member of the League. There is, however, nothing to prevent the Mandatory giving a separate undertaking to this effect.

In these circumstances the best method of satisfying the desire of the United States would appear to be that His Majesty's Government, as Mandatory, should give the American Government an undertaking that they will not propose nor accept any modifications in the terms of the mandates without previous consultation with the Government of the United States.

His Majesty's Government venture to hope that the Government of the United States will share the view that the wishes of the United States can be satisfied by means of an exchange of notes between the two Governments, without delaying the issue of mandates which it is undesirable further to postpone.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,].

Downing Street, 22nd April, 1922.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions Treaty No. 11 of the 28th March,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency.] [Your Royal Highness,] for the information of your Ministers, copies of a Note from the United States Ambassador on the subject of "B" Mandates and of the correspondence regarding the Mandate for Palestine mentioned therein.

I have, &c.,

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL.

Enclosure 1 in No. 187.

(No. 153.)

MY LORD,

London, 5th April, 1922.

IN Your Lordship's communication of 22nd December, 1921,† Your Lordship has stated the views of His Majesty's Government with respect to the British Mandates for East Africa, Togoland and the Cameroons. The question of the Mandate for Palestine has been discussed in Your Lordship's Note of 29th December, 1921, and in my Note No. 151 of 5th April, 1922.‡

As I stated in that Note, referring to my Memorandum of 24th August, 1921,§ the position of my Government must necessarily remain unchanged, since the views advanced were confined to the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the United States and the fair and equal opportunities which it was believed the United States should enjoy in common with the other Powers.

Your Lordship sets forth that it has never been the intention of His Majesty's Government to deprive the United States of any of the rights and privileges to which it is entitled as a result of the common victory over Germany. My Government had entertained no doubt that this was the attitude of Great Britain and welcomes the cordial assurance that His Majesty's Government is quite willing to meet the wishes of the United States.

In view of this understanding, my Government is convinced that there will be no difficulty or delay in the negotiation of a Treaty embodying the assent, upon appropriate conditions, of the United States to the terms of the draft British Mandates for East Africa and the British parts of Togoland and the Cameroons. As I have explained in my Memorandum of 24th August, 1921,§ the right of the United States in the territories to which Germany has renounced her title could not be disposed of without the assent of my Government and, for the reasons given in my Memorandum, the appropriate manner of expressing this assent would be through a Treaty. Such a Treaty could recite the articles of the Mandates, setting forth the engagements of the Mandatory, and should contain appropriate undertakings on the part of His Majesty's Government for the suitable protection of the rights and interests of the United States. This arrangement will, it is believed, obviate any objections such as those suggested by His Majesty's Government by reason of any obligations which the Allied Powers have assumed in the Treaty of Versailles, with regard to Germany and with regard to one another.

In this view, taking up the various points to which Your Lordship refers, it may be observed:—

* No. 186. † Enclosure in No. 186. ‡ Enclosures 2 and 3 in 187. § Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

(1) Discrimination.

In my Memorandum of 24th August, 1921,* I alluded to the provisions for equal commercial opportunity in Article 7 of the Mandate for East Africa and Article 6 of the British Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, and called attention to the fact that these provisions were not extended to the nationals of the United States. My Government does not desire to insist that the terms of the Mandates themselves, in their reference to the States, members of the League of Nations, and their nationals, should be altered. It will be sufficient to recite the terms of the above-mentioned Articles in the proposed Treaty, with the further undertaking that His Majesty's Government will guarantee to the United States and its nationals the same freedom from discrimination that the above-mentioned Articles of the Mandates give to the States, members of the League of Nations, and their nationals.

The Treaty should contain a general provision that the United States and its nationals should have and enjoy the benefit of all the engagements of His Britannic Majesty, defined in the Mandates, notwithstanding the fact that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations.

With respect to the matter of monopolistic concessions, my Government is gratified to note that His Majesty's Government has no intention of granting concessions having the character of a general monopoly in the territories in question, or of reserving such concession to itself. My Government has carefully noted the considerations advanced in Your Lordship's note regarding the advisability, however, of reserving to the Mandatory the right:

(1) To create monopolies for purely fiscal purposes, in the interest of the mandated territories, in order that the Mandatory should provide the territories with the fiscal resources which seem best suited to local requirements, and

(2) To develop such natural resources as can be employed in the public interest, as, for example, water power, which could be utilised for the electrification of a railway or for lighting purposes.

In view of these considerations my Government is prepared to approve the insertion in the Mandates, after the third paragraph of Article 7 of the British Mandate for East Africa and Article 6 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, of the following paragraph, with a few changes for the purpose of clarity, so that it will read as follows:

"Concessions having the character of a general monopoly shall not be granted. This provision does not affect the right of the Mandatory to create monopolies of a purely fiscal character in the interest of the territory under Mandate, and in order to provide the territory with fiscal resources which seem best suited to the local requirements; or, in certain cases, to carry out the development of natural resources, either directly by the State or by a controlled Agency, provided that there shall result therefrom no monopoly of the natural resources for the benefit of the Mandatory or its nationals, directly or indirectly, or any preferential advantage which shall be inconsistent with the economic, commercial and industrial equality hereinbefore guaranteed."

The changes above suggested are assumed, from the tenor of Your Lordship's Note, to be in accord with the intentions entertained by His Majesty's Government.

It is to be understood, of course, that the existing legal rights of American citizens or companies in British mandate territories are fully respected and safeguarded and that the Treaty will contain a suitable provision to this effect.

(2) Missionaries and Religious Freedom.

My Government is pleased to note that the intent of the Government of the United States, in its suggestions on this subject, expressly to assure American missionaries the right freely to exercise their vocation in Togoland and in the Cameroons, is recognized, and that His Majesty's Government is disposed to give to the Government of the United States a similar guarantee, as to equality of treatment, as is suggested with respect to Article 6 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, and further that His Majesty's Government is prepared to provide that in the mandated territories missionaries shall have the right to acquire and possess property, to erect buildings for religious purposes and to open schools. Accordingly, His Majesty's Government has proposed that the text of Article 7 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons should read as follows:

"Subject to the provisions of any local law for the maintenance of public order and public morals, the Mandatory shall insure in the territory freedom of conscience and the free exercise of all forms of worship, and shall allow all missionaries, nationals of any State, member of the League of Nations, to enter into, travel and reside in the territory for the purpose of prosecuting their calling, to acquire and possess property, to erect buildings for religious purposes, and to open schools, provided that they conform to the local law."

* Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

Upon the assumption that the Treaty will contain an appropriate provision by which the engagements of His Britannic Majesty, as defined in the Mandate, will run to the United States and its nationals, notwithstanding the fact that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations, this provision is acceptable to my Government with the following qualification: My Government suggests that the last clause of the proposed provision, "provided that they conform to the local law," may be omitted, as it appears to be superfluous, the entire clause being qualified by the opening clause, "subject to the provisions of any local law for the maintenance of public order and public morals." If it is intended, by the insertion of the additional clause, to give any broader application of the local law than is the purport of the opening clause, the addition would appear to be objectionable, as the local law in this respect should appropriately be limited to the maintenance of public order and public morals.

(3) Administrative Unions, etc.

It is noted that His Majesty's Government has no objection to the suggestion which has been made by my Government that there should be added to Article 9 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, the following words, corresponding to the provision of Article 10 of the British Mandate for East Africa, to wit: "Provided always that the measures adopted to that end do not infringe the provisions of this Mandate."

(4) Modification of Mandates.

My Government has observed the statement of Your Lordship in your Note of 22nd December,* that it would be difficult to insert in the Mandate itself a provision that the consent of the United States should be obtained before any alteration is made in the text of the Mandates. My Government does not believe such an insertion to be necessary, in view of the fact, to which Your Lordship adverts, that there is nothing to prevent the Mandatory giving a separate undertaking to this effect. Such an undertaking may be embodied in the proposed Treaty. It would not, however, be deemed by my Government to be sufficient to provide merely for consultation with the United States.

(5) Extradition.

It is assumed that His Majesty's Government will not object to a provision by which the extradition treaties between Great Britain and the United States, pending the making of special extradition agreements, shall apply to the mandated territories in question.

(6) The Japanese Government has agreed to furnish a duplicate, not a copy, of its Annual Report, which is to be submitted to the League of Nations on the administration of Mandate Territories. A provision to this effect is incorporated in the Treaty between the United States and Japan relating to the mandated islands in the Pacific north of the Equator, and it is desired that a similar provision should be included in the Treaty relating to the British Mandates for East Africa, Togoland and the Cameroons.

It may be added that the references in this communication, as in my Memorandum of 24th August, 1921,† are to the texts of the draft Mandates for British East Africa and the British parts of Togoland and the Cameroons, in the forms in which these drafts were published by His Majesty's Government. If His Majesty's Government is willing to meet the wishes of the United States with reference to the matters upon which concurrence has not already been indicated, the Government of the United States is prepared to enter immediately upon the negotiation of the necessary Treaty.

THE MARQUESS CURZON OF KEDLESTON TO MR. HARVEY.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, 29th December, 1921.

IN my note of the 22nd December* I explained the suggestions put forward by His Majesty's Government to meet the American proposals, concerning the British Mandates in Africa, contained in Your Excellency's memorandum of the 24th August, 1921,† and reserved for the subject of a later note a reply to the proposals in that memorandum relating to the territories under Mandate in the Middle East, their position still being legally undefined.

2. The position with regard to these territories has not materially changed. A state of peace with Turkey does not yet exist, and the Council of the League has not yet formally approved the provisions of the draft Mandates. The consequent delay and uncertainty causes His Majesty's Government considerable anxiety in Palestine. In these circumstances the peculiar religious and racial problems in that country and the particular conditions which attach to His Majesty's Government's acceptance of the Mandate as set out in the draft provisions are daily rendering more onerous the task which His Majesty's Government have assumed. For these reasons His Majesty's Government intend to invite the Council of the League of Nations, at the forthcoming session on the 10th January, formally to express their approval of the terms of the Mandate for Palestine as drafted in spite of the dependence of the final legalization of the status of the Mandatory upon the entry into force of a treaty of peace with Turkey. It is with this object in view, and in the confident hope that your Government will find it possible forthwith to withdraw any objection that they may still entertain to the provisions of the Mandate for Palestine, that I now have the honour to furnish you with the following observations upon paragraphs 4 and 5 of your note of the 24th August† in so far as they concern those provisions:—

3.—Paragraph 4. His Majesty's Government have no desire to challenge the statement of the United States Government that the victory over Turkey was bound up with the victory of the Allied and Associated Powers over Germany to which the United States so generously contributed. In particular, His Majesty's Government emphatically disclaim any intention on their part to discriminate against United States nationals and companies or refuse them full equality of commercial opportunity. His Majesty's Government have already explained, in the case of the African mandates, why they find it difficult to provide in the articles of the Mandates, which deal with these questions, for reference to any States, other than those of the League of Nations, whether by name or by collective definition, but they repeat the assurance given in my note of the 22nd December* to embody an undertaking with regard to the equal treatment of United States citizens and companies in an exchange of notes between our two Governments.

Paragraph 5.—(a). The difference in this respect between the Mandate for Palestine on the one hand, and the Mandate for Syria on the other, is due not to any difference of policy, but to the fact that whereas in Syria, which was taken over at the time of the Armistice, the native administration was found to be exercising its functions, the complete collapse of the Turkish administration in Palestine had compelled His Majesty's Government to set up courts, which in themselves provided for the time being such safeguards as are referred to in article 9 of the Palestine Mandate. No foreign tribunals exercise functions in Palestine at present, and there is therefore no question of their continuing to perform their duties. In that country adequate courts have already been established, and, under the constitutional proposals that are now under consideration for Palestine, His Majesty's Government have inserted a provision, in virtue of which foreign nationals, including of course citizens of the United States, shall have the right to be tried by a court with a majority of British judges, except in trivial cases, where this provision would lead to administrative inconvenience. In these cases foreign nationals will have the special right to appeal to a court composed with a majority of British judges. For the rest, His Majesty's Government are prepared to recommend to the League of Nations the extension of the provisions of article 28 of the Mandate for Palestine so as to ensure that, in the event of the termination of the mandatory régime, suitable arrangements are made to safeguard the rights secured by article 6 of the Mandate.

* Enclosure in No. 186.

† Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

(b) I have already dealt above with the question of possible discrimination against United States nationals and the undertakings which His Majesty's Government are prepared to give. The wording of article 18 of the Mandate for Palestine was very carefully considered, and I wish especially to point out that the explanation of the difference between the wording of the Syrian Mandate and that of the Palestine Mandate is to be found in the difference between French and British law; in the latter, the word "company" embraces all bodies which would properly be entitled to the protection of the article in question. His Majesty's Government feel sure that the United States Government, in the light of this explanation, will rest satisfied with the present wording of this article.

His Majesty's Government regret that they cannot see their way to adopt the suggested introduction into the Palestine Mandate of the provision of article 7 of the "B" Mandate for East Africa on the subject of concessions quoted in your memorandum of the 21st August.* The suggestion appears to His Majesty's Government to overlook the peculiar conditions existing in Palestine, and especially the great difference in the natures of the tasks assumed in that country and undertaken by them in East Africa. So far as Palestine is concerned, article 2 of the Mandate expressly provides that the Administration may arrange with the Jewish agency, mentioned in article 4, to develop any of the natural resources of the country in so far as these matters are not directly undertaken by the Administration. The reason for this is that, in order that the policy of establishing in Palestine a national home for the Jewish people should be successfully carried out, it is impracticable to guarantee that equal facilities for developing the natural resources of the country should be granted to persons or bodies who may be actuated by other motives. The general spirit of the Palestine Mandate, in the view of His Majesty's Government, seems to render unnecessary the insertion of an especial provision preventing the Mandatory from developing the natural resources of the country for his own benefit.

(c) His Majesty's Government are well aware of the great benefits which all the countries of the Near and Middle East have received from the unremitting and self-sacrificing efforts of American missionaries and educationalists. They have therefore carefully considered the proposal of the United States Government that safeguards for missionary enterprises in the Palestine Mandate should be expanded to render them equivalent to those accorded by article 8 of the British "B" Mandate for German East Africa. His Majesty's Government would, however, point out that the intention of article 9 of the Franco-British Convention of the 23rd December, 1920, was, so far as His Majesty's Government was concerned, in no way to restrict the extension of missionary enterprise in Palestine. The particular article in question was designed by the French Government to satisfy religious opinion in France regarding the future of the large French ecclesiastical and educational interests already established in Palestine and Mesopotamia.

For the rest, His Majesty's Government feel convinced that the religious and educational activities of the nationals of the United States are adequately safeguarded by the provisions of article 16 of the Mandate for Palestine. This article is, in fact, identical in substance with article 8 of the British Mandate for German East Africa. Should, however, the United States Government still desire some further guarantee, His Majesty's Government would be prepared to make a declaration in suitable terms regarding the rights of United States missionaries, as suggested in paragraph 2 of my note of the 22nd December† regarding the African Mandates.

(d) I have already dealt in paragraph 4 of my note of the 22nd December† with the suggestion of your Government that the consent of the United States Government should be obtained as to any modification of a Mandate once agreed upon, and I can only repeat in this note the same offer with regard to the modification of the "A" Mandates.

4. I reserve to myself a still further memorandum to Your Excellency regarding the Mandate for Mesopotamia. The position of His Majesty's Government in that country is peculiar. The course of events since the grant of the Mandate, and in particular the coronation of King Feisal and the appointment of the Arab Cabinet for that country, makes it necessary for His Majesty's Government carefully to consider the manner in which they can best fulfil the obligations undertaken by them in the draft Mandate. They are therefore forced to examine very carefully what,

* Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

† Enclosure in No. 186.

if any, modification of, or addition to, those obligations they are in a position to assume. I hope, however, to be in a position at an early date to give you the fullest assurance on this matter.

I have, &c.,

CURZON OF KEDLESTON.

Enclosure 3 in No. 187.

(No. 151.)

MY LORD,

London, 5th April, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to refer to Your Lordship's communications of 22nd December, 1921,* and 29th December, 1921,† on the subject of Mandates. The suggestions of the Government of the United States regarding the terms of the various Mandates were set forth in my memorandum of 24th August, 1921.‡ The position of my Government must necessarily remain as thus stated since the views advanced were confined to the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the United States and the fair and equal opportunities which it was believed the United States should enjoy in common with the other Powers.

In the communication of 29th December, 1921, Your Lordship drew particular attention to the situation in Palestine. A state of peace between the Allied Powers and Turkey does not yet exist. Nevertheless, the United States appreciates the desire of His Majesty's Government to remove the existing uncertainties regarding the terms of the Mandate for Palestine in order that a legalised civil administration may be established as early as possible. The Government of the United States is gratified to note Your Lordship's cordial expression with respect to the relation of the victory over Turkey to the victory of the Allied and Associated Powers over Germany and the contribution thereto by the United States and especially the emphatic disclaimer of His Majesty's Government of any intention on their part to discriminate against the United States or to refuse to its nationals and companies full equality of commercial opportunity. My Government had entertained no doubt that this was the attitude of His Majesty's Government.

In view of these assurances, my Government is convinced that there will be no difficulty or delay in the negotiation of a Treaty embodying the assent, upon appropriate conditions of the United States to the terms of the draft Mandate for Palestine. The capitulatory rights which the United States possesses in Turkey in common with other Powers rest upon the provisions of a Treaty; and consequently these rights can be modified or abrogated only by a treaty. For this reason alone a treaty would be desirable, apart from the general considerations mentioned in my memorandum of 24th August.‡ Such a Treaty could recite the Mandate in full and should contain appropriate undertakings on the part of His Majesty's Government for the suitable protection of the rights and interests of the United States. In this view, taking up the various points to which Your Lordship refers, it may be observed:

(1) Capitulatory Rights.

The assurances given in the Note of 29th December† regarding the establishment of adequate courts and the insertion of a provision in the proposed Constitution of Palestine by virtue of which nationals of the United States shall have the right to be tried by a court with a majority of British judges, except in trivial cases where this provision would lead to administrative inconvenience, when United States nationals will have the special right to appeal to a court composed of a majority of British judges, may be considered satisfactory in view of Anglo-Saxon traditions of Law.

It does not seem possible to accept, however, the suggestion which Your Lordship made with regard to the question of the revival of the American capitulatory rights in the event of the termination of the Mandate régime. As my Government now possesses these capitulatory rights, it should be provided that, in the event of the termination of the British Administration under the Mandate, there should be an immediate and complete revival of these rights. If the circumstances then justify their modification or suspension, the matter could readily be made the subject of suitable agreement.

* Enclosure in No. 186. † Enclosure 2 in No. 187. ‡ Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

(2) Discrimination.

I have already alluded to the assurance upon this point contained in Your Lordship's note. My Government do not desire to insist that the terms of the Mandate itself, in its reference to the States, members of the League of Nations, and their nationals, should be altered. It will be sufficient to have an undertaking, as suggested by Your Lordship, with regard to the equal treatment of the United States, its nationals and companies and this undertaking may be set out in the proposed Treaty. In other words, it should be provided that His Britannic Majesty will guarantee to the United States and its nationals the same freedom from discrimination that Article Eighteen of the Mandate gives to the States, members of the League of Nations, and their nationals.

The Treaty should contain a general provision that the United States and its nationals should have and enjoy the benefit of all the engagements of His Britannic Majesty defined in the Mandate, notwithstanding the fact that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations.

With respect to the matter of concessions, my Government has carefully noted the suggestions made by Your Lordship with respect to the peculiar conditions existing in Palestine, and, in view of these conditions, it is not the intention of my Government to insist on the inclusion of a provision in this Mandate against the granting of monopolistic concessions, as it is recognized that these may be justified to a certain extent for appropriate local development. The Government of the United States will be satisfied with the assurances which His Majesty's Government proposes to give in regard to equality of commercial opportunity. It should be clearly understood, however, that this position is taken by my Government solely in recognition of the special situation in Palestine, and is not to be considered as prejudicial in any respect to the contentions which have been made, and which are still being made, in connexion with other Mandate territories. It is also to be understood, of course, that the existing legal rights of American citizens or companies in Palestine are to be fully respected and safeguarded and that the Treaty will contain a suitable provision to this effect.

(3) Missionaries and Religious Freedom.

My Government has noted the provision of Article Two of the proposed Mandate for Palestine to the effect that the Mandatory shall be responsible "for safeguarding the civil and religious rights of all the inhabitants of Palestine, irrespective of race and religion."

And also the provisions of Article Fifteen, as follows:

"The Mandatory will see that complete freedom of conscience and the free exercise of all forms of worship subject only to the maintenance of public order and morals, is ensured to all. No discrimination of any kind shall be made between the inhabitants of Palestine on the ground of race, religion or language. No person shall be excluded from Palestine on the sole ground of his religious belief."

And also the following provision of Article Sixteen:

"The Mandatory shall be responsible for exercising such supervision over religious or eleemosynary bodies of all faiths in Palestine as may be required for the maintenance of public order and good government. Subject to such supervision, no measures shall be taken in Palestine to obstruct or interfere with the enterprise of such bodies, or to discriminate against any representative or member of them on the ground of his religion or nationality."

Also that the Mandatory accepts "all responsibility in connexion with the Holy Places and religious buildings or sites in Palestine, including that of preserving existing rights, or securing free access to the Holy Places, religious buildings and sites and the free exercise of worship, while insuring the requirements of public order and decorum."

In addition, my Government has noted the statement of Your Lordship that His Majesty's Government would be prepared to make a declaration in suitable terms regarding the rights of United States missionaries, that is, that they "shall have the right to acquire and possess property to erect buildings for religious purposes and to open schools, providing that they conform to the local law."

My Government is satisfied with these stipulations and assurances on the assumption, as already stated, that there will be a general provision in the proposed Treaty giving to the United States the benefits, rights and privileges which, under the proposed Mandate, are to accrue to the States which are members of the League of Nations.

(4) Modification of Mandate.

My Government has observed the statement of Your Lordship in your Note of 22nd December,* to which you refer in your Note of 29th December,† that it would be difficult to insert in the Mandate itself a provision that the consent of the United States should be obtained before any alteration is made in the text of the Mandate. My Government does not believe such an insertion to be necessary, in view of the fact, to which Your Lordship adverts, that there is "nothing to prevent the Mandatory giving a separate undertaking to this effect." Such an undertaking may be embodied in the proposed Treaty. It would not, however, be deemed by my Government to be sufficient to provide merely for consultation with the United States.

(5) As His Majesty's Government is aware, the Japanese Government has agreed to furnish a duplicate, not a copy, of its annual report, which is to be submitted to the League of Nations on the administration of Mandate territories. A provision to this effect is incorporated in the Treaty between the United States and Japan relating to the mandated islands in the Pacific north of the Equator, and it is desired that a similar provision should be included in the Treaty relating to the Mandate for Palestine.

(6) My Government assumes that any provisions which may be agreed upon as necessary to safeguard the rights and interests of the United States will apply to the territories mentioned in Article 25 of the Mandate.

If His Majesty's Government is willing to meet the wishes of the United States with reference to the matters upon which concurrence has not already been indicated, the Government of the United States is prepared to enter immediately upon the negotiation of the necessary Treaty.

In conclusion, I beg to convey additional information regarding the Philippine Petroleum Act, which was referred to in Your Lordship's Note of 28th February, 1921, and in my Memorandum of 24th August, 1921.‡ The Governor-General of the Philippines has reported that the Act was amended at the last session of the Philippine Legislature so that it now permits equality of treatment in accordance with the principle of reciprocity embodied in the United States General Leasing Law.

2. On the 6th of April, the United States Ambassador in Paris handed to the French Minister for Foreign Affairs a Note similar to the United States Ambassador's Note No. 153 of the 5th of April, on the subject of "B" Mandates, of which a copy was enclosed in my despatch under reference.

Enclosure in No. 188.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 29th April, 1922.

His Majesty's Government have had under careful consideration the Note* (No. 151) which you were good enough to address to me on 5th April, respecting the mandate for Palestine, and I desire to express their appreciation of the very friendly manner in which the Government of the United States has dealt with this question.

2. The proposals now made by the Government of the United States are acceptable to His Majesty's Government, who will be prepared to enter without delay into negotiations for the conclusion of a Treaty on the lines proposed.

3. I gather from Your Excellency's Note that the Government of the United States do not now desire to suggest any alterations in the text of the draft Mandate, with the possible exception of Article 8, dealing with the capitulations. His Majesty's Government agree that, in so far as the United States are concerned, the capitulations should only be suspended during the period of the British Mandate, it being left to the United States on the termination of the mandate to deal with the matter by negotiation with the authorities concerned. His Majesty's Government are at present disposed to consider that the most convenient means of providing for this would be to leave the text of Article 8 unaltered, but to provide in the Treaty that the United States do not accept the definite abrogation of their capitulatory rights, but consent to their suspension during the continuance of the Mandate. I should, however, be glad to know the views of the Government of the United States on this point.

4. I desire to inform you that a suggestion has been made that Article 28 should be modified so as to ensure that on the termination of the mandate, adequate provision should be made to safeguard the interests in judicial matters of foreigners whose capitulatory rights are abrogated by Article 8 as at present drafted. If this suggestion were adopted, the Article would read as follows:—

"In the event of the termination of the Mandate conferred upon the Mandatory by this Declaration, the Council of the League of Nations shall make such arrangements as may be deemed necessary, for protecting the interests of foreigners in judicial matters, and also for safeguarding in perpetuity, under guarantee of the League, the rights secured by Articles 13 and 14, and for securing under the guarantee of the League, that the Government of Palestine will fully honour the financial obligations legitimately incurred by the Administration of Palestine during the period of the Mandate, including the rights of public servants to pensions or gratuities."

This alteration would not, if the course suggested in paragraph 3 is adopted, affect in any way the interests of the United States, who would be free to make their own arrangements on the termination of the Mandate, and the consequent revival of their capitulatory rights, but I should be glad to learn that Your Excellency's Government would raise no objection to this amendment.

5. Inasmuch as the terms of the Palestine Mandate are to be recited in the Treaty, it is necessary that those terms should be definitely settled before the Treaty can be negotiated and signed. His Majesty's Government are, therefore, extremely anxious to obtain the approval of the Council of the League of Nations to the terms of the Mandate at their meeting on May 11th, even if the Mandate cannot be actually issued at present, and for this purpose they desire, with the consent of the United States Government, to lay the correspondence between Your Excellency and myself before the Council of the League, as showing that agreement between the two Governments has now been reached. I have, therefore, the honour to request the assent of the Government of the United States to this course being adopted, in which case the negotiations for the Treaty will be entered into as soon as the terms of the Mandate have been approved by the Council of the League.

6. Your Excellency will observe that the period before the meeting of the Council is short, and I should, therefore, be grateful if the views of Your Excellency's Government on the proposals made in this note, could be communicated to me at the earliest possible date.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 15th June, 1922.

YOUR Excellency is aware of the negotiations that have been proceeding between France, this country and the United States in regard to "B" Mandates, viz., mandates for certain ex-German territory in Africa. In this connexion I transmit herewith copies of a despatch addressed to His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris and of a despatch from Sir Cecil Hurst, with printed copies of the enclosures accompanying the latter.

2. The form of treaty with the United States, which forms the fourth enclosure, has been drawn up on the model of the Japanese-American Treaty of 11th February, 1922, in regard to Yap, and every effort has been made therein to meet the wishes of the United States Government. One or two of the Articles call for a few words of comment. Article 1 is similar to Article 1 of the Yap Treaty, but the word "concurs" has been preferred as more accurate to the word "consents." The latter conveys the incorrect impression that the mandate could not issue without the participation of the United States. Articles 3, 4 and 5 are reproductions of Articles 2 (2), 2 (4), 2 (5) of the Yap Treaty respectively. Article 6, in regard to Extradition, has been inserted in accordance with the paragraph numbered 5 in Mr. Harvey's note No. 153 of 5th April, 1922.||

3. I request that Your Excellency will take the necessary steps to negotiate at once with the United States Government treaties in the above-mentioned form covering each of the British Mandates. It is most desirable to reach an early and final settlement of these mandates, and His Majesty's Government hope to secure their formal adoption by the Council of the League at its next session on 15th July. It would be of great assistance if the concurrence of the United States Government in the terms of the Mandates could be obtained before the meeting of the Council.

4. The French Government are instructing your French colleague to approach the United States Government in a similar manner in regard to French "B" Mandates. It would be advisable therefore for Your Excellency to keep in touch with Monsieur Jusseraud and to act in concert with him. If, however, this despatch reaches you before your French colleague has received his instructions you should not on that account delay approaching the United States Government.

5. I enclose for Your Excellency's information a copy of a despatch which is being addressed to His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels.

Enclosure 6 in No. 189.

TEXT OF PROPOSED TREATY CONCERNING BRITISH PART OF FORMER COLONY OF GERMAN EAST AFRICA.

(This text to apply mutatis mutandis in the case of the British Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons).

Draft Treaty: East Africa.

Whereas, by Article 119 of the Treaty of Peace signed at Versailles the 28th of June, 1919, Germany renounced in favour of the principal Allied and Associated Powers all her rights and titles over her overseas possessions; and

Whereas, by Article 22 of the same instrument it was provided that certain territories which, as a result of the war, had ceased to be under the sovereignty of the States which formerly governed them should be placed under the Mandate of another Power and that the terms of the Mandate should be explicitly defined in each case by the Council of the League of Nations; and

Whereas, the principal Allied and Associated Powers agreed that His Britannic Majesty should exercise the Mandate for part of the former Colony of German East Africa; and

Whereas, the terms of the said Mandate have been defined by the Council of the League of Nations as follows:—

Terms of Mandate, Except the Preamble.

Whereas, the United States of America, by participating in the war against Germany, contributed to her defeat and to the renunciation of her rights and titles over her overseas possessions, but has not ratified the Treaty of Versailles; and

Whereas, the President of the United States is desirous of concurring in the British Mandate for part of the former Colony of German East Africa; and

Whereas, His Britannic Majesty as Mandatory for part of the former Colony of German East Africa is desirous of ensuring to the United States of America and its citizens the same rights in the said territory as they would enjoy if the United States were a Member of the League of Nations: The President of the United States of America and His Britannic Majesty have decided to conclude a Convention to this effect and have nominated as their plenipotentiaries..... who have agreed as follows:—

Article I:—

Subject to the provisions of the present Convention, the United States concurs in the administration by His Britannic Majesty, pursuant to the aforesaid Mandate, of the former German Territory described in Article One of the Mandate.

Article II:—

The United States and its nationals shall have and enjoy the benefit of all the engagements of His Britannic Majesty defined in the Mandate, including therein equality as regards commercial opportunity, notwithstanding the fact that the United States is not a member of the League of Nations.

Article III:—
Vested American property rights in the mandated territory shall be respected and in no way impaired.

Article IV:—

A duplicate of the annual report to be made by the Mandatory under Article Eleven of the Mandate shall be furnished to the United States.

Article V:—

Nothing contained in the present Convention shall be affected by any modification which may be made in the terms of the Mandate as recited above unless such modification shall have been assented to by the United States.

Article VI:—

8TH JULY. Your despatch No. 961.

In memorandum handed to me to-day Secretary of State proposes following modifications in draft treaty respecting East African mandate.

(1) Paragraph 1 preamble to treaty: Insert date of treaty after "Versailles," reason being that it is merely by custom that Peace Treaty is called Treaty of Versailles.

(2) After second paragraph of preamble insert following addition to paragraph: "whereas benefits accruing to United States under aforesaid Article 119 of Treaty of Versailles were confirmed by treaty between United States and Germany signed 25th August, 1921, to restore friendly relations between the two nations."

Purpose of this paragraph is simply to recite fact that Germany agreed to accord to United States rights and benefits stipulated for benefit of United States in Treaty of Versailles.

(3) Paragraph 4 of preamble. Delete words from "whereas" to "Powers" and substitute "whereas four principal Allied and Associated Powers, to wit: British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, agreed."

Memorandum points out that, as stated in American memorandum of 24th August, 1921,* assent of United States to exercise mandate over former possessions of Germany is not under constitutional system of United States exclusively within authority of the President. As United States have not agreed that His Majesty should exercise a mandate over former German colonies of East Africa they propose above substitution.

(4) Omit preamble from recitation of terms of mandate. This would avoid inclusion of recital in mandate that "principal allied and associated Powers agreed that a mandate should be conferred."

Memorandum points out that this is not an accurate recital.

(5) Omit paragraphs 2 and 3 immediately following recital of terms of mandate beginning "whereas President" and ending "League of Nations," and substitute single paragraph reading as follows "whereas Government of United States and Government of (? Great Britain) desire to reach a definite understanding with regard to rights of two governments and their respective nationals in aforesaid former colonies of German East Africa."

* Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

Memorandum points out that it is not disputed that four principal Allied and Associated Powers could have reached an agreement amongst themselves with regard to their interest in former German territories, but they could not by such an agreement, without consent of American Government, deal with interests of United States. Moreover, treaty between United States and Japan, which has now been ratified by both countries, uses word "consents" instead of "concurs." United States Government, however, do not desire to insist on a particular locution, and if word "concurs" is used in treaty it must be with distinct understanding that United States completely reserve their position with regard to their relations with former overseas territories of Germany. General purpose of treaty could be succinctly stated (as in case of Japanese treaty) by substitution proposed above.

6. Following is suggested as more appropriate form for Article 1 of treaty: "subject to provisions of present convention United States consents to (concurs in) administration by His Britannic Majesty pursuant to aforesaid mandate of former German territory described in Article 1 of mandate."

7. Article 2, for words between "enjoy" and "notwithstanding" substitute following, "all rights and benefits secured under terms of Article 3 to Article 10 inclusive of mandate, to members of League of Nations and their nationals."

Memorandum points out words "including therein equality as regards commercial opportunity" in Article 2 are unnecessary, in view of fact that purpose of Article (1 gr. omit.) to place United States and its nationals on footing of equality generally as regards all rights and benefits defined by mandate with all members of the League of Nations and their nationals.

8. Article 8 of mandate. Substitute "in" for "to" after (? "bill" ? "ensure") and omit words "subject to such control as may be necessary for maintenance of good government."

A limitation in such vague terms would cast a doubt on efficacy of entire Article and words "subject to provisions of any local law for maintenance of public order and public morals" seems sufficient for the purpose.

Memorandum adds that above applies, mutatis mutandis, to treaties and mandates in the case of Togoland and Cameroons.

8TH JULY. My immediately preceding telegram.

In handing me memorandum to-day, Secretary of State said that in his opinion word "concur" implied even more than "consent." Word "consent" was used in Yap treaty and he felt strongly that we should follow as closely as possible wording of that treaty. It had passed Senate and ratifications were about to be exchanged. Senate was only too ready to criticize any negotiations with foreign powers, and, he much regretted to say, in particular with Great Britain. A treaty with Great Britain would probably be closely and suspiciously scrutinized in Senate. It would be more difficult for Senate to criticize treaty with Great Britain if it were worded similarly to treaty which Senate itself had ratified.

I think that it is important that Mr. Hughes's warning should be borne in mind if we are to get treaty through Senate.

(No. 229 (R).)

YOUR telegrams Nos. 290 and 291 ("B" mandates).

I have received a copy of the memorandum from the American Ambassador. The modifications affect the preamble of the draft treaty, its operative clauses and the mandate itself.

It is difficult to accept American wording of preamble, but I foresee no difficulty in finding ultimately a satisfactory wording. The preamble, however, is not of immediate importance, and can be left until the mandates have been issued by the Council of the League.

As regards the operative clauses, we accept the American texts for Articles 1 and 2 with the addition at the end of Article 1 of the words "hereinafter called the mandated territory."

As regards the amendment of Article 8 of the mandate, we think the Americans have misunderstood our text, but to avoid a prolonged discussion we propose the following text based on Article 2 (1) of the Yap Treaty:—

"The Mandatory shall ensure in the territory complete freedom of conscience and the free exercise of all forms of worship which are consonant with public order and morality. Missionaries who are nationals of States Members of the League shall be free to enter the territory and to travel and reside therein, to acquire and possess property, to erect religious buildings, and to open schools throughout the territory; it being understood, however, that the Mandatory shall have the right to exercise such control as may be necessary for the maintenance of public order and good government, and to take all measures required for such control."

As the Americans have accepted this text in the Yap Treaty they can have no reasonable ground for refusing to accept it in the "B" Mandates.

Please communicate the contents of this telegram to the American government as soon as possible.

I am happy to think that I shall now be able to inform the Council of the League that the British and United States Governments are as one upon all questions of importance affecting the administration of mandated territories in Africa, and that there can therefore be no obstacle to the immediate issue of the mandates.

The French will no doubt also have been informed of the American suggestions, and I am informing them and the Belgians of my reply.

I have, &c.,
 H. G. CHILTON.

The Earl of Balfour, K.G., O.M.,
 &c., &c., &c.,

MEMORANDUM.

THE Secretary of State presents his compliments to the British Chargé d'Affaires, and has the honour to acknowledge his memorandum of 17th July, 1922, with reference to the proposed conventions and draft mandates for certain former German territories in Africa.

It is noted that His Majesty's Government accepts the suggestions of this Government with respect to Article 1 and Article 2 of the proposed treaty relating to British "B" Mandates, and this Government has no objection to the addition at the end of Article 1 of the words "hereinafter called the mandated territory."

With respect to Article 8 of the British mandate for East Africa, and Article 7 of the British mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, His Majesty's Government proposes to substitute a wording similar to Article II (1) of the American Japanese Treaty of 11th February, 1922, relative to the mandate conferred on the Emperor of Japan over former German Islands in the Pacific Ocean. The attention of His Majesty's Government should be called to the fact that in the quotation of Article II (1) of the American Japanese Treaty there are omitted from the fifth line of the second paragraph of the Article as quoted the words "to open schools," and it is assumed that the words "the mandatory" should be inserted in the same line before the words "shall have the right."

It will be noted, however, that the Article as suggested by His Majesty's Government, with the corrections indicated, contains a limiting clause which might be regarded as similar in effect to the phrase "subject to such control as may be necessary for the maintenance of good Government" which was suggested by His Majesty's Government for insertion in Article 8 of the East African mandate, and Article 7 of the mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons, and which this Government found it impossible to accept. The area of the territories in Central Africa and the conditions which exist and are likely to arise therein differ to such an extent from those of the islands in the Pacific north of the Equator that the Government of the United States, while willing to accept the wording proposed by His Majesty's Government for the "B" Mandates, would be compelled to ask the insertion in the proposed treaty relating to those mandates of an Article which has been proposed for insertion into the conventions respecting the mandates for Palestine and for Syria and the Lebanon, namely, the following:—

"Subject to the provisions of any local law for the maintenance of public order and public morals, the nationals of the United States will be permitted freely to establish and maintain educational, philanthropic, and religious institutions in the mandate territory, to receive voluntary applicants and to teach in the English language."

It has already been suggested to the French Government that if the phrase "subject to the supervision which would be necessary for the maintenance of good administration" is retained in Article 7 of the French "B" Mandates, the Government of the United States would consider it necessary that there should be inserted in the convention between the United States and France, relative to those mandates, the Article quoted above which was proposed for insertion into the conventions for Palestine and for Syria and the Lebanon. The importance of assurance for freedom to teach in English must be emphasized. It is considered necessary for the adequate protection of American educational, philanthropic, and religious institutions throughout the Central African territories that such a provision should be embodied in the conventions relating to the French mandates for certain of those territories; and for this reason, it is anticipated that His Majesty's Government will have no objection to the inclusion of a similar provision in the conventions relating to the British "B" mandates.

4TH AUGUST. No. 248. Your telegram No. 291.

After most careful consideration we should feel reluctant to agree to substitution of "consents" for "concurs," especially as in American memorandum of 8th July the United States Government express readiness to accept "concurs" subject to proviso that it will not prejudice American standpoint as regards former German colonies.

If you cannot obtain above solution, you may accept "consents" on the distinct understanding that its use will not prejudice our legal position arising under the various treaties with Germany.

I have therefore agreed to "consents" on the understanding laid down in ultimate paragraph of your telegram under reply.

Enclosure in No. 191.

THE MARQUESS CURZON OF KEDLESTON TO MR. HARVEY.

(Confidential.)

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, 30th September, 1922.

IN the last memorandum from the State Department regarding the British mandates for the administration of certain ex-German territories in tropical Africa and the proposed treaties relative thereto, it was stated that the United States Government desired the insertion in the treaties of the following article:—

"Subject to the provisions of any local law for the maintenance of public order and public morals, the nationals of the United States will be permitted freely to establish and maintain educational, philanthropic and religious institutions in the mandate territory, to receive voluntary applicants, and to teach in the English language."

2. The United States Government stated that they were willing to accept the wording proposed by His Majesty's Government for article 8 of the East African mandate, and article 7 of the mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons. This wording was adapted from article 2 (1) of the American-Japanese Treaty of the 11th February, 1922, relative to the mandate conferred on Japan in respect of the former German islands north of the equator in the Pacific Ocean.

3. The observations made in paragraph 3 of the American memorandum in regard to the wording of these articles of the mandates were evidently based on an imperfect text due, no doubt, to telegraphic errors. The text actually proposed by His Majesty's Government was as follows:—

"The mandatory shall ensure in the territory complete freedom of conscience and the free exercise of all forms of worship which are consonant with public order and morality. Missionaries who are nationals of States members of the League shall be free to enter the territory and to travel and reside therein; to acquire and possess property, to erect religious buildings and to open schools throughout the territory, it being understood, however, that the mandatory shall have the right to exercise such control as may be necessary for the maintenance of public order and good government, and to take all measures required for such control."

4. The United States Government explained that in proposing the insertion of the article mentioned in paragraph 1 they were actuated by consideration of the different conditions prevailing and likely to arise in Central Africa as compared with the islands under Japanese mandate, and by the presence in the article just quoted of a limiting clause which might be regarded as similar in effect to the phrase, "subject to such control as may be necessary for the maintenance of good government," which the United States Government had found it impossible to accept.

5. His Majesty's Government find it difficult to agree to the text of the article proposed by the United States Government. Article 2 of the tropical African mandates places upon the mandatory Power the responsibility for peace, order and good government, while the text of the suggested treaty article denies by implication to the mandatory Power the right to subject religious, philanthropic and educational work to the control necessary for the maintenance of good government, and thus, as regards these spheres of activity, divorces responsibility from power. His Majesty's Government have not the slightest intention to discriminate against United States nationals or institutions by subjecting their operations to restrictions not equally applicable to British nationals or institutions. They are, of course, anxious—and, indeed, they are bound under the mandates—to ensure to the utmost, not only the material, but also the moral well-being and the social progress of the inhabitants of the mandated territories. The religious and social condition of parts of the tropical African mandated territories is, however, such that to allow free access to those parts to Christian missionaries would be fatal to the requirements of good government, even if not to those of public order. For instance, in the north of the Cameroons, as in the neighbouring British protectorate of Nigeria, the native States are Moslem States, which, in the case of the Fulani States, owe their origin to a militant religious movement. Their law, their taxation, and their social system are based on the Koran. The British policy has been, and is, to rule the country through the native administrations, and to give these as much local autonomy as possible. To retain the confidence and goodwill of the native rulers is, therefore, essential, and His Majesty's Government are satisfied that, in present conditions and for a good many years to come, to require the natives to admit against their will Christian missionaries and missionary schools, whose object, whether avowed or not, would obviously be to subvert the Moslem religion, would be so resented by the natives and the native administrations that their confidence and goodwill would be no longer forthcoming; and the mandatory Power would be unable in consequence to carry out its obligations under article 2 of the mandates. His Majesty's Government hope, therefore, that the United States Government will not press their proposal.

6. His Majesty's Government are naturally quite willing that American missionaries should teach in the English language, and they are prepared to give a formal assurance to this effect so far as concerns the territories now in question, if value is attached to it. It would, however, seem unnecessary to do so by means of an article in the treaties, and it may be observed that such an assurance relating to territory under British administration, where the official language will be English, would be of little value as a precedent affecting territories where the official language will be different.

7. As regards the preamble of the African treaties it would seem desirable for the sake of general uniformity that the wording should follow the same lines as the preamble of the treaty regarding the British mandate for Palestine. A separate note on the subject of this treaty is being addressed to the United States Government, in which the reasons are set forth which lead His Majesty's Government to suggest a text different from that which has been proposed by the United States Government. On the hypothesis of this new draft being accepted, His Majesty's Government would propose for the preamble of the African treaties the following text, mutatis mutandis:—

Whereas, for the purpose of giving effect to the provisions of article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, a mandate for the administration of part of the former colony of German East Africa has been entrusted to His Britannic Majesty, and

Whereas, the terms of the mandate in respect of this territory have been defined by the Council of the League of Nations as follows:—

(Insert terms of mandate except the preamble), and

Whereas, His Britannic Majesty has accepted the mandate in the above terms in respect of the aforesaid territory, and has undertaken to exercise it on behalf of the League of Nations; and

Whereas, the Government of His Britannic Majesty and the Government of the United States of America are desirous of reaching a definite understanding as to the right of their respective Governments and of their nationals in the said territory;

His Britannic Majesty and the President of the United States of America have decided to conclude a convention to this effect, and have nominated as their plenipotentiaries who have agreed as follows:—

NOTE OF A CONVERSATION BETWEEN MR. BALFOUR AND MR. HUGHES, ON THURSDAY, 8TH DECEMBER, 1921, AT 4 P.M.

A MEETING took place this afternoon at Mr. Hughes' house between Mr. Hughes and Mr. Balfour, who was accompanied by Sir Maurice Hankey and Mr. Malkin. Mr. Hughes explained at considerable length the present situation of the United States Government in regard to the Pacific territories held under "C" Mandates. It appeared from what he said that the United States were perfectly prepared to recognize the allocation of the Mandates which had been made by the Powers and also the terms of the Mandates themselves, and to take such steps as were in their opinion necessary to regularize the position of the Mandatories, subject to their wishes being met on certain points. As regards the Japanese islands, an agreement had been practically reached, the most important provision of which appeared to be that the American Commercial Treaty should be applied in the mandated territories. The position was, however, not the same as regards islands south of the equator, as the United States had no commercial treaty which was applicable either to Australia or to New Zealand.

Mr. Hughes then mentioned the points as to which the United States Government desired their position to be safeguarded. The first of these, of course, was that their position in the territories in question should not be prejudiced by the fact that they were not members of the League of Nations, and that they should enjoy such privileges as members of the League would enjoy under the Mandate. Other points which he mentioned, such as the position of missionaries, where he wished the provision in the "B" Mandates to be adopted instead of that in the "C" should present no difficulty, provided that some means can be discovered of meeting the wishes of the United States Government without altering the terms of the Mandate, which have, of course, been passed and are actually in force. Points which are likely to cause more trouble are the desire of the United States Government that there should be a provision against the exclusive exploitation by the Mandatory of the natural resources of the territories which would seriously affect the position in Nauru. Mr. Hughes was clearly alive to these points, as he mentioned Nauru specifically. Another point of difficulty is the American contention that the provision of the Treaty relating to Samoa between the United States, Germany and Great Britain is still in force as between the United States and Great Britain, and that consequently American citizens can claim in the Mandated islands of Samoa the treatment guaranteed to them by the Treaty. This point has already resulted in a controversy which is still proceeding.

Mr. Hughes, however, did not raise these points as matters which required to be adjusted here and now. What he had in mind was that if the proposed quadruple treaty is signed while these matters are still in discussion it might subsequently be maintained that the discussion had been terminated by the Treaty, and that the United States had abandoned their contentions. What he therefore suggested was that there should be an exchange of notes at the time of the signature of the Treaty preserving in effect the status quo, so that the discussion on these points could continue just as if the Treaty had not existed. Mr. Balfour at once recognized that this was only equitable.

Immediately after the interview the purport of what had occurred was conveyed to Senator Pearce and Sir John Salmond, who agreed that the United States proposal was quite reasonable. Senator Pearce has telegraphed the facts to the Prime Minister of Australia, and as Sir John Salmond has no cypher, has asked that the message may be repeated to the Prime Minister of New Zealand. The draft of a note which the United States Government might address to the British Representatives at the time of the signature of the Treaty and which would be acknowledged and accepted by the British Representatives is annexed. Its terms have been approved by Mr. Balfour, Senator Pearce and Sir John Salmond; but it has not yet been shown to Mr. Hughes or any American representative. It may, however, be convenient to have it available in case the Americans do not produce a draft of their own.

M. P. A. HANKEY

Washington, D.C.,

Annexure.

SIR,

I wish to place on record the understanding of the United States Government that the conclusion of the agreement of to-day's date between the United States of America and the British Empire, France and Japan, does not prejudice in any way the matters in relation to the ex-German islands south of the Equator, which are at present the subject of discussion between our Governments, and that the said matters may continue to be discussed with a view to a satisfactory adjustment in precisely the same condition as before the signature of the agreement referred to.

Note.—The understanding referred to was embodied in the Declaration signed at Washington on the 13th December, 1921 (see pages 40 and 41 of Cmd. 1627).

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 17th May, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to my despatch No. 156 of the 11th April, 1922,* copy of a letter dated 17th May, 1922, to the American Vice-Consul in Charge, American Consulate-General, Cape Town, on the subject of the customs laws of the Union of South Africa and their application to South-West Africa.

I have, &c.,

ARTHUR FREDERICK,
Governor-General.

* No. 193.

(No. 21/284.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 17th May, 1922.
 WITH reference to Mr. Winslow's letter No. 610 of the 3rd April, I am directed to inform you that, subject to the ordinary preventive measures against the importation of plant and animal diseases, there is absolute free trade between the Union and the Mandated Territory of South-West Africa, as provided for under Section 27 of Act No. 35 of 1921.

The preferential rates of customs duty provided for in the Union Customs Tariff Act of 1914 on goods grown, produced, or manufactured in Great Britain and imported into South Africa are also applied to importations into the Mandated Territory of South-West Africa by virtue of the provisions of the Section of the 1921 Act above quoted.

Similarly goods grown, produced, or manufactured in Canada, Australia, or New Zealand enjoy the benefit of the preferential tariff rates on importation into South-West Africa by virtue of the Governments of those Dominions having reciprocal tariff agreements with the Government of the Union.

Also participating in the Union's free trade relations with South-West Africa are Basutoland, Swaziland, the Bechuanaland Protectorate, Southern Rhodesia and Northern Rhodesia within the Zambesi Basin, between the respective Administrations of which territories customs agreements subsist with the Union of South Africa. I hope shortly to be able to forward copies of these agreements.

Other than as stated, no goods grown, produced, or manufactured in the British Empire enjoy preferential customs rates in South-West Africa.

I have, &c.,

B. E. H. CLIFFORD,
 Secretary to the Governor-General.

(Confidential.)

MY LORD, Downing Street, 18th August, 1922.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions Treaty No. 30 of the 1st September, 1921,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, a copy of correspondence with the United States Ambassador on the subject of "C" Mandates.

I have, &c.,

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL.

Enclosure 1 in No. 195.

(No. 318.)

MY LORD, London, 26th July, 1922.

IN my memorandum of 24th August, 1921,† on the subject of Mandates, I included, pursuant to the instructions of my Government, the following suggestions regarding the draft Mandates for the so-called "C" Mandate territories other than Yap:—

(A) That Article 5 should be changed so as to embrace nationals of the United States, and that it would be preferable to avoid ambiguity as to educational and charitable activities of missionaries to have in this Article the same provision as in Article 8 of the British "B" Mandate for German East Africa.

(B) That it was desired that the Mandatories should guarantee to the United States most-favoured-nation treatment in all "C" Mandate territories, reserving, however, the present special treaty rights of the United States with respect to German Samoa.

* No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

† Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

(c) There should be a provision similar to that proposed in the other forms of Mandate prohibiting monopolistic concessions or the monopolizing of natural resources by the Mandatory.

(d) That as in other cases any modification of the Mandate should be subject to the assent of the United States.

In the communications which my Government has thus far received on the subject of Mandates no direct references have been made to the above points. Your Lordship set forth in Notes of 22nd December and 29th December, 1921,* that it has never been the intention of His Majesty's Government to deprive the United States of any of the rights and privileges to which it is entitled as a result of the common victory over Germany, and in particular that His Majesty's Government disclaim any intention to discriminate against United States nationals and companies. In view of these cordial assurances my Government has assumed that there would be no disposition to deny to the United States in the "C" Mandate territories any guarantees which may be appropriate for the safeguarding of the present or prospective American interests in those territories, and in particular that no action would be taken prior to the assent of the United States to the Mandate, which would be discriminatory or otherwise contrary to the spirit of the expected guarantees.

Nevertheless certain circumstances and action have recently been brought to the attention of my Government which, in the absence of correspondence on the subject of "C" Mandates since my memorandum of 24th August last,† appear to my Government to justify an immediate inquiry.

The circumstances and action to which reference is made may be briefly summarized as follows:—

(1) In my Memorandum of 24th August† I stated that the Government of the United States had protested against the discriminatory tariff imposed by New Zealand in violation of the Treaty concluded at Washington 2nd December, 1899. Subsequently further representations were made and the Embassy was informed some weeks ago that the matter was still under discussion with the New Zealand Government. In the meantime, however, there has been, so my Government is informed, no suspension or repeal of the discriminatory duties. Although the treaty rights of the United States are in this instance controlling, my Government believes that, apart from these rights there should be prior to the assent of the United States to the mandate no discrimination of any kind in the mandate territory against the citizens or commerce of the United States.

(2) Somewhat similar action appears to have been taken with respect to former German South West Africa. It is understood that an Act to amend the tariffs of the Union of South Africa, published in the South African official Gazette of 30th May, 1921, and reported to have come into force 7th June, 1921, contemplates that this mandate territory should be regarded for Customs and Excise purposes as a part of the Union which it is understood accords certain tariff preferences to other parts of the British Empire. The result of this legislation would be discrimination against the United States. If it is the purpose of the Union of South Africa to keep legislation of this character in force the Government of the United States feels that it must request for its goods imported into South West Africa any benefits or preferences accorded to any other similar goods.

(3) The Governor-General of the Australian Commonwealth on 22nd February, 1922, proclaimed certain amendments to the regulations under which the Treaty of Peace (Germany) Act, 1919-1920, providing for the sale of enemy property and apparently applicable to such property in the mandate territory of New Guinea. The amended regulations contain the following provisions: "The Custodian shall not sell any property to any purchaser other than to

(a) A person who is a soldier within the meaning of Australian Soldiers' Repatriation Act, 1917-1920, or who is a natural-born British subject.

(b) A company in which the majority of the shares are held by persons who are natural-born British subjects and of which the Articles of Association contain a provision prohibiting the sale or transfer of shares in the company to persons who are not natural-born British subjects.

(c) A company registered in any part of His Majesty's Dominions in which the majority of the shares is held by persons who are natural-born British subjects and which is approved by the Attorney-General."

The effect of such provisions would be to discriminate against American nationals and companies who might desire to participate in the purchase of the property concerned.

* Enclosure in No. 186 and Enclosure 2 in No. 187.

† Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

(4) It appears that on 22nd November, 1921, an official statement was made in the Australian Parliament regarding oil deposits in mandate New Guinea indicating, if the statement has been correctly transmitted to my Government, that it was at that time the purpose to reserve all such deposits for the exclusive use of the authorities administering the mandate. Previous to this the feeling was expressed in the Australian Parliament that under Class "C" mandates such as this of New Guinea the mandatory might impose whatever restriction it pleased upon both men and goods. Statements of this tenor are mistaken if it is assumed, as my Government has been inclined to do, that the views of the Government of the United States regarding mandates and the acceptance in general of these views by His Majesty's Government had not at that time been made known to the officials of the Commonwealth. My Government has not been made aware, however, of any subsequent correction of these statements or of any further announcements of a more reassuring nature; and American interests are left in uncertainty regarding the possibility of participation in certain important branches of economic activities in New Guinea.

(5) In previous correspondence I have called Your Lordship's attention to the Agreement by the Japanese Government to furnish a duplicate not a copy of its annual report which is to be submitted to the League of Nations on the Administration of the mandate territories. A provision to this effect is incorporated in the Treaty between the United States and Japan relating to the Mandated Islands in the Pacific North of the Equator, and His Majesty's Government has agreed to the insertion of a similar provision in the proposed Treaty relating to Palestine. It is assumed accordingly that there will be no objection to following a similar procedure with regard to the reports on the Administration of the "C" mandate territories administered by the Union of South Africa, the Commonwealth of Australia, and New Zealand. Pending the conclusion of a definite agreement regarding all of the "C" mandates my Government would be glad to receive duplicates of the reports submitted to the League of Nations on the administration of these territories.

It is hoped that His Majesty's Government will find it possible at an early date to convey to my Government the desired assurances on the points raised by my Government with regard to the "C" mandates and embodied in my Memorandum of 24th August,* and that until an appropriate treaty is concluded relating to these territories, no action will be taken of a monopolistic character or discriminating against American nationals and companies or otherwise prejudicial to American rights and interests.

Counsellor of Embassy.

2. His Majesty's Government will give most careful consideration, in consultation with the Governments of the Dominions concerned, to the desiderata of the United States Government, and I shall have the honour to acquaint you with their views in due course.

30TH AUGUST. Confidential. My despatch 1st September, 1921, Dominions Treaty No. 30, Confidential.* Further note received from United States Ambassador on subject of C Mandates of which copies enclosed in my despatch 18th August, Confidential.† Following is summary:—

Begins: Government of United States of America repeat four suggestions made in memorandum 24th August, 1921,‡ and quote statement of Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in notes of 22nd December, 29th December¶ (of which copies enclosed in my despatches Dominions Treaty No. 11 of 28th March and No. 13 of 22nd April) that it has never been intention of His Majesty's Government to deprive United States of rights and privileges to which entitled as result of common victory over Germany and in particular that they disclaim intention to discriminate against United States nationals and companies. In view of these assurances Government of United States America assumed that there would be no disposition to deny to United States in C Mandate territories any guarantees appropriate for safeguarding present or prospective United States interests and in particular that no action would be taken prior to assent of United States to Mandate which would be discriminatory or otherwise contrary to spirit of expected guarantees. Nevertheless certain circumstances recently brought to notice which appear to United States Government to justify immediate inquiry. As to these am telegraphing†† separately. United States Government also refer to Japanese agreement to furnish duplicate and not copy of annual report to be submitted to League on administration of mandated territories, and assume no objection to similar procedure as regards C Mandate territories administered by Dominions. Pending definite agreement they would be glad to receive duplicates of reports submitted. United States Government hope that until treaty concluded relating to C Mandate territories, no action will be taken of monopolistic or discriminatory character or otherwise prejudicial to United States rights and interests. Ends.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Wellington, 2nd November, 1922.

WITH reference to Mr. Churchill's Confidential despatch of the 18th August,* relative to the claims of the United States Government in connexion with the ex-German territories administered under type "C" Mandates, I have the honour to inform Your Grace that as the despatch raises questions in which the Commonwealth of Australia, as Mandatory for ex-German New Guinea and the Solomons, the Union of South Africa, as Mandatory for ex-German South West Africa, and the Dominion of New Zealand, as Mandatory for ex-German Samoa, are equally interested, my Ministers would be glad if the points raised by the United States may be temporarily shelved until they have been considered by the Imperial Conference, which Mr. Massey understands it is proposed to hold next year. This course, my Prime Minister informs me, has already been recommended to the Foreign Office by the Honourable Sir Francis Bell, Attorney-General for New Zealand, during his recent visit to England.

(2) Position of Mandated Territories in relation to Treaties.

No. 202.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 203.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th February, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 21st October, 1921,† regarding certain questions raised by the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia as to the position of territories administered under mandate.

2. Mr. Churchill concurs in the views expressed in paragraph 2 of your letter, but as regards paragraphs 3 and 4 he desires me to offer the following observations.

3. It is stated in paragraph 3 of your letter that territories administered under "C" Mandates "are to be administered as integral parts of the territory of the Mandatory." Similarly, in paragraph 3 of your letter of the 12th September, 1921,‡ regarding the introduction of a preferential tariff in Western Samoa, it is stated that Article XXII of the Covenant of the League of Nations lays down that territories administered under "C" Mandates "should be regarded as and administered as integral portions of the Mandatory." The actual wording of Article XXII of the Covenant is "can be best administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory," while the wording of Article II of the Mandates is "the Mandatory shall have full power of administration and legislation over the territory as an integral portion of his territory."

4. As stated in the letter from this Department of the 19th May, 1921,§ regarding the Anglo-Persian Agreement of the 21st March, 1920 (to which no reply has been received), Mr. Churchill's view is that the territorial application of commercial Treaties with Foreign Powers is settled in each case by the terms of the

* No. 196. † No. 162 in Dominions No. 81. ‡ No. 166 in Dominions No. 81. § No. 206 in Dominions No. 81.

Treaty itself. Such Treaties only apply outside His Majesty's Dominions in the case of Protectorates if special provision in that behalf is made in the Treaties, and then only if the Protectorates in question have specially adhered. The view which His Majesty's Government have taken of the provision in Article II of the "C" Mandates empowering the Mandatory to administer the mandated area as an integral portion of his territory is that it was intended to free the Mandatories from any obligation to grant equal opportunities of trade and commerce to the members of the League of Nations. The provision merely defines the nature and extent of the powers conferred on the Mandatory, and in this connexion it should be borne in mind that none of the laws of a Mandatory power apply automatically to territory administered under a "C" Mandate, but such laws must be specially applied. Thus in Section 13 of the Commonwealth New Guinea Act, 1920, it was provided that "except as provided in this or any Act, the Acts of the Parliament of the Commonwealth shall not be in force in the territory unless expressed to extend thereto, or unless applied to the Territory by Ordinance made by the Governor-General under this Act." For the action taken under this section, I am to invite attention to the New Guinea Laws Repeal and Adopting Ordinance, of which a copy is enclosed.*

5. It is true that in recent correspondence† with the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa regarding the application of the Arms Traffic Convention one of the reasons advanced by the Union Government in favour of the exclusion of South West Africa from the prohibited zone was that Article II of the Mandate for South West Africa "distinctly provides that that territory shall be an integral portion of the Union." It is, however, doubtful whether it was intended that these words should be construed in a sense which would support the view put forward in your letter under acknowledgment. On the contrary, in recent correspondence‡ as to the application to Mandated territory of Extradition Treaties, the Union Government specifically asked that Extradition Treaties in future should contain some provision under which they could be made applicable to territories administered by the self-governing Dominions under Mandates. Lord Curzon concurred in the view that such provision would be desirable (see your letter of the 18th January, 1921§), and on the point being put to them the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand also expressed concurrence. If the theory advanced in your letter under acknowledgment is accepted, such provision would, of course, be unnecessary, as Extradition Treaties in force in any of the Dominions concerned would automatically be applicable to territories administered by them under "C" Mandates.

6. Reference may also be made to the provisions of the recent Union Customs and Excise Duties Amendment Act, 1921, Section 27 of which provides that "the Mandated territory of South West Africa shall, for the purpose of the collection of Customs and Excise Duties, be regarded as a part of the Union."

7. There would further be practical difficulties in the way of the application of the doctrine, set forth in your letter, to New Zealand. These difficulties arise from the Anglo-American Agreement of 1899 regarding Samoa, which forms the subject of your letter of the 12th September, 1921,|| and previous correspondence. If it is held that Western Samoa should be treated as part of New Zealand for Treaty purposes, it would seem necessary to extend the national rights claimed by the United States in Western Samoa (including participation in the British preferential tariff) to all countries entitled to most-favoured-nation rights in New Zealand.

8. Again, in the case of Australia, it will be remembered that special arrangements have usually to be made in relation to the position of Papua and Norfolk Island as regards commercial Treaties. These territories do not form part of the Commonwealth, but are under its authority, and are, in fact, administered under the same section of the Commonwealth Constitution Act as is New Guinea. It has been the consistent policy of the Commonwealth Government during recent years to free itself, Papua, and Norfolk Island, from commercial Treaty obligations already applicable. It can hardly be expected that the Commonwealth Government would welcome the view that such commercial Treaties as still remain applicable have been automatically extended to New Guinea by the terms of the Peace Treaty.

* Ordinance 1 of 1921. † See No. 57 in Dominions No. 81. ‡ See No. 173 in Dominions No. 75. § 3061; not printed; its effect is shown in Nos. 95 and 96 in Dominions No. 81. || No. 166 in Dominions No. 81.

9. Finally, the view put forward in your letter appears to imply that any Power enjoying any form of national rights under Treaty in the Mandatory Dominions, e.g., Italy, has similar rights in the territory mandated to them. This view would appear incompatible with that set out in paragraph 4 above as to the meaning of the provision in the "C" Mandates for the administration of the Mandated territory as an integral portion of the territory of the Mandatory. If it was considered impossible to impose on the Mandatory the obligation to grant equal opportunities for trade, it could hardly have been intended to compel him to differentiate between foreign countries according to the accident of his previous Treaty system.

10. For the above reasons it is hoped that Lord Curzon may now find himself able to concur in Mr. Churchill's view that existing general commercial Treaties do not extend to Mandated Territory unless special arrangements are made, and that any future Treaties similarly would not extend to such territory unless it were specifically mentioned or unless notification of adherence were given in respect of it. In this connexion it is observed that in Article 5 (d) of the Agreement between the United States of America and Japan relative to Mandated Territories in the Pacific Ocean, it is agreed that "the Treaties between the United States and Japan now in force shall apply to the mandated islands." It would appear, therefore, that the Japanese Government do not take the view that treaties applicable to Japan necessarily apply to the territories mandated to Japan.

11. As regards paragraph 4 of your letter, Mr. Churchill understands the intention to be that, apart altogether from Treaties, foreigners are entitled, in territories administered under "C" Mandates, to all rights and privileges enjoyed in fact in the Mandatory's territory. This cannot be the case, as such right must rest on law, and the "C" Mandates (except that for Nauru, in which no reference is made to the application of the Laws of the Mandatory) expressly recognized that the laws of the Mandatory need only be applied subject to such local modifications as circumstances may require (Article 2). Whether, however, the matter is viewed from the standpoint of rights under Treaty or rights under law, difficulty must arise in connexion with the case of Nauru, which is mandated to the British Empire and not to any specific portion of the British Empire, and similar difficulty would exist with regard to New Guinea and South West Africa, since the rights of foreigners, whether under Treaty, or under law apart from Treaty, vary in the Union of South Africa from Province to Province, and in the Commonwealth from State to State.

12. Further, it seems to Mr. Churchill difficult to confine discussion of the question to rights and privileges. If it is held that foreigners are entitled in a territory administered under "C" Mandate to the rights and privileges which they enjoy in fact in the Mandatory's own territory, it would seem to follow that they are also necessarily subject to the same disabilities and restrictions to which persons of their nationality are subject in the territory of the Mandatory, and, as indicated in the preceding paragraph, difficulties would then arise as to the nature of the disabilities, etc., applicable.

13. If Lord Curzon should be unable to concur in the above views, Mr. Churchill would be prepared to consult the Dominion Governments on the matter. Without their concurrence it is, of course, clearly impossible to adopt, as a policy, the views outlined in your letter. Mr. Churchill would, however, in that event, be grateful to receive for communication to the Dominion Governments a full statement of Lord Curzon's views, and the reasons advanced in support of them, and he would ask that in any such statement special mention should be made of the Treaty position of Nauru, with particular reference to the difficulties mentioned in paragraphs 11 and 12 of this letter.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 25th April, 1922.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to refer to your letter of the 9th February last* regarding the application to territories administered under "C" mandates of treaties to which the mandatory is a party.

2. Lord Curzon is not yet wholly convinced that the view put forward in your letter is correct, but in view of the great importance attached to it by the self-governing Dominions he is prepared to refrain from disputing it. If the action of any Dominion in this respect were challenged by a foreign power, the latter would presumably lodge a complaint with the League of Nations, either immediately, or after failing to obtain satisfaction through the diplomatic channel; and the point would then come before the Council for decision. With a view to his being the better prepared to meet any eventual protest, the Secretary of State will be glad to accept Mr. Secretary Churchill's offer to obtain the considered views of the Governments of the Dominions.

SIR,

Downing Street, 11th May, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th April† regarding the application to territories administered under "C" mandates of treaties to which the mandatory is a party.

2. It will be observed that in paragraph 13 of the letter from this Department of the 9th February* Mr. Churchill asked that, if it were desired that the Dominion Governments should be consulted on this subject, he might be furnished, for communication to them, with a full statement of Lord Curzon's views, and the reasons advanced in support of them, with particular reference to the case of Nauru which is mandated to the British Empire. It is clearly desirable, if the Dominion Governments are to be consulted, that they should be in possession of a full statement of the arguments which can be advanced on both sides of the question, in order to enable them to form a judgment. As, however, Lord Curzon does not now wish to press the view expressed in your letter of the 21st October, 1921,‡ Mr. Churchill would suggest that communication with the Dominion Governments might be deferred until the question arises in a concrete case.

3. If Lord Curzon concurs in this proposal, it would hardly seem necessary to reply in detail to the despatch from the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia, a copy of which was enclosed in the letter from this Department of the 6th October, 1921.§

4. A separate letter will be addressed to you with regard to the Treaty rights of the United States in Western Samoa, which formed the subject of your letter of the 3rd May.||

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant,* regarding the application to territories administered under "C" mandates of treaties to which the mandatory is a party, and to state that His Lordship raises no objection to the postponement, as suggested by Mr. Secretary Churchill, of an inquiry of the Governments of the overseas Dominions as to their views on the subject.

2. With regard to paragraph 3 of your letter Lord Curzon presumes that the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia will be informed, if this has not already been done, on the contents of the letter from this Department of the 21st October last† so far as it related to the issue of passports to natives of territories administered under Mandate.

MY LORD.

Downing Street, 27th June, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have had under consideration your despatch No. 269, of the 1st August, 1921,‡ regarding the international status of Mandated Territories.

2. As regards the grant of passports to natives of these territories, it will be observed that Article 127 of the Treaty of Versailles provides that the native inhabitants of the former German Colonies shall be entitled to the diplomatic protection of the Government exercising authority over the territory. Accordingly, the natives are entitled to passports as British protected persons, and in actual practice the Government exercising authority over the territory decides what persons are entitled to such passports. In this connexion I would invite reference to Chapter XXVI. of the Revised Consular Instructions, of which copies were enclosed in my despatch Dominions No. 500 of the 16th December, 1921.§

3. Your Ministers will be aware that the Permanent Mandates Commission|| has been asked by the Council of the League of Nations to examine the question of the nationality of inhabitants of territories administered under B and C Mandates.

4. A note has been made of your Ministers' desire to be kept informed of any questions which may arise concerning the rights of foreigners under treaties. It will have been observed that in the Treaty between the United States of America and Japan, relative to Mandated Territories in the Pacific Ocean, of which copies were enclosed in my despatch Dominions No. 100 of the 28th March,¶ provision was inserted in Article 2 (3) by which it was agreed that existing Treaties between the United States and Japan should be applicable to the Mandated Islands. There was also a short discussion at the 9th Meeting of the First Session of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the question of the application of Labour Conventions to South West Africa, and the territories mandated to Japan (page 46 of League of Nations paper C. 416 M. 296, 1921, vi.).

5. I might also mention that in accordance with the correspondence ending with your Confidential despatch of the 13th June, 1921, steps are being taken for the insertion in future Extradition Treaties, of a provision under which they may be made applicable to territories administered by the self-governing Dominions under Mandate.

I have, &c.,

Note.—The possibility of making provision for the accession of Mandated Territories to Commercial Treaties was subsequently discussed between the Departments concerned, and as a result it was decided that the Articles in the Model Draft Commercial Treaty dealing with the accession and withdrawal of territories outside the United Kingdom should in future read as follows:—

Article 21. The stipulations of the present Treaty shall not be applicable to India or to any of His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, or Protectorates, unless notice is given by His Britannic Majesty's Representative at _____ of the desire of His Britannic Majesty that the said stipulations shall apply to any such territory.

Nevertheless, goods produced or manufactured in India or in any of His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, or Protectorates shall enjoy in _____ complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment so long as goods produced or manufactured in _____ are accorded in India or such self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate treatment as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country.

Article 22. The terms of the preceding Article relating to India and to His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, and Protectorates shall apply also to any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty.

Article 23. The present Treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications shall be exchanged at _____ as soon as possible. It shall come into force immediately upon ratification, and shall be binding during _____ years from the date of its coming into force. In case neither of the Contracting Parties shall have given notice to the other, twelve months before the expiration of the said period of _____ years of its intention to terminate the present Treaty, it shall remain in force until the expiration of one year from the date on which either of the Contracting Parties shall have denounced it.

As regards, however, India or any of His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, or Protectorates, or any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty, to which the stipulations of the present Treaty shall have been made applicable under Article 21, either of the Contracting Parties shall have the right to terminate it separately at any time on giving twelve months' notice to that effect.

MEMORANDUM ON DISCUSSION OF REPORT ON NAURU BY THE PERMANENT MANDATES COMMISSION.

(Prepared in the Colonial Office, January, 1923.)

The Report of the Permanent Mandates Commission asked for information in future reports on two points :—

(1) The presence in Nauru (as in the other Pacific Islands administered under mandate) of labour imported from various overseas countries and particularly from China.† They pointed out that the position of a Chinese coolie, necessarily recruited under a long period contract, called for the greatest care on the part of the Mandatory, and further that the presence of exclusively male labour involved elements of danger. They expressed the desire that the Mandatory Powers would be good enough in future reports to supply all relevant information on the subject.

Both Sir J. Cook and Mr. Justice Rich alluded to this matter in their speeches at the Assembly on the Mandates question.‡ Sir J. Cook explained that Chinese labour was necessary as the Nauruans were unable and unwilling to do the heavy work on the Island. Mr. Rich added the further information that the Administration was merely continuing the practice of the Pacific Phosphate Company in employing Chinese, and that "we hope that in the near future their employment will be discontinued altogether."

Mr. Hughes' statement to the House of Representatives of the 8th September (Commonwealth Parliamentary Paper No. 47 of 1922) also alluded to the question of Chinese labour, and dealt with the measures taken for the care of the labourers.

(2) The position of the Phosphate Commissioners. On page 5 of their Report§ the Mandates Commission remarked that the powers of the Phosphate Commissioners "appear to be unlimited as regards everything relating to the undertaking which they manage. It is not clear what powers and means of control the Australian administration possesses with regard to this organization." They therefore expressed the desire that future annual reports of the Mandatory Power should contain information which would enlighten them further. They also dealt with the matter on page 5 of their Observations.||

The position in this respect was very clearly explained in the statement by Mr. Justice Rich annexed to the Report of the Sixth Committee¶ of the Assembly on Mandates. The question was also referred to on page 3 of Sir J. Cook's comments on the Observations of the Commission. In the course of the discussion in the Assembly,†† Mme. Bugge-Wicksell, a member of the Mandates Commission, said that Sir J. Cook's statement "as far as I understand, is exactly the explanation which the Commission wanted in order to set our minds at rest upon this point."

The Mandates Commission in their Observations|| referred to three other points of general interest.

* No. 211. † Page 3 of Report: C.550, M.332 in 44971/22. ‡ Pages 14-16 of Verbatim Reports, 12th Meeting. § C.550, M.332. || C.551, M.333. ¶ Page 2 of A.72.  C.552, M.334. †† Page 18 of Verbatim Reports, 11th Meeting.

(3) They desired to know the probable duration of the exploitation of known deposits of phosphates and also what area proportionate to the whole will have been affected by that exploitation when the deposits are exhausted.

Sir J. Cook on page 4 of his Comments* supplied the desired statistics. He estimated that the deposits, at present rate of production, would last at least 400 years.

(4) They said that they would be particularly glad to find in a later report an explanation of the measures taken by the Nauru Administration to ensure not only the present welfare of the natives but also the development of the population.

Sir J. Cook dealt briefly with this point in his Comments* (page 4), where he said that the Administration pays special attention to public health, as is shown by the relevant Ordinances.

(5) The Commission finally desired to know whether the establishment by the three Governments of a State organization enjoying the sole rights of development of the only natural resources of the area is fully in keeping—although no formal provision under the Regulations for C Mandates forbids it—with the disinterested spirit which should characterize the mission of a Mandatory State.

Sir J. Cook dealt with this at the bottom of page 4 of his Comments,* pointing out that the three Governments had merely acquired an existing monopoly. The Report of the Sixth Committee† emphasized the same point. Sir J. Cook before the Assembly‡ pointed out how well off the natives were under the new régime. Mr. Hughes dealt with the same point in his statement.

The Commission in their Observations§ mentioned a number of points of detail on which further information and statistics were required. These related to permits for the possession of arms and alcohol, missionaries, police, public health, land tenure, and finance (pp. 5 and 6).

On page 5 of his Comments,* Sir J. Cook promised that these further particulars and statistics would be incorporated in detail in the next annual report.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th February, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that he has had under consideration your letter of the 12th September, 1921,|| regarding the introduction of a tariff into Western Samoa giving preference to imports from the British Empire.

2. The general question raised by paragraph 3 of your letter as to the application to Territories administered under "C" Mandates of Treaties which apply to the territory of the Mandatory forms the subject of a separate letter¶ of even date.

3. As regards the particular question of the Western Samoan tariff, Mr. Churchill concurs in Lord Curzon's view that it would be very difficult to resist the contention of the United States Government that the rights of the United States under the Treaty of 1899 are not extinguished as a result of the Treaty of Versailles; he would propose, however, to defer a reply to the Governor-General's despatch of 13th June until he has received a further expression of Lord Curzon's views on the general question.

MEMORANDUM ON THE TREATY RIGHTS OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IN SAMOA.

THE recommendation in paragraph 11 of the First Report of the Treaty Revision Committee, that multilateral treaties, all the parties to which were belligerents, should be regarded as terminated as between all parties concerned by the War, was made, "subject to the concurrence of the Allies." The last sentence of the second sub-paragraph of paragraph 51 of the Committee's Final Report was intended to indicate the doubt felt by the Committee whether the concurrence of the United States Government would be obtained for the application of the above recommendation to the Treaty of the 2nd December, 1899, relating to Samoa.

The recommendation was in actual fact not adopted in the Treaty of Versailles, and the only article which deals with multilateral Treaties, viz., No. 282, refers merely to the Treaty position as between Germany on the one hand and the Allied and Associated Powers on the other, and accordingly does not affect the position in relation to the 1899 Treaty as between Great Britain and the United States. The wording of Article 288, which refers specifically to the "special rights and privileges granted to Germany," indicates that the 1899 Treaty is to be regarded as still subsisting as between Great Britain and the United States.

The contention of the United States Government in this respect need not be considered with reference to their general attitude on the question of the grant of most-favoured-nation treatment in all territories administered under C Mandates (as set out in the Memorandum from the United States Ambassador of the 24th August, 1921*), and could be accepted without impairing the amplitude of the powers of New Zealand under the Mandate for Samoa, since it is based on special Treaty rights. Admission of the correctness of the United States contention would not involve the keeping alive of the obligation of Germany under the 1899 Treaty, but would simply be a recognition that the undertaking given by Great Britain in that Treaty in respect of all the islands of the Samoan group is still in force.

[Answered by No. 217.]

DEAR SIR FRANCIS BELL,

Downing Street, 8th June, 1922.

YOU will remember my mentioning to you the claim of the United States Government to national treatment under the Convention of 1899 relating to Samoa. I enclose copies of correspondence with the Governor-General† on the subject and a copy of the Convention.‡

Consideration of the question was postponed for a time pending the outcome of the discussion proceeding with the United States Government on the general question of Mandates, but the United States Government are now pressing for a reply to their representations on this particular question. I enclose a memorandum§ on the subject, the substance of which it is proposed to telegraph to New Zealand in explanation of the view that the contention of the United States cannot be successfully resisted, but I understood you to say that you would like to see it first. I should be glad to know at your early convenience what you think of it.

MEMORANDUM TO THE COLONIAL OFFICE FROM THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL FOR NEW ZEALAND.

4, Whitehall Court, S.W.1, 10th June, 1922.

Western Samoa Customs Duty.United States of America Protest.

I REFER to Mr. Davis's letter to me of the 8th instant,* and to the papers covered by that letter, and have to acknowledge the courtesy of the communication to me of the Memorandum to New Zealand on the above subject, the substance of which Mr. Davis's letter informs me it is proposed to telegraph to the Governor-General.

It will be observed that the Memorandum of 4th June, 1921,† a printed copy of which is among the papers sent me, was written by myself when Acting Prime Minister of New Zealand, and having then authority to speak for the Government of New Zealand. For that special reason, I preface this present Memorandum by a statement that what I now write expresses my personal view as principal Law Officer of the Crown for the Dominion Mandatory, but that I have not now authority to express the views of the Government of New Zealand, nor to bind that Government by anything I may write or say.

(1) I think I may still assure the Imperial Government that New Zealand will act in this and in all matters in the spirit of the fifth paragraph of my Memorandum of the 4th June, 1921. But it will be a great disappointment to New Zealand if it is found that we are unable to carry out in Samoa the policy of preference to English trade which in our own Dominion we have adopted for so many years, and perhaps I may respectfully add an expression of hope that the Imperial Government will not be influenced in this matter by its own policy of ignoring and deprecating the policy of preference, and bar our doors, as it has barred its own, to the considerations which have influenced us.

(2) The general protest of the United States against the adoption of preference to English trade in any mandated territory, must not be allowed to enter into the consideration of the present question. For with regard to that general protest all the Dominions are united in their contention that the United States, who have rejected the League, have no right whatever to claim rights under the constitution of the League. Upon that general protest I am satisfied that New Zealand will not admit that it is bound by any opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown in England. I am satisfied that the New Zealand Government will confirm and adhere to my present statement that, if the general protest is to receive consideration, that consideration must be by an Imperial Conference and not by the Imperial Government.

(3) Apart altogether from the general protest relating to all mandated territories, the United States Government raises a separate and special protest in regard to Western Samoa, of which New Zealand is Mandatory, founded upon the Convention of 2nd December, 1899.‡ I think personally that the interpretation of that Convention, and of its effect as continuing since the surrender by Germany, and the acceptance by New Zealand from His Majesty, of the Mandate of the League, must necessarily be that which is laid down by the Law Officers of the Crown in England. For the Imperial Government, and not New Zealand, made that Convention before New Zealand had any interest in the Government of Samoa, and if the Imperial Government is advised by its Law Officers that the conditions of that Convention continue, I think the Imperial Government is entitled to admit the claim of the American Government, and that the New Zealand Government as Mandatory is necessarily bound by that admission.

(4) But, as will be seen from my own Memorandum of June, 1921,† the New Zealand Government, and its legal advisers, do not agree with the view which the Imperial Government now intimates that it holds, and I can only hope that due weight has been given by the Law Officers of the Crown in England to the contentions of that Memorandum.

(5) I proceed now, however, upon the assumption that the Imperial Government is satisfied that under the Convention of 1899, preference to English trade in

* No. 216. † Enclosure in No. 164 in Dominions No. 81. ‡ Treaty Series, 1900, No. 8.

Western Samoa is prohibited, and that it would not be honourable for the Mandatory to exercise its legal powers in contravention of that Treaty. As I have said, I am satisfied that New Zealand will respect and follow the interpretation of the English Government just as much with regard to honourable obligations as it necessarily would with regard to legal obligations.

(6) But upon that assumption I ask, and I am confident that the New Zealand Government will support my request, that before any such admission is made to the American Government by the Imperial Government, the American Government should be asked to expressly define its own position with regard to American Samoa, and especially with regard to its port of Tutuila. I say expressly because it ought to be so laid down as that there shall be no possibility of subsequent misunderstandings.

(7) By American law, goods and passengers from one American port to another can only be carried in American ships. When America annexed the Hawaiian Group, Honolulu ceased to be a port open to our New Zealand trade between those islands and San Francisco. Our ships were not allowed to carry goods or passengers, and our San Francisco mail route could no longer use Honolulu usefully as a port of call. It is now used only for our Vancouver Mail Service.

(8) The statement by America that no preference will be granted to American trade in American Samoa by reason of the Convention of 1899 is wholly insufficient. As pointed out in my Memorandum of June, 1921, it is practically a gift of nothing, since British trade there is negligible. Nor is that concession a concession by America of any principle.

(9) Tutuila is by far the best port in that part of the Pacific. It is immensely superior to Apia. It may become an important port of call between New Zealand and San Francisco or other United States ports on the Western coast.

(10) Does America admit in express terms that Tutuila is not like Honolulu, and that British ships may carry goods and passengers from any American port to Tutuila? That is the question which I respectfully ask the Imperial Government to submit to the American Government before any admission is made as to the effect of the Convention of 1899 upon the rights of the Mandatory.

Article III of the Convention of 1899 is very difficult to construe, but if (as I do not agree) its terms do exclude preference to British trade in British Samoa, it is absolutely certain that those terms must necessarily exclude the restriction of Tutuila trade with America to American ships, and I sincerely trust that the interpretation of Article III as affecting the American trade question, shall be arrived at before Great Britain accepts any interpretation affecting British trade.

Attorney-General for New Zealand.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

SIR,

Downing Street, 15th June, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 8th of June,* regarding the representations of the Government of the United States of America on the subject of the Western Samoan preferential tariff, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to transmit to you, to be laid before the Earl of Balfour, a copy of a letter† to Sir Francis Bell, K.C.M.G., the Attorney-General of New Zealand, together with a copy of a memorandum‡ which he has furnished in reply.

2. In the circumstances, it would appear advisable, before any communication is made to the Government of New Zealand, to obtain the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown, both as to the correctness of the United States contentions regarding the Western Samoan preferential tariff, and as to the point raised in paragraphs 6 to 10 of Sir F. Bell's memorandum.

3. Mr. Churchill would therefore be glad to learn whether Lord Balfour could cause arrangements to be made for these matters to be referred to the Law Officers for their opinion. If so, he would be glad to see the draft of the case which it is proposed to submit.

* 27468; not printed; it expressed concurrence in the terms of No. 215. † No. 216. ‡ No. 217.

4. I am to add, as bearing upon the point raised in paragraphs 6 to 10 of Sir F. Bell's memorandum, that it appears from the volume on Colonial Tariff Policies recently issued by the United States Tariff Commission (page 616), that the United States Merchant Marine Act of the 5th of July, 1920, provided for the application to Samoa, as an island territory or possession of the United States, of the laws restricting trade between United States ports to vessels of United States registry.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

FOREIGN OFFICE to LAW OFFICERS AND LAW OFFICERS' REPORT.

GENTLEMEN,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 12th July, 1922.

I HAVE the honour, by direction of the Earl of Balfour, to lay before you, for your consideration, the papers noted on the accompanying list, respecting the question whether the Government of New Zealand is entitled, in view of existing treaty rights, to extend to Western Samoa the Dominion tariff, under which preference is given to goods of Imperial origin, and whether the United States Government is entitled to restrict to United States merchant vessels the trade between Tutuila and United States ports.

2. In 1899 an agreement* (paper A) was entered into between the United States, Germany and Great Britain, Article III. of which provides that the "signatory powers shall continue to enjoy, in respect of their commerce and commercial vessels, in all islands of the Samoan group, privileges and conditions equal to those enjoyed by the sovereign power in all ports which may be open to the commerce of either of them."

3. Article 288 of the Treaty of Versailles provides that "the special rights and privileges granted to Germany by Article III. of the Convention of 2nd December, 1899, relating to Samoa, shall be considered to have terminated on 4th August, 1914." The provisions of this Article of the 1899 Treaty are thus clearly terminated as far as Germany is concerned, and the German possessions in Samoa are now administered by New Zealand under mandate (paper B),† the New Zealand Government having applied the New Zealand preferential tariff system to this mandated area.

4. At the end of 1920, the United States Embassy in London, acting on instructions from the United States Government, communicated to Lord Curzon a memorandum‡ (paper C) maintaining that the Convention of 1899 was still in effect as far as Great Britain and the United States were concerned, and that any discrimination against imports from the United States would be a violation of Article III. of that Convention. It appeared difficult to dispute the view taken by the United States Government that the Treaty of 1899 was operative, and, as a result of communications with the Colonial Office, a despatch§ (paper D) was addressed to the Governor-General of New Zealand indicating this view.

5. The New Zealand Government were, however, of opinion that they were within their legal rights in establishing a preferential tariff in Western Samoa, the ground for this opinion being set forth in a memorandum from the Acting Prime Minister, dated 4th June, 1921|| (paper E); and since the date of this communication the United States Government have again indicated their view that the introduction of the preferential tariff is contrary to the rights still enjoyed by them under the Treaty of 1899, though no further arguments on the point were advanced. Advantage has, however, been taken of the presence in this country of Sir Francis Bell, the Attorney-General for New Zealand, to discuss the matter with him, and a memorandum¶ prepared by him on the subject is enclosed (paper F). It may be added, as bearing upon the point raised by Sir Francis Bell in paragraphs 6 and 10 of this memorandum that it appears from the volume of Colonial Tariff Policies recently issued by the United States Tariff Commissioners, page 616, that the United States Merchant Marine Act of the 5th of July, 1920, provided for the application to Samoa, as an island territory or possession of the United States, of the laws restricting trade between United States ports to vessels of United States registry (Paper G).

6. Sir Francis Bell produces no new arguments wherewith to combat the contention of the United States Government to the effect that the Treaty of 1899 is still operative as between Great Britain and the United States, and that its effect must be to prevent the introduction of a preferential tariff in Western Samoa. On the other hand, he shows good grounds for holding that Article III. of the Convention must also prevent the United States Government from extending to United States ships any preference at Tutuila. In connexion with this latter point, I am to observe that in 1911 it was alleged that the United States authorities had exercised some discrimination against British ships trading between Pago Pago and Leone, in Tutuila. Inquiries were made of the United States Government, who stated that Leone was not a port of entry, but in the course of the correspondence which took place at that time, the United States Government admitted that British ships were entitled to the same treatment as United States and German ships in this respect (papers H, J and K). In the same year a complaint was also made by a British firm that bills of health were being issued gratis by the United States Consul at Apia to United States vessels trading between Apia and Pago Pago (Tutuila), while a charge was made for similar bills of health issued to British vessels trading on the same route. This complaint being brought to the notice of the United States Government, it was decided by the State Department in 1913 that the exaction of fees from British vessels, while United States vessels were exempt, was contrary to Article III. of the Treaty of 1899, and instructions were accordingly given for the collection of such fees to be discontinued (papers L and M). The United States authorities were thus in 1913 of opinion that the Treaty prevented preference in this respect being given to United States ships trading with American Samoa.

7. I am now directed by Lord Balfour to request that you will be good enough to favour him with your opinion generally, and, in particular, on the following questions:—

(1) Is Article III. of the Treaty of 2nd December, 1899, still in force as between the United States and the British Empire?

(2) If so, is it possible to support the claim of the New Zealand Government to establish a preferential tariff in Western Samoa, from the benefits of which the United States would be excluded?

(3) If the Treaty is still in force, is His Majesty's Government entitled to claim thereunder that the United States Government may not introduce any system of preference for United States shipping trading to Tutuila, and especially may not assimilate Tutuila to those overseas possessions of the United States, the trade between which and the mainland ports of the United States is confined to United States vessels?

REPORT.

We have taken the matter into our consideration, and in obedience to Your Lordship's commands have the honour to report:—

That (1) We are of opinion that Article III of the Convention of 2nd December, 1899, is still in force as between the United States and the British Empire.

(2) In our opinion, No.

The construction of Article III is not free from difficulty. We think that its true effect is to impose upon His Majesty the obligation to accord to the United States in respect of its commerce and commercial vessels in all islands of the Samoan Group, in which it lies within his power to do so, equal privileges to those enjoyed by British commerce and commercial vessels in those ports of the Samoan Group which are under British Sovereignty.

This obligation is binding upon the New Zealand Government as representing His Majesty, and precludes that Government from contravening Article III in any part of the Samoan Group which is under its authority, from whatever source derived.

(3) In our opinion, Yes.

YOUR despatch 13th June, 1921, Confidential.* Further consideration of question raised by Government of United States of America as to Article 3 of 1899 Treaty was postponed on account of attitude of United States on general question of C Mandates, but as Government of United States have been pressing for reply on Treaty point His Majesty's Government would be glad to be able to deal with matter at early date.

General representations of United States as to their treatment in C Mandate territories, as to which see my telegram 30th August,† cannot be answered pending result of consultation with all Dominions concerned. But United States claim under 1899 Treaty, though mentioned in the general representations, is special and separate matter primarily affecting New Zealand, and reply can be settled independently of general discussion. Law Officers of the Crown here have been consulted on questions (1) whether Article 3 of Treaty should be regarded as still in force as between Great Britain and United States. (2) If so, whether establishment by New Zealand of preferential tariff in Western Samoa from benefits of which United States excluded is in accordance with Article 3. (3) Whether Article 3 if still in force debars United States Government from any system of preference for United States shipping trading Tutuila. Law Officers have advised Article 3 Treaty still in force, and accordingly that any tariff discrimination as between British and United States goods in Western Samoa seems precluded, but that Treaty equally precludes preference for United States shipping trading Tutuila. In view of Law Officers advice best course appears to be to inform Government of United States that Government of New Zealand prepared to extend any preferential tariff in Western Samoa to United States goods under 1899 Treaty, but that in opinion of New Zealand Government and His Majesty's Government Treaty equally prevents any system of preference for United States vessels in Tutuila and especially precludes United States Government from confining trade between United States and Tutuila to United States vessels, and that proposed extension of preferential tariff Western Samoa conditional on acceptance of this view by United States Government. Mr. Wood, in opening the proceedings, welcomed the Sub-Committee of the Permanent Mandates Commission on behalf of the Colonial Office, and dwelt on the important step in the progress of international relations that was marked by the introduction of the mandatory system. He assured the Sub-Committee that His Majesty's Government would do all in their power to help them in their task. He pointed out that "A" and "C" Mandates were being dealt with separately, and suggested that on the present occasion discussion should be confined to the "B" Mandates. He put forward as the basis of discussion a Memorandum (copy attached*), which had been prepared embodying the views of His Majesty's Government on the particular points which he understood the Sub-Committee desired to discuss. He added that in defining the attitude and policy of His Majesty's Government on these points there was naturally no intention of dictating an interpretation.

MARCHESE THEODOLI, replying in French, expressed his appreciation of the assistance and welcome which was accorded to the Sub-Committee on all sides. There were considerable difficulties in launching the mandatory system, which was an entirely new departure in international law. The object of the present tour of the Sub-Committee was to ascertain, on behalf of the Permanent Mandates Commission, the views of the various Governments concerned, in order that they might present to the Council of the League a complete picture of the situation. He quoted as an example of the wide divergence of opinion existing at present, the attitude of the French Government, who were unwilling to make any former German citizen in mandated territory a French subject, and the attitude of the South African authorities, who, he understood, desired the wholesale naturalization of former German citizens in South-West Africa.

MONS. RAPPARD referred to the Memorandum which had been prepared, and said that it contained exactly the information which it was desired to obtain. It was an obvious expression of common sense, and as far as he was concerned it was impossible to arrive at conclusions much different. The policy outlined was perfectly clear and logical and, so far as his personal opinion went, he thought the conclusions of His Majesty's Government would be acceptable to the League.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE asked whether they might report to the League that there were no Germans remaining in territories mandated to Great Britain under "B" mandates. He was informed that this was substantially correct, though there might still be two or three persons of German nationality in Tanganyika Territory; it was further pointed out that any such persons who might remain did not lose their German nationality by reason of the Mandate.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE, speaking of the German inhabitants of mandated territories, stated that the view had been suggested to the Sub-Committee (by Sir Edgar Walton) that when Germany ceded her colonies under the Treaty of Versailles, these inhabitants ipso facto gave up their German nationality.

SIR C. HURST explained that when a territory was transferred from one power to another the normal procedure in international practice was that the instrument of transfer contained provision for the change of nationality of the inhabitants. He drew a distinction between the loss of the old nationality and the acquisition of the new. Germany had transferred her colonies to the Principal Allied and Associated Powers; accordingly, the utmost that could have happened was the loss of German nationality, as there was no joint Allied nationality which the inhabitants of the areas transferred could acquire.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE asked a question regarding the status of Indians in Tanganyika Territory. The reply was that under the provisions of the Imperial British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, Cap. 17), if they were born in British India, they would retain their British nationality, and that their descendants of the first generation (and, also, of the second generation, if born before 1st January, 1915), would be British subjects.

There was some general discussion as to the difference in the rights possessed by the native inhabitants of a British Protectorate (i.e., British protected persons), and the inhabitants of a British Colony (i.e., British subjects). It was agreed that whatever distinction there might be in theory, there was in practice none of practical importance. It was further stated that there was no administrative objection to the inhabitants of a British mandated territory being treated as British protected persons.

MARCHESE THEODOLI observed that the position appeared to be that the inhabitant of a British mandated territory had in that territory the status of a national of that territory, if such nationality existed or were to be defined, but outside the territory, that of a British protected person.

MONSIEUR RAPPARD asked whether the phrase "European inhabitants" in the Memorandum was intended to be interpreted strictly and to exclude Asiatics or Americans. It was pointed out that it was an antithesis to "native inhabitants" and meant "non-native inhabitants."

MR. ORMSBY-GORE was informed in reply to a question that as far as the British mandates were concerned, Arabs resident in the territory would be regarded as natives.

This completed the questions that the Sub-Committee desired to put. In conclusion, Mr. Wood promised that, if any further questions arose on which information was desired, every assistance would be given by the Colonial Office.

Enclosure 2 in No. 223.

NATIONALITY OF INHABITANTS OF MANDATED TERRITORIES.

Memorandum by the British Government.

It is not proposed to discuss in the present Conference the question of "A" mandates, which stand on a special footing. The "C" mandates are being discussed by the Commission with the High Commissioners for the Dominions concerned, and the present discussion is therefore limited to the "B" mandates.

As regards "B" mandates, it is submitted that:—

(a) The Mandate does not in itself affect the nationality of the inhabitants of the territory mandated.

(b) The special conditions relating to administration as an integral part of the Mandatory's territory where they occur should not affect the nationality of European inhabitants of the mandated territory.

(c) The nationality of the Native inhabitants also of such territory remains unaffected by the special conditions referred to above. In this connexion it may be pointed out that under Article 127 of the Treaty of Versailles such natives are entitled to diplomatic protection by the Mandatory Power, and that under the Foreign Office Consular Instructions, natives of territories under British mandates are already being treated as British protected persons. The treatment of these natives as British protected persons does not, of course, confer upon them British nationality.

Naturalization.

As regards the naturalization of Europeans in territories under British administration subject to "B" Mandates, it appears that in the present state of British legislation such naturalization could in any case only be local in character, and not Imperial, and, as there are great administrative objections to the multiplication of local naturalizations within the Empire, it seems that at any rate in the case of these territories there should be no naturalization of Europeans as British subjects. It should be pointed out, however, that these territories differ, for instance, from the former territory of German South-West Africa in the fact that practically all ex-enemy subjects have been removed from them.

The question of the naturalization of the native inhabitants as British subjects is not likely to arise in the case of the territories subject to "B" Mandates under British administration.

THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 29th April, 1922.)

New Zealand Government Offices,

Strand, London, W.C.2, 28th April, 1922.

SIR,

I AM directed by the High Commissioner to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th instant,‡ enclosing advance copy of the Report of the Sub-Committee of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the nationality of the inhabitants of "B" and "C" Mandated Areas, which is to be considered by the Council of the League at its next meeting.

I am to state that, after the Sub-Committee had visited Sir James Allen, he communicated with his Government in regard to the nationality of the native inhabitants of Western Samoa, and the suggested naturalization of natives and others. The reply which has just come to hand encloses copy of an opinion furnished on the 11th May, 1920, by Sir John Salmond, then Solicitor-General, on the national status of Samoans, and this is enclosed.

* C.54 (a), M.45.

† No. 223.

‡ No. 225.

With regard to the suggested naturalization, the Government states that it is not advisable for the present for the New Zealand Parliament to pass special legislation, even if it had authority to do so, to enable residents of Samoa, either European or Native, to be naturalized as British subjects, but that if, at any time, it should be deemed necessary to seek special authority for this purpose, no discrimination will be made between European and Native inhabitants. On this point I enclose copy of Sir John Salmond's opinion, dated 30th September, 1919.

The Government's reply adds that "this question of status created some difficulty with respect to the issue of passports to inhabitants of Western Samoa who desired to travel abroad. However, this difficulty with respect to passports has been settled, so far as Western Samoa is concerned, by the agreement reached between His Majesty's Government and the League of Nations. In accordance with this agreement, the New Zealand Government has accepted the recommendation of His Majesty's Government that passports be issued to persons, the protection of whose interests abroad has been entrusted to the Dominion by Mandate of the League of Nations."

If you will refer to paragraph 4 of page 6 of the Mandate Commission's report,* you will find a reference by Sir James Allen to naturalization. He omitted at the time to express doubt whether the New Zealand Parliament had authority to pass legislation for the naturalization of the residents of Western Samoa.

I am, &c.,

C. KNOWLES,

for the Secretary to the Department.

Enclosure 1 in No. 227.

National Status of Samoans.

11th May, 1920.

THE natives of Samoa are not British subjects inasmuch as Samoa has not been annexed as part of the British Empire. Its connexion with the Crown cannot be put higher than that of a British Protectorate. The natives of a protectorate are not British subjects; they occupy an anomalous position under the title of British protected persons, and although they are not entitled to the full rights of a British subject they are entitled to British diplomatic protection when in foreign countries. This right is expressly recognized by the Treaty of Peace in respect of the territories under Mandate. The natives of the Cook Islands, on the other hand, are British subjects. There is some practical advantage in retaining this distinction, since it affords the Samoans an additional motive for exercising the right conferred upon them by the Peace Treaty to become incorporated within the British Empire if they so desire. Then, and not until then, will they acquire the full status of British citizenship.

I suggest accordingly that in proper cases applications for naturalization by Samoans permanently resident in New Zealand should be acceded to.

JOHN W. SALMOND,
Solicitor-General.

The Hon.

The Attorney-General.

Enclosure 2 in No. 227.

30th September, 1919.

"THE inhabitants of Samoa cannot be naturalized as British subjects by the New Zealand Government under the Aliens Act, 1908. The authority given by that Act to naturalize aliens is limited to aliens who are resident in New Zealand, and who declare their intention of remaining resident there.

The New Zealand Parliament has no authority to amend the Aliens Act by extending its operation to Samoa. The authority of a Colonial Parliament to legislate with respect to naturalization is a limited delegated authority conferred by section 26 of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914. This section authorizes the Legislature of a British possession to impart to any person any of the privileges of naturalization to be enjoyed by him within the limits of that possession, and provides that any Act so passed shall within those limits have the authority of law. Even, therefore, if the New Zealand Parliament provided for the naturalization in New Zealand of the inhabitants of Samoa such naturalization would operate only in New Zealand itself, and the persons so naturalized would still remain aliens in Samoa, just as persons naturalized in New Zealand remain aliens in Australia or in the United Kingdom.

MR. F. H. SARGEANT (HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA) to MR. E. J. HARDING (COLONIAL OFFICE).

(Received 1st May, 1922.)

MY DEAR HARDING, Trafalgar Square, London, W.C.2, 28th April, 1922.

REFERRING to your telephonic inquiry regarding the question of the nationality of the inhabitants of South-West Africa, I enclose herewith a copy of a memorandum as to a meeting which was held here on the 23rd November last.

I gathered from you that a meeting of the Council of the League of Nations is to be held at Geneva on the 10th May. I have, therefore, written to the High Commissioner at Genoa, sending him a copy of this note (with a copy of its annexure) so that, if he has any special point, he will no doubt write to Lord Balfour at Geneva and forward the letter to Drummond, so that Drummond may hand it to Lord Balfour or to Mr. Fisher, whoever is there.

If there be any further point so far as the Colonial Office is concerned, a cable will, I take it, be necessary, either from the Colonial Office or from the Governor-General, or to General Smuts from the High Commissioner.

Perhaps you will please let me hear from you.

Yours sincerely,

F. H. SARGEANT.

Enclosure in No. 228.

MEMORANDUM.

THE High Commissioner for the Union of South Africa met a Sub-Committee from the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations on Wednesday, the 23rd November. The object of the Deputation was to discuss the question of the nationality of the inhabitants of South-West Africa, and consisted of Marquis Alberto Theodoli, the Honourable W. Ormsby-Gore, M.P., His Excellency M. Freire d'Andrade, and Monsieur Rappard.

The first point raised was the present nationality of those residents who, before the Peace Settlement, were subjects of the German Emperor.

The High Commissioner said that he had communicated with his Government in order to ascertain their views, and that the view they held was that though technically, under International law, it might be held that these people were still German nationals, yet Germany had, in effect, liberated them from any national obligations by renouncing all claim to the territory.

The High Commissioner said that his Government would be grateful for a ruling by the Council of the League in the direction of declaring these people to be non-nationals—which in fact they were—and he pointed out that, if that were done, it would be possible to legislate in the direction of constituting them British subjects, unless within a certain specified time objections were lodged. This course would simplify the administration of the country, would remove all practical difficulties, and confer on these late German nationals all the rights and privileges enjoyed by South African citizens. By such means contentment and prosperity would be assured in the Mandated Territories.

The High Commissioner pointed out that, if this course were not followed, the gravest difficulties would ensue. Unless these German ex-nationals could be dealt with as British subjects, they would remain foreigners, they would make it impossible to establish a system of self-government in the new country, and render the administration a serious problem. The Union of South Africa, of course, had machinery specially adapted for the government of native peoples, and possessed large numbers of specially trained officials for that duty. The government of white people, however, through officials and without representative institutions, was entirely foreign to the system of free government which the people of South Africa had adopted.

The Deputation made inquiries as to the numbers of ex-Germans in the country, and discussed the question of nationality. They explained that they had no power to give a decision on the points raised themselves, that they would have to report on the matter to the Council of the League of Nations, but, in the meantime, they thought that under International Law there was no doubt that the German residents in that country were still German nationals; and the suggestion was thrown out by Mr. Ormsby-Gore that it might be considered whether these people should not be granted a local nationality to endure for a period and then receive the full citizenship of the Union. It was necessary to remember that the country was mandated and not annexed, and it was doubtful whether annexation would be possible under the provisions of the Peace Treaty even if the ex-German nationals themselves declared for it.

He further pointed out that if these people were made British subjects, they not only participated in the government of their own country, but took a share in the government of part of the British Empire. It was not merely a citizenship in South-West Africa; it was participation in the government of the whole of the Union.

The Marquis Theodoli inquired whether it was intended to introduce legislation at once, and the High Commissioner explained that his Government desired that the Council of the League of Nations should express its views on this point, and it was hoped that the Council would realize how extremely undesirable it was to leave these people in the position of German nationals; that might eventually lead to German intervention and to the creation of a State practically within the Union, although under a Mandate, yet inhabited by a number of people who considered themselves allied to a State which might conceivably become inimical.

The Marquis Theodoli inquired whether the Union Government had taken steps to ascertain the views of these residents themselves, and whether they were anxious to take part in the government of the country.

The High Commissioner explained that he had not been definitely instructed on that point, but, as far as he could gather, it was the wish of the local inhabitants to have the management of their own affairs.

The Marquis Theodoli also pointed out that under German law even if these people became British subjects, they would retain their German nationality.

The ultimate destiny of the country was then discussed generally, and the different aspects of the problem were presented. It was admitted that the Union of South Africa had not the machinery for governing the Mandated Territory as a Crown Colony. It was clearly understood that there was no proposal to force these people into the British Empire; it was to be open to any man to object and to demand to retain his German nationality. The only difference between that proposal and the alternative was that in this case the resident would not be compelled to apply for naturalization, but would come under the operation of the law automatically, and it was believed that the great bulk of the people would prefer that course.

The High Commissioner, at the request of the Committee, explained the position of the natives; that the management and government of native peoples was no longer a difficult problem in South Africa, and that the native people themselves realized that their position had very greatly improved under the new arrangement.

In conclusion, the High Commissioner explained that they would realize how difficult was the problem which lay before the South African Government and people, and the Committee said that they understood that, and that they also realized that the suggestions which had been put forward as coming from those responsible for the administration of the country were entitled to the utmost consideration.

COLONIAL OFFICE to OFFICES OF THE CABINET.

SIR,

Downing Street, 4th May, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th April,* regarding the nationality of inhabitants of "B" and "C" Mandated Areas.

2. As regards "C" Mandated Areas, I am to invite reference to the letter† from this Department of the 28th April and the 3rd May, enclosing copies of a telegram‡ to the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia, and correspondence§ with the High Commissioners for New Zealand and the Union of South Africa. No reply has yet been received from the Governor-General of the Commonwealth.

3. As regards "B" Mandated Areas, Mr. Churchill's views are contained in the memorandum|| forming Annex I to the Report in League of Nations paper C. 54 (a). M. 45. Having regard, however, to the divergence between the views of the British, French, and Belgian Governments, the most desirable solution might be that suggested at the conclusion of the Memorandum of the Belgian Government, contained in Annex VI, i.e., that the Council of the League should not attempt any definite pronouncement on the question of nationality, but should make a general statement as to the position. Mr. Churchill would further suggest that the Permanent Mandates Commission should first be invited to express their views on the subject, as the last paragraph of their Report indicates that they are willing to do.

4. Copies of this letter are being sent to the Foreign Office and the Home Office.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

10TH MAY. With reference to your telegram of 27th April,† His Majesty's Government's views as to nationality under "B" Mandates, are, in the opinion of the Commonwealth Government, applicable in the case of "C" Mandate over New Guinea. The Commonwealth Government considers as regards both nationality and naturalization that under the Mandate it has full legislative powers as in other matters in which its powers are not expressly restricted. It agrees that in the present state of British legislation there are difficulties in the way of granting naturalization to applicants residing in territory. Commonwealth Government considers that the League of Nations might regard compulsory nationalization by legislation of native or non-native inhabitants, as an act of sovereignty inconsistent with the Mandate, but that the right to legislate for voluntary naturalization should not be given away. My Government therefore considers it desirable that it should retain full right to grant naturalization to applicants residing in territory, and asks that the British Representative be requested to submit to the Council of the League the views of the Commonwealth.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

THE Secretary to the Cabinet presents his compliments to the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, and with reference to earlier correspondence forwards herewith a copy of a communication from the Earl of Balfour of the 2nd instant, together with copies of the documents mentioned therein (C. 546 and C. 615), relative to the question of the Nationality of the Inhabitants of "B" and "C" Mandated Territories.

Sir Maurice Hankey desires to direct attention to the Earl of Balfour's request for Mr. Churchill's views on the recommendations of the Permanent Mandates Commission.

British Delegation, Hotel Metropole, Geneva.

THE Earl of Balfour presents his compliments to the Secretary to the Cabinet, and forwards herewith copies of the Report* of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the question of the Nationality Status of the Inhabitants of the Territories under "B" and "C" Mandates. This Report was discussed by the Council to-day, and, as will be seen from the report† of the Spanish Representative to the Council—copies of which are also enclosed—it was decided to adjourn consideration of the matter to a later meeting.

2. Copies of the documents enclosed herewith are being communicated to the Australian, South African, and New Zealand Delegations, and Lord Balfour would be glad to receive any observations which the Secretary of State for the Colonies may desire to offer as soon as possible.

2nd September, 1922.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF THE PERMANENT MANDATES COMMISSION ON THE NATIONAL STATUS OF THE INHABITANTS OF THE TERRITORIES UNDER "B" AND "C" MANDATES.

THE Commission, for the reasons set forth below and stated at greater length in the minutes of its meetings of 2nd, 8th and 9th August, 1922 (C. 548, M. 330), has decided to submit to the Council the following proposals:—

I. It is important, in order that the principles laid down in Article 22 of the Covenant may be respected, and subject to the provision in paragraph III below, that the native inhabitants of "B" and "C" Mandated Territories should be granted a national status wholly distinct from that of the nationals of the mandatory Power.

II. A special law of the mandatory Power should determine the status of these native inhabitants, who might be given a designation such as "administered persons under mandate," or "protected persons under mandate" of the mandatory Power.

III. It is open to mandatory Powers to whom "B" and "C" mandated Territories have been entrusted, to make arrangement in conformity with their own laws for the individual and purely voluntary acquisition of their nationality by inhabitants of these territories.

No. 232.

COLONIAL OFFICE to OFFICES OF THE CABINET.

Downing Street, 14th September, 1922.

THE Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies presents his compliments to the Secretary to the Cabinet and, with reference to Sir Maurice Hankey's letter of the 5th September,* regarding the Report of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the National Status of Inhabitants of Territories administered under "B" and "C" Mandates, begs to offer the following observations, in which, it is understood, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the Secretary of State for Home Affairs concur:—

It is desirable, in the first instance, to draw attention to the essential distinction between nationality on the one hand and protection on the other. The protection of the Mandatory Power which is extended to native inhabitants of the territory in pursuance of Article 127 of the Treaty of Versailles, does not confer any national status upon them.

As regards the first two proposals of the Commission, it would appear impossible for a Mandatory Power to confer upon the inhabitants of territories administered under such Mandates any national status other than its own, though it is possible for the Mandatory Power to define by a legislative act what persons are entitled to the protection granted as a result of Article 127 of the Treaty of Versailles to the native inhabitants of the territories which it administers under Mandate. So far as concerns the territories administered by this country under "B" Mandates, it is agreed that the native inhabitants should not be granted the national status of British subjects, but no objection is seen to defining by a legislative act which of the inhabitants of the territories should be regarded as entitled to British protection in accordance with Article 127, and to conferring on those persons the designation "British protected persons under Mandate."

As regards the third proposal, reference is invited to the observations contained in the memorandum† appearing on pp. 8 and 9 of League of Nations paper C. 54 (a) M. 45, of which a copy was enclosed in Sir M. Hankey's letter of the 25th April.‡ Doubt is still felt as to the desirability of providing for the naturalization of inhabitants of Mandated Territories, more especially since in the territories administered by this country under "B" Mandates such naturalization could only be local, and would not confer on the persons naturalized the status of British subjects outside the territory. So far as their status inside the territory is concerned, the end in view could be secured by legislative or administrative action which would ensure to the persons concerned any privileges appertaining to the status of a British subject which it was considered desirable to extend to them.

The above observations relate only to territories administered under "B" Mandates. As regards territories administered under "C" Mandates, similar considerations would appear to apply, but it is not desired to offer any observations on behalf of the Colonial Office as regards these territories. It is observed that the Delegations of the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa at Geneva have been asked for their observations and, when these are received, the Earl of Balfour may think it desirable that the whole question should be discussed personally with the representatives of those Dominions before it is again considered by the Council of the League.

Note.—The question was not considered further by the Council of the League of Nations during 1922.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 27th September, 1922.)

(Confidential.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 6th September, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to enclose herewith press cuttings§ of my recent tour in the Mandated Territory of South-West Africa.

* No. 231. † Enclosure 2 in No. 223. ‡ No. 224. § Not reprinted.

2. I was accorded a most friendly reception by the German, as well as the English and Dutch, sections of the population.

3. As most of the truculent and dissatisfied Germans have been repatriated or deported, the present German population comprises only the better class, and they seem fairly contented with their lot, although the acute economical depression that has afflicted the territory is responsible for a certain amount of unfair criticism of the Administration and the Government.

4. There is every evidence that the bitter feelings aroused by the War are beginning to subside, and I think that, given a gradual return to prosperity, the German population will accept the new régime more or less cheerfully. As they are very industrious and by nature law-abiding, they cannot fail to be a valuable national asset once they have been assimilated as citizens of the Union.

5. Many of them worked hard and endeavoured to accumulate money, in order that they might profit by the exchange and return to live in Germany. But the critical financial and political condition of the Fatherland (they are staunch monarchists) has banished this prospect from the minds of most of them. The Administration has therefore to devise some scheme for sustaining their energy and for utilizing German industry in the interests of the territory.

6. Their present national status is most unsatisfactory, and I am convinced that it has engendered the feeling of apathy that undoubtedly prevails amongst them. They feel they are nobody's children, and, apart from the desire to live, they have no ambitions and nothing to strive for.

7. I went to some trouble to gain their confidence and discover what they thought about the question of their enrolment as British citizens. Few of them fail to appreciate the advantages to be gained by throwing in their lot with the people of South Africa which, by reason of its composition, has little or no racial animosity. But while a sense of loyalty to their Fatherland prevents them from voluntarily seeking naturalization, I am of the opinion that legislation which would thrust British citizenship upon them, apparently against their will, would be accepted outwardly under protest, but with secret satisfaction. I am, therefore, in favour of their being declared British subjects by proclamation, and have reason to believe that the Union Government contemplates some such policy.

8. A feeling that the authority of the Union under the mandate is ill-defined and circumscribed is another cause of discontent in the territory. The Germans, at any rate, feel that the existing arrangement is not meant to be permanent, and that they are living in a kind of Babylonian captivity which will assuredly be terminated in time, but which meanwhile demands patience and resignation.

9. This state of uncertainty cannot fail to prejudice the welfare of the country and undermine the vitality of the people. The speech I delivered at Windhoek was composed with the express object of combating this feeling of doubt, but I am convinced that the only way to dispel it satisfactorily is to impart fresh energy to the population of the territory by giving it a definite nationality.

I have, &c.,

ARTHUR FREDERICK,
Governor-General.

3. Accordingly, if Mr. Montagu concurs, Mr. Churchill would propose to explain the position to the Dominion Governments, and to inquire whether they desire action taken in anticipation of the negotiation of a new Treaty.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 13th February, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [Your Royal Highness] [you] to inform your Ministers that attention has been drawn to the position of the self-governing Dominions in relation to the Treaty between Great Britain and Muscat signed on the 19th March, 1891 (Treaty Series No. 9 of 1892).

[To Canada only: The effect of this Treaty, as regards the participation of Muscat in the coasting trade of Canada, was referred to in paragraph 6 of Mr. (now Viscount) Harcourt's despatch No. 773 of the 7th October, 1914.†]

[To Commonwealth of Australia only: The question of the withdrawal of the Commonwealth Government from this Treaty was referred to in the second paragraph of Lord Crewe's despatch No. 430 of the 3rd December, 1909,‡ and previous correspondence.]

2. Article XXI of the Treaty provided that its stipulations should not be applicable to the self-governing Dominions unless notice to that effect were given but no provision was made for the separate withdrawal of any Dominion to which its stipulations had been applied.

3. The Treaty, which was subject to revision after 12 years, is at present being renewed from year to year pending the negotiation of a new Treaty. If such a new Treaty were negotiated, a clause would be inserted in it providing not only that its stipulations should not apply to any of the self-governing Dominions unless notice to that effect were given, but also that it might be terminated separately in respect of any Dominion to which it had been made applicable.

4. It would also be possible, if such a course were desired by any of the Dominion Governments, to insert, in any agreement extending the present Treaty for a further period, a clause giving the Dominions separate liberty of withdrawal. I should be glad to learn whether your Ministers would desire such a course or whether they would think it sufficient that the matter should remain in abeyance until a new Treaty is negotiated.

Ministers would be glad if Your Royal Highness would be good enough to inform His Majesty's Government that they do not consider it necessary in any annual renewal of the Treaty to insert a clause giving the Dominions separate liberty of withdrawal and consider that this might be left in abeyance until a new Treaty is negotiated.

Enclosure in No. 243.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY THE DEPUTY OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 7TH SEPTEMBER, 1922.

(P.C. 1778.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 19th August, 1922, from the Minister of Customs and Excise, to whom was referred a despatch from His Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 13th February, 1922, on the subject of the position of the Dominion of Canada in relation to the Treaty between Great Britain and Muscat, signed on the 19th March, 1891, to which Canada acceded on 11th April, 1893.

The Minister observes that the treaty referred to is being renewed from year to year pending the negotiation of a new treaty, and that, if such a treaty is again entered into, provision would be made to ensure that its stipulations should not apply to any of the self-governing Dominions unless notice to that effect were given, and also to provide that it might be terminated separately in respect of any Dominion to which it has been made applicable. It is also noted that His Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies desires to learn whether or not, in any agreement extending the present treaty, a clause giving the Dominions separate liberty of withdrawal should be inserted, as it may be possible to have such a clause included in the provisions of the renewal.

The Minister states that he is advised that Muscat is entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment under the Treaty of 1891 referred to, as regards the Canadian coasting trade, but it is understood that vessels from Muscat do not engage in this trade and that Canada does not import goods from nor export goods to Muscat. Under an Act Respecting the Coasting Trade of the Dominion of Canada, assented to 15th May, 1902, no goods or passengers shall be carried by water from one port in Canada to another except in British ships.

In view of the provisions of the Act Respecting the Coasting Trade referred to, the Minister submits that in any agreement for the renewal of the Treaty between Great Britain and Muscat, it would be advisable to have a clause inserted giving the Dominions separate liberty of withdrawal.

The Committee, concurring, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy of this Minute to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies in reply to the despatch above referred to.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

2. As the Secretary of State for the Colonies is aware, the Franco-Canadian Trade Agreement was negotiated between Sir G. Foster and the French Government.

3. If this precedent is followed in the present case, the best course would appear to be for Monsieur Vogt to announce to His Majesty's Government the wishes of his Government and ask that the Commonwealth Government may be informed and requested to appoint representatives to negotiate with the Norwegian representatives. It might also be suggested to Monsieur Vogt at the same time that he should propose that the negotiations should take place in London.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 214 of 4th August, relative to the termination of the Peace Commission Treaty between His Majesty's Government and the Chilean Government, I consider that the object in view could best be attained by a formal exchange of notes.

2. I request you therefore to arrange with the Chilean Government for a formal exchange of notes stating that, as the objects to be attained by the treaty for the establishment of a Peace Commission signed on 28th March, 1919, are now sufficiently provided for by the League of Nations, it has been decided to terminate the treaty for the establishment of a Peace Commission, signed on 28th March, 1919.

3. You should at the same time request the Chilean Government formally to convey to you their concurrence in the termination of this Treaty as from the date on which the notes are exchanged. You will no doubt be able to decide, in consultation with the Chilean Government, on the exact wording of the notes to be exchanged, copies of which should be sent to this department for purposes of record, and of registration with the League of Nations.

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W.1., 3rd February, 1922.
 WITH reference to Mr. Balfour's telegram No. 143 of 20th August, 1918, to Mr. Rennie, I have to inform you that His Majesty's Government have had under their consideration the Peace Commission Treaties between this country and Peru, Chile and Bolivia, and have decided that, in view of the fact that these countries have subscribed to the Covenant of the League of Nations, and that the objects sought to be attained by these treaties are fully provided for by the Covenant, the treaties have now become superfluous and should be terminated.

2. I request you therefore to bring these considerations to the notice of the Government to which you are accredited and inform them that His Majesty's Government do not intend to proceed to the ratification of the treaty.

3. Similar action is being taken in regard to the treaties in existence between His Majesty's Government and Chile and Bolivia.

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W.1., 3rd February, 1922.
 WITH reference to Mr. Haggard's telegram No. 59 of 28th July, 1919, and previous correspondence, I have to inform you that His Majesty's Government have had under their consideration the question of the Peace Commission Treaties negotiated between this country and Peru, Chile and Bolivia and have decided that, in view of the fact that the objects sought to be attained by these treaties are already provided for by the Covenant of the League of Nations, to which all the countries in question are parties, these treaties have now become superfluous and should be terminated.

2. As far as I am aware the Bolivian Government have for some time past shown no desire to take up the question of concluding a Peace Commission treaty, and it is possible therefore that they have already reached the conclusion indicated above. It might be well, however, in order to avoid any misconception, for you to explain to the Bolivian Government the attitude of His Majesty's Government in the matter.

3. Similar action, with a view to their cancellation, is being taken in regard to the treaties of arbitration existing between His Majesty's Government and Chile and Peru.

IN obedience to the instructions contained in Your Lordship's despatch No. 9,* I have the honour to transmit copy of a Note which I addressed to the Peruvian Government on the 10th inst., informing the latter that His Majesty's Government do not intend to proceed to the ratification of the Peace Commission Treaty signed on 16th July, 1920, as that Instrument has now become superfluous.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

British Legation, Lima, 10th March, 1922.

AS Your Excellency is aware a Treaty was signed between the Peruvian Government and that of His Majesty on the 16th of July, 1918, by which disputes arising between the High Contracting parties should, when diplomatic methods of adjustment had failed, be referred for investigation and report to a Permanent International Commission.

His Majesty's Government have had under their consideration this Instrument, and have decided that, in view of the fact that Peru has subscribed to the Covenant of the League of Nations, and that the objects sought to be attained by the Treaty of 16th July, 1918, are fully provided for by the Covenant, the former has now become superfluous and should be terminated.

In accordance with instructions which I have received from His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, I have the honour to bring the above considerations to the notice of the Peruvian Government, and to inform Your Excellency that His Majesty's Government do not intend to proceed with the ratification of the Treaty.

I shall, therefore, be glad to arrange with Your Excellency for a formal exchange of notes stating that, as the objects to be attained by the Treaty for the establishment of a Peace Commission signed on 28th March, 1919, are now sufficiently provided for by the League of Nations, it has been decided to terminate the Treaty for the establishment of the Peace Commission signed on 28th March, 1919.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

IN reply to Your Excellency's Note of 18th February last, relative to the notice given by the Governments of Australia and Canada in regard to the Commercial Treaty, I have the honour to state that the contents of your Note under reply are so indefinite that I cannot understand the objects of above-mentioned Governments which I shall be glad if you will kindly explain, because in the opinion of the Imperial Government the Agreement of 1920 does not give the right to the above-mentioned Commonwealths to withdraw from that agreement.

MONSIEUR LE PRESIDENT DU CONSEIL,

I have not been informed of the reasons for the decision taken by these two Governments, but, whatever the reasons may be, the liberty of those Governments to take it is quite clearly provided for in the second paragraph of Article II of the 1903 Convention (1) and paragraph 3 of the 1920 Agreement (2), to which I had the honour to refer Your Highness in my previous Notes, and I am, therefore, not in a position to admit that there can be any question of the validity of the decision.

I am forwarding a translation of Your Highness's Note to the Acting Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for the information of His Majesty's Government.

PHYTOPATHOLOGY.

Draft International Convention.

4419

No. 254.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 255.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 7th March, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 26th January* regarding the draft Convention drawn up by the International Conference on Phytopathology held at Rome in the early part of 1914.

2. If it is proposed to proceed with this draft Convention it seems desirable that an endeavour should be made to secure an alteration in the wording of Articles 18 and

* 4419: not printed; it transmitted a copy of the Note from the Italian Ambassador, which forms Enclosure 1 in No. 257.

21,* which in their present form do not make suitable provision for the self-governing Dominions. It would appear, moreover, that Article 2* should not be confined to adhering States, seeing that Article 3* refers not only to adhesion, but also to ratification. As, however, the draft Convention was negotiated by an International Conference in March, 1914, Mr. Churchill feels some doubt whether any alteration in the text is now possible, and he would be glad to receive Lord Curzon's observations on this point.

3. The scheme of the Convention is apparently that each "Colony" which adheres under Article 18 becomes to all intents and purposes a contracting State (this presumably being the meaning of the words "aux mêmes conditions que les Etats indépendants" in the second paragraph of Article 18). From this point of view Article 16* might be open to objection as having the appearance of regulating the relations of the various parts of the Empire inter se. Article 21, however, is not consistent with this scheme, as it is clearly based on the view that "Etat Contractant" means not "contracting country" but "high contracting party."

4. If it is possible to amend the text of the Convention, Mr. Churchill would suggest that the most convenient course would be to omit the second paragraph of Article 18 and to insert the words "Dominions ou Colonies" after the word "Etats" in the first paragraph (cf. Articles 1 and 5 of the International Refrigeration Convention† signed at Paris in 1920), while in Article 21 he would suggest the omission of the words "soit pour la totalité de ses territoires, soit seulement pour toutes ou partie de ses Colonies" and "ou des Colonies visées dans l'acte de dénonciation" and the substitution of "Gouvernement" and "Gouvernements" for "Etat" and "Etats" (compare the wording of Article 19*).

5. It will also be necessary to consider the situation of Ireland, but Mr. Churchill thinks that it would suffice if the position as regards Ireland were made clear at the time when His Majesty's ratification was deposited.

6. A copy of this letter is being sent to the India Office and the Ministry of Agriculture.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

* The text of these Articles was as follows:—

Article 2.—Il sera créé dans chaque Etat adhérent à la présente Convention un service gouvernemental de Phytopathologie destiné à assurer l'exécution de ces mesures.

Le service gouvernemental de Phytopathologie comprendra au minimum: 1° la création d'un ou de plusieurs établissements d'études et de recherches, scientifiques et techniques; 2° l'organisation de la surveillance efficace des cultures; 3° l'inspection des envois; 4° la délivrance des certificats phytopathologiques.

Article 3.—Les mesures visées aux paragraphes 2, 3 et 4 de l'article 2 devront être déjà réalisées au moment de la ratification ou de l'adhésion à la présente Convention.

Toutes les autres mesures visées aux articles 1 et 2 seront prises dans chaque Etat dans un délai de deux ans à partir du jour de la ratification ou de l'adhésion à la présente Convention.

Article 16.—Les Etats liés par la présente Convention ne devront pas traiter les pays non contractants plus favorablement que les Etats contractants.

Article 18.—Les Etats qui n'ont pas signé le présent engagement sont admis à y adhérer sur leur demande.

Les Colonies, sur la demande des Etats dont elles dépendent, pourront être admises à adhérer aux mêmes conditions que les Etats indépendants.

Article 19.—L'adhésion sera notifiée par la voie diplomatique au Gouvernement Italien et par celui-ci aux Gouvernements contractants ainsi qu'à l'Institut International d'Agriculture.

Article 21.—S'il arrivait qu'un des Etats contractants voulût dénoncer la présente Convention soit pour la totalité de ses territoires, soit seulement pour toutes ou partie de ses Colonies, la dénonciation sera notifiée au Gouvernement Italien qui communiquera immédiatement copie conforme de la notification à tous les autres Etats en leur faisant savoir la date à laquelle il l'a reçue.

La dénonciation ne produira ses effets qu'à l'égard de l'Etat qui l'aura notifiée ou des Colonies visées dans l'acte de dénonciation et cela seulement un an après que la notification en sera parvenue au Gouvernement Italien.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1., 28th March, 1922.

WITH reference to your letter of the 7th instant* relative to the draft Convention on Phytopathology, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to state that, as Mr. Secretary Churchill is doubtless aware, the draft Convention has not yet been signed by plenipotentiaries and as such is not binding on any of the signatory Governments.

2. The alterations suggested in your letter under reply could only be introduced into the draft with the concurrence of those Powers who took part in the framing of the draft, which would appear to entail the summoning of a new conference. Lord Curzon is not aware that any such desire has been expressed by other parties and considers that, as neither His Majesty's Government nor the Government of India intend to become parties to the Convention, it would be difficult for this country to take the lead in demanding any such conference.

(No. 136.)

MY LORD MARQUESS,

Italian Embassy, 14th January, 1922.

As Your Lordship is aware, an International Conference on Phytopathology (the science of the treatment of plant diseases) was held at Rome in the early months of 1914, and concluded its labours with a Final Act dated 3rd March, 1914, containing the draft of a Convention which should have been signed in due course by the various States concerned.

The War broke out and signature was not proceeded with. The Italian Government is now desirous that it should take place.

The Convention is of a purely technical nature, and there ought, therefore, to be no difficulties in the way of its signature by former enemy States also. The States which have recently sprung into being as a result of the War could also be invited to adhere to the Convention.

In any case, before taking any steps in the matter, the Italian Government would be glad to learn whether the British Government have no objection to their doing so.

I have, therefore, the honour to beg Your Lordship to be kind enough to enable me to supply the above-mentioned information to my Government.

2. The reasons for this decision are explained in a letter addressed by the Minister of Agriculture to the Secretary of the International Institute at Rome, of which letter a copy is enclosed herein for the information of your Government.

9th February, 1922.

I AM directed to refer to paragraph (C) in the letter enclosed with your letter of the 5th February, 1921 (No. 57558), on the subject of the Phytopathological Convention signed at Rome on the 4th March, 1914, and to say that, after having given the subject full consideration, the Government regrets its inability to adhere to the Convention.

The Ministry has described, in the Memorandum forwarded with its letter of 15th July last, its scheme for dealing with plant pathology in England and Wales, and it is understood that a similar Memorandum relating to this work in Scotland was forwarded to the Institute by the Board of Agriculture for Scotland on 25th May, 1921.

The Institute is therefore acquainted with the steps taken by the Government in relation to diseases of plants in Great Britain, which it is believed do to a large extent meet the demands of the Convention.

I am, &c.,

R. J. THOMPSON.

The Secretary,

International Institute of Agriculture,

Rome.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 11th April, 1922.

WITH reference to Foreign Office note of 13th February relative to the draft Convention on Phytopathology, I have the honour to inform you that the Government of India regret that they are also precluded from ratifying this Convention.

I have the honour to be, with the highest consideration,

Your Excellency's obedient Servant,

(For the Secretary of State)

MILES W. LAMPSON.

BOARD OF TRADE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 12th July, 1922.)

[Answered by No. 259.]

Board of Trade (Commercial Relations and Treaties Department),

Great George Street, London, S.W.1, 11th July, 1922.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Board of Trade to state that negotiations for the conclusion of a Commercial Treaty have for some time past been in progress between His Majesty's Government and the Polish Government, and in this connexion I am to enclose, for Mr. Secretary Churchill's information, copy of a letter* which has been addressed to the Foreign Office on the subject.

The form of Colonial article as finally put forward by His Majesty's Government was on the usual lines, and for convenience of reference a copy is enclosed. The Polish reply is as follows:—

"The Ministry of Trade and Industry would prefer not to insert the amendment in the form proposed by the Board of Trade, as in case of its acceptance it would be necessary for the Polish Government each time that Poland agreed to grant the Colonies and India the most-favoured-nation treatment regarding imports to Poland, to satisfy themselves that the same facilities have been granted to Polish products by the Colonies and India.

"The Ministry is therefore of the opinion that the best way of settling this question would be to expedite the adherence of the Colonies and India to the Treaty, and for that reason it is not in favour of extending the term of six months to one year proposed by the Ministry for the adherence of the Colonies and India in the Treaty. It is further noticed that it is proposed to conclude the Treaty with Great Britain only for one year, and that the expiration of the Treaty with Great Britain would automatically include the expiration of the Treaty with the Colonies."

The Board's counter-proposals in regard to this matter are set out in paragraph 4 of their letter* to the Foreign Office, copy of which is enclosed herewith.

I have, &c.,

H. FOUNTAIN.

* Paragraph 4 only printed.

Enclosure 1 in No. 258.

FORM OF COLONIAL ARTICLE AS FINALLY SUBMITTED TO THE POLISH GOVERNMENT.

THE stipulations of the present Convention shall not be applicable to India or to any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates beyond the Seas unless notice of accession shall have been given on behalf of India or of any such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate by His Britannic Majesty's Representative at Warsaw before the expiration of one year from the date of the exchange of the ratifications of the present Convention. Nevertheless, the produce of the soil or industry of India or of any of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates shall enjoy in Poland complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment so long as India or such Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate shall accord to the produce of the soil or industry of Poland treatment as favourable as it gives to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country.

(Note.—The second sentence of the above article is objected to by the Polish Government.)

Enclosure 2 in No. 258.

(Extract.)

Board of Trade

(Commercial Relations and Treaties Department),
Great George Street, London, S.W.1, 11th July, 1922.

SIR,

4. As regards Article 4 (the Colonial Article) the Board are of opinion that an effort should be made to induce the Polish Government to accept the form of these provisions proposed by His Majesty's Government. The particular difficulty that the Polish Government would have to satisfy themselves in every case, before granting most-favoured-nation treatment to the goods of a particular British Colony, that that Colony was giving most-favoured-nation treatment to Polish goods, has, so far as the Board are aware, not been raised by any other Government, and besides could, in the Board's opinion, be surmounted by the addition of some such phrase as the following:—

"For this purpose His Majesty's Government will, through His Majesty's Representative at Warsaw, furnish to the Polish Government a list of the British Dominions, Colonies, Possessions and Protectorates which accord such treatment to the said produce of Poland and will further in the same manner notify them of any changes in the foregoing respect."

If, however, the Polish Government are not prepared to accept some such form of words, the Board consider that His Majesty's Government might ultimately agree to drop the provision objected to by the Polish Government, but in that case it ought, in the Board's view, to remain open to the British Dominions and Colonies to adhere to the Treaty at any time during its currency. It certainly does not appear reasonable to shorten the period during which adherence may take place to six months.

SIR,

Downing Street, 31st August, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to request you to inform the Board of Trade that he has had under consideration your letter of the 11th July* with regard to the proposed Commercial Treaty with Poland.

* No. 258.

3. As regards the particular question raised in your letter under reference, Mr. Churchill would be reluctant to agree to the entire omission of the provision by which most-favoured-nation treatment can be secured for the produce or manufacture of a non-adhering Dominion or Colony, so long as such Dominion or Colony accords similar treatment to Polish goods. At the same time the alternative proposal in the fourth paragraph of your letter to the Foreign Office of the 11th July* does not appear to him altogether suitable, and he would suggest in place of the words proposed by the Board of Trade the addition to the Article of the following words:—

"For this purpose, His Majesty's Representative at Warsaw will, at the request of the Polish Government, make inquiries as to whether any particular self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate accords to the produce of the soil or industry of Poland treatment as favourable as it gives to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country."

4. It will be necessary, at some stage in the negotiations, to make clear the position of the Irish Free State on the lines suggested in the letter from this Department of the 11th August,† regarding the proposed Commercial Treaty with Czecho-Slovakia.

5. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Foreign Office.

BOARD OF TRADE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 4th September, 1922.)

[Answered by No. 261.]

Board of Trade (Commercial Relations and Treaties Department),

Great George Street, London, S.W.1, 2nd September, 1922.

SIR,

WITH reference to your letter of 31st August‡ and previous correspondence on the subject of the proposed Commercial Treaty with Poland, I am directed by the Board of Trade to forward, for the information of Mr. Secretary Churchill, copy of a letter§ which they have addressed to the Foreign Office, enclosing a proposed English text of the treaty.

With regard to paragraph 3 of your letter under reply I am to say that the Polish Government are understood to have put forward a proposal to the effect that any part of the Empire notified to them as giving most-favoured-nation treatment, and therefore enjoying the benefits accorded by the second paragraph of Article IX of the enclosed draft|| shall be regarded as definitely committed to such most-favoured-nation treatment for the remainder of the current year, i.e., if the treaty were signed on 5th February, 1923, and on 7th March His Majesty's Representative at Warsaw notified that a particular Dominion granted most-favoured-nation treatment to Polish goods that Dominion would be bound to continue such treatment until 5th February, 1924, and to give three months' notice of its intention to discontinue such treatment.

* Enclosure in No. 258. † No. 54. ‡ No. 259. § Not printed; it dealt with the provisions of the proposed Treaty generally and was not relevant to the present question. || Not printed. Article IX of the draft read as follows:—

The stipulations of the present Treaty shall not apply to any part of His Britannic Majesty's territories outside the United Kingdom unless notice is given by His Britannic Majesty's representative at Warsaw of the desire of the Government of such part of His Britannic Majesty's territories that the said stipulations shall be so applicable. Nevertheless, the produce of the soil or industry of any part of His Britannic Majesty's territories outside the United Kingdom shall enjoy in Poland complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment so long as such part of His Britannic Majesty's territories shall accord to the produce of the soil or industry of Poland treatment as favourable as that accorded to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country. For this purpose His Britannic Majesty's representative at Warsaw will at the request of the Polish Government make inquiries as to whether any specified part of His Britannic Majesty's territories accords to the produce of the soil or industry of Poland treatment as favourable as it gives to the produce of the soil or industry of any other foreign country.

It appears to the Board to be difficult to accept an amendment on these lines, and that it would be simpler from the point of view of the Dominions to adhere to the Treaty under the first paragraph of Article IX and to subject the agreement to termination under Article X. The Board would, however, be glad to learn Mr. Churchill's views as to the attitude which should be adopted by His Majesty's Government in the event of the amendment being pressed by the Polish Government, and in particular as to whether it would not be preferable to withdraw the second paragraph of Article IX in that event.

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th September, 1922.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Churchill to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2nd September,* regarding the proposed Commercial Treaty with Poland.

2. Mr. Churchill concurs in the view that the counter-proposal of the Polish Government as indicated in the Note to Article IX of the English text of the draft Treaty is impracticable, and that, if the Polish Government are unable to accept the proposal put forward in paragraph 3 of the letter from this Department of the 31st August† and embodied in the second paragraph of Article IX of the English text, it would be preferable to withdraw the second paragraph of the Article entirely. He hopes, however, that this course will not be found necessary, and that the Polish Government will be induced to accept the Article in its present form.

5. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Foreign Office.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

Note.—The Board of Trade concurred in the view expressed in paragraph 2 of the above letter, and instructions were sent to His Majesty's representative at Warsaw accordingly. No further communication on the subject had been received up to the end of 1922.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch, Dominions No. 31 of the 26th January,‡ I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [Your Royal Highness] to inform your Ministers that the German Ambassador has inquired, under instructions from his Government, whether the agreement of the 31st December, 1920, between the British and German Governments respecting Article 297 of the Treaty of Versailles could be extended so as to include the self-governing Dominions other than New Zealand, to which it has already been extended.

2. I should be glad to learn your Ministers' views as to the reply to be returned to the German Ambassador. Should it be considered that, at this date, there would not be sufficient practical advantage to justify the extension of the Agreement to the [Commonwealth of Australia,] [Union of South Africa,] it would, no doubt, be of advantage if your Ministers could supply a statement, for communication to the German Ambassador, showing their practice as regards the matters dealt with in Articles 11 and 13.

[To Union of South Africa: It is observed from Section 1 of Proclamation No. 148 of 1920, a copy of which was enclosed in Lord Buxton's despatch No. 626 of the 3rd September, 1920,* that it is the practice to release all property in the Union belonging to German nationals who were resident or domiciled in the Union at the outbreak of War.]

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 6th February, 1922.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, February 3rd, 1922.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 17th ultimo,* relative to the request of the Australian Government that in the revision of the Anglo-Siamese treaties provision should be made to safeguard the right of the Commonwealth Government to exercise control over immigration.

2. Lord Curzon is advised that Article 1 of the existing treaty of 1855 probably presents no treaty objection in its present form to the Australian immigration laws. Although this Article provides that all British subjects, once they have been admitted to Siam, "shall receive full protection and assistance to enable them to reside in Siam in all security" it does not appear to prevent the Siamese Government from controlling the admission of British subjects in the first instance, a right which is of course reciprocal.

3. If, nevertheless, Mr. Secretary Churchill or the Government of Australia are of the opinion that there is any valid doubt as to the interpretation of the treaty in its present form, Lord Curzon will consider further what action should be taken when the revision of the treaties takes place to safeguard the right of the Australian Government to regulate immigration. In such an event it would of course be necessary that any modification of the present treaty should not be such as to weaken the position taken up by His Majesty's Government in regard to the interpretation of other existing treaties which bear upon the operation of the immigration laws.

4. A copy of this letter is being forwarded to the Board of Trade and copies of the correspondence are being sent to His Majesty's Minister at Bangkok for his observations as to the likelihood of the Siamese Government wishing to challenge the right of the Australian Government to control immigration under the existing treaties. [Answered by No. 274.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 14th September, 1922.

WITH reference to Colonial Office letter of July 11th last,* I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit, for the observations of Mr. Secretary Churchill, a copy of a letter which is being addressed by this Department to the Board of Trade, together with a revised draft of the proposed Anglo-Siamese Commercial Treaty.†

2. Mr. Churchill will observe the alterations and additions which have been made in order to meet the wishes of the Australian Government; and also the manner in which special provision has been made to safeguard the position of subjects of British protected States, as recommended in the enclosure to Colonial Office letter of January 18th last.‡

3. Lord Curzon would also call attention to enclosure 2 in the letter to the Board of Trade, which embodies the observations of His Majesty's Minister at Bangkok on the subject of Australia and Siamese immigration.

5. A copy of the reply to the Board of Trade, together with the revised draft of the treaty is also being forwarded to the India Office.

Enclosure 1 in No. 273.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 14th September, 1922.

WITH reference to Board of Trade letter of July 10th last, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit for the observations of the Board of Trade a revised draft of the proposed Anglo-Siamese Commercial Treaty.

2. It will be observed that certain additions and modifications have been made in the draft submitted by the Board of Trade with their letter of November 10th, 1921. These alterations have been inserted for the most part in order to assimilate the draft to the proposed new model form for treaties of commerce and navigation as sent semi-officially to Mr. Fountain in Mr. Malkin's letter of August 21st last. This has entailed the addition of Articles Ten, Eleven and Twelve to the original draft.

3. The wishes of the Australian Government, which are dealt with in paragraphs 1 to 4 of the Board of Trade letter under reference, have been met in two ways; and a double safeguard is provided for the Immigration Laws of the Commonwealth. In the first place, Article X., copied from Article XV. of the United States of America-Siam Treaty of 1921, has been inserted with the omission of the word "trade." In the second place, the Board of Trade's suggestion (b) has been followed in Article XI., paragraph 2; and Australia or any other British dominion, colony, &c., will be free at one year's notice to withdraw from the Treaty altogether, as well as from earlier commercial treaties with Siam, including the 1855 treaty. This is effected by means of a schedule of the old treaties.

4. These alterations have necessitated a revision of Article IX. and a slight addition to the preamble of the draft Treaty.

5. With regard to the request of the Colonial Office relative to the position of subjects of British protected States, special provision has been made in paragraph 4 of Article XI.

6. I am further directed to enclose, herewith, a copy of despatch No. 52 of March 23rd,§ from His Majesty's Minister at Bangkok, dealing with the question of Australia and Siamese immigration.

7. Copies of this letter with the revised draft of the Treaty are being forwarded to the India Office and Colonial Office.

I am, &c.,

VICTOR WELLESLEY.

DRAFT TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED KINGDOM AND SIAM.

Article 4.—Export Duties.

Articles of export from the time of production to the date of shipment shall pay one impost only, whether this be levied as an inland or transit duty or paid on exportation. Goods or produce which pay any description of tax in the interior shall be exempted from any further payment of duty on exportation.

The tariff of export and inland duties appended to the treaty of 15th April, 1855, is hereby repealed.

The export duty on rice shall not exceed 25 cents per picul, and no export duty shall be levied on timber or minerals of any kind. It is understood that if export duties are levied on any other commodity, no other or higher duties shall be levied on the exportation of any such commodity to any part of the territories of His Britannic Majesty than those paid on the like article exported to any other foreign country.

Article 9.—Application of Articles 1 and 2.

The provisions of Articles 1 and 2 shall not be made applicable to British subjects unless and until rates of duty at least as high are applied to subjects of all other countries. Any concession in the matter of rates of duty which Siam may accord to articles of produce or manufacture of any other country shall simultaneously and unconditionally, without request and without compensation, be extended to articles the produce or manufacture of any territory to which under Article 11 the provisions of the present Treaty apply.

Article 10.—Nationality, Immigration and Public Security Legislation.

It is understood by the Contracting Parties that the stipulations contained in the present Treaty do not in any way affect, supersede or modify any of the laws, ordinances or regulations with regard to naturalisation, immigration, police or public security which are in force or which may be enacted in Siam or in any part of the British Empire.

Article 11.—Application of the New Treaty.

The stipulations of the present Treaty shall be applicable in addition to the United Kingdom to all His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies and Possessions, and to all British Protectorates and protected States.

Notice may, however, be given at any time by either Contracting Party that the stipulations of the present Treaty and of the treaties, agreements and exchanges of notes enumerated in the schedule hereto shall no longer apply to any self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession, Protectorate or protected State on the expiration of one year from the date of such notice. In that event the goods produced or manufactured in such self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession, Protectorate or protected State shall, so long as it shall accord to goods the produce or manufacture of Siam treatment as favourable as it gives to the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country, enjoy in Siam complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment.

His Britannic Majesty shall have the right, by giving twelve months' notice to that effect, to apply the stipulations of the present Treaty to any territory in respect of which a Mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been conferred upon His Britannic Majesty. In that case the provisions of the preceding paragraph of this article will apply to the said territory.

It is understood that the provisions of the present Treaty and of the treaties, agreements and exchanges of notes enumerated in the schedule hereto which apply to British subjects shall be deemed to apply, as regards commercial matters, to natives of all British Protectorates and protected States, and to the natives of any Mandated Territory to which the stipulations of the present Treaty may apply.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Extract.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 15th November, 1922.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 14th September* and of the 1st November† with regard to the proposed Commercial Treaty with Siam.

2. It is observed that it is proposed to cover the point raised by the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia in two ways:—

(a) by the insertion of Article 10 of the draft Treaty.

(b) by the insertion of a provision in Article 11 as to separate termination of existing Treaties with Siam in respect of the Dominions and Colonies.

3. The Secretary of State feels considerable doubt whether the first of these proposals is either necessary or desirable. No question has hitherto arisen as to the validity of the Australian Immigration Regulations in view of Article 1 of the Treaty with Siam of 1855, and, according to the despatch from H.M.'s Minister at Bangkok, of which a copy was enclosed in your letter of the 14th September, the question is unlikely to arise in practice. Moreover, the raising of the question in this case might give rise to doubts as to the application of Immigration Regulations, to subjects or citizens of other States with which there exist Treaties containing similar provisions to Article 1 of the Treaty of 1855. In this connection I am to invite reference to your letter of the 6th December, 1920,‡ concerning the New Zealand Immigration Restriction Bill. In the circumstances it would appear desirable, if Lord Curzon agrees, that an endeavour should be made to induce the Commonwealth Government to withdraw their suggestion.

4. As regards the second proposal, the Treaties with Siam are almost entirely unilateral, and it is unlikely that the necessity will arise on the British side for their separate termination in respect of any of the Dominions or Colonies. On the other hand, if Siam were to terminate separately in respect of, e.g. the Malay States, the results might be unfortunate.

5. In the circumstances, I am to suggest that (assuming that the Commonwealth Government are prepared to withdraw their suggestions as to the insertion in the Treaty of provisions relating to immigration regulations) the most desirable course would be as follows:—

(1) To omit Articles 10 and 11 of the draft Treaty.

(2) At the end of Article 4 after "the territories of His Britannic Majesty," to insert the words "(including territories under the protection of His Britannic Majesty and territories in respect of which a Mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty)."

(3) For the last three lines of Article 9 to substitute "articles the produce or manufacture of any part of His Britannic Majesty's territories as defined in Article 4."

(4) To insert a provision to the effect that the stipulations of the present Treaty and of the other Treaties, &c., enumerated in the Schedule, which apply to British subjects, shall be deemed to apply, as regards commercial matters, to natives of any of His Britannic Majesty's Protectorates and Protected States or of any territory in respect of which a Mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty.

9. I am to enclose a copy of a despatch§ which has been sent to the Governor-General of the Commonwealth pending further consideration of the matter.

10. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Board of Trade.

* No. 273. † No. 54377: not printed; it enclosed a copy of a letter from the Board of Trade suggesting certain modifications in the draft Treaty. ‡ 60042: not printed; it enclosed a copy of a Foreign Office Memorandum on the provisions in various Commercial Treaties relating to entry and residence. § No. 275.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Confidential.)

MY LORD, Downing Street, 15th November, 1922.
 WITH reference to Your Excellency's telegram of the 30th June,* I have the honour to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Minister at Bangkok regarding the suggestion that provision should be made in the proposed Commercial Treaty with Siam safeguarding the right of the Commonwealth Government to control immigration.

2. The communication of this despatch was delayed while the terms of the Treaty were further examined, and I hope to be able to communicate the views of His Majesty's Government to you by telegraph at an early date.

I have, &c.,
 DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure in No. 275.

MY LORD, British Legation, Bangkok, 23rd March, 1922.
 IN reply to Your Lordship's despatch No. 21 of the 3rd ultimo, inviting my views as to the powers which the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia would retain under a new Anglo-Siamese Treaty of controlling the immigration of Siamese into Australia, I have the honour to observe that it is improbable that in the immediate future any Siamese will think of emigrating there and I do not consider the question need come up for discussion at all. If, however, it were to do so, it is quite certain that in their present frame of mind no Siamese Government could or would dream of signing a Treaty with a Foreign Power which was not based on the idea of strict equality and perfect reciprocity. In this respect I venture to draw Your Lordship's attention to Article 1 of the recent Siamese-American Treaty, which lays down that not only may citizens and subjects of the two countries enter, travel and reside in the territories of the other, but that they may own or lease and occupy houses (though not land), and it is not conceivable, after obtaining such flattering and generous terms from the most reactionary Government in the world in the matter of the immigration of the coloured races, that the Siamese would admit of any unilateral arrangement with the British Empire of a nature to limit their rights under the new Treaty. If, however, the question is not first raised by us, I do not think the Siamese will do so, and it is at least possible that they would not contest the local legislation of our self-governing Dominions with regard to immigration were any isolated case to occur. At any rate it seems worth while taking the risk.

It must also not be overlooked that the tin mining interest in the Malay Provinces of Siam is largely in the hands of Australian syndicates who have invested much capital and employ in their undertakings a considerable number of Australian mining engineers. It would be unfortunate if, in an attempt to safeguard the Australian Government against a somewhat remote contingency, a practical issue were raised which might immediately affect in a detrimental manner Australian capital and experts.

I have, &c.,
 R. H. GREG.

 WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 264 of 31st of July,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, copies of Notes exchanged between His Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid and the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs regarding the question whether British imports into Spain would benefit under the most-favoured-nation clause of the Anglo-Spanish Agreement of 1894 by the reductions in the tariff recently granted to French and Swiss goods by the Commercial Treaties concluded between Spain and those two countries.

2. As regards the negotiations for a Commercial Treaty referred to in the correspondence, I would invite reference to the statement made by the President of the Board of Trade in the House of Commons on the 3rd of August, which is reproduced on page 146 of the Board of Trade Journal of the 10th of August. Copies of the Treaty as signed will be communicated to you when available.

Enclosure 1 in No. 276.

(W 6175/1/41.)

YOUR EXCELLENCY, British Embassy, Madrid, 15th July, 1922.
 SEVERAL letters having been addressed lately to this Embassy by British exporters inquiring whether British goods imported into Spain will benefit under the most-favoured-nation clause of the Commercial Arrangement between Spain and Great Britain of 1894 by the concessions granted by Spain to French and Swiss goods in the Treaties recently concluded with those two countries, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that, in order to avoid possible difficulties arising, I put this question yesterday to the Spanish Commercial Delegation for the negotiation of Treaties of Commerce. I stated that I had no doubt that the view of His Majesty's Government would be that so long as the arrangement of 1894 was in force British goods were entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment on entry into Spain, and that subsequent legislation could not modify or reduce the value of treaty stipulations. As, however, the question had been raised, I wished to have a clear ruling by the competent Spanish Authorities before answering the letters addressed to me on the subject, as I did not want British exporters to forward goods to Spain in the belief that they would receive reduction in the Tariff and then find that this view might be questioned by the Spanish Customs. The majority of the members of the Spanish Commercial Delegation were of the opinion that British goods should benefit by the French and Swiss Treaties so long as the agreement of 1894 remains in force, but as the opinion of the Commission was not unanimous I have thought it advisable to address this Note to Your Excellency in order to obtain a clear ruling on the subject.

I venture once again to emphasize the view which is held by all the members of the British Delegation, and is undoubtedly that of His Majesty's Government, that during the existence of the 1894 arrangement British goods are unquestionably entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment, and to express the hope that I may receive from Your Excellency a reply to this effect with the least possible delay, in view of the fact that the French Treaty comes into operation to-day. I need hardly point out that a refusal to recognize this might seriously prejudice the prospects of the Commercial Treaty now under discussion, which, if signed, will supersede the arrangement of 1894, and so ipso facto solve the question.

ESMÉ HOWARD.

25TH SEPTEMBER. New Commercial Treaty with Spain, outline of which given in statement by President of Board of Trade in House of Commons on 3rd August, and reprinted in Board of Trade Journal of 10th August, not yet signed.

In addition to special advantages mentioned in statement, Treaty accords general most-favoured-nation treatment on British side to Spanish goods, but as policy of Spanish Government is not to grant general most-favoured-nation treatment to any country, Treaty does not contain formal stipulation for general most-favoured-nation treatment for British goods. Similarly, not found practicable to include in Treaty provision on usual lines, securing most-favoured-nation treatment to non-accessing parts of Empire, while they continue to give most-favoured-nation treatment to Spain. Exchange of Notes, 1894, providing for reciprocal most-favoured-nation treatment as between Spain and Dominions and Colonies will lapse when Treaty comes into force.

While applying, in first instance, on British side, to United Kingdom only, Treaty contains accession clause for other parts of Empire. Feared, however, no prospect of inducing Spanish Government after Treaty has come into force, to grant to Dominions and Colonies, pending accession to Treaty or other arrangements for regulating their commercial relations with Spain even in return for general most-favoured-nation treatment, benefit of lower rates than Second Column of Spanish Tariff published in Board of Trade Journal of 23rd February, as such are given only in return for special privileges. Apprehended, indeed, that unless other arrangements made, Spanish Government may subject Dominions and Colonies to duties in First Column of Spanish Tariff. In order to avoid this, suggested that there should be exchange of Notes guaranteeing for produce or manufacture of Dominions and Colonies rates in Second Schedule of Spanish Tariff, so long as Dominion or Colony concerned gives Spanish goods most-favoured-nation treatment. Please telegraph whether your Government concur, and whether, if necessary, in order to obtain rates in Second Schedule of Spanish Tariff, they would be prepared to undertake to accord general most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish imports, subject to right to terminate at six months' notice.

It should be explained that list of British goods, for which most-favoured-nation treatment secured by the Treaty, drawn up as far as possible with reference to trade interests of all parts of Empire.

THE Governor-General has telegraphed to Mr. Churchill that you propose to discuss with His Majesty's Government the position of Canada in relation to the Commercial Treaty recently negotiated between this country and Spain. I understand that Mr. Russell has called at the Colonial Office about this, and has been shown the relevant papers.

We have just learned that the Spanish Ambassador has informed the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs that he has received a telegram from the Spanish Government to the effect that the Canadian Government have proposed to them, through the Spanish Consul-General at Montreal, the immediate negotiation of a Commercial Treaty between Canada and Spain. The Foreign Office would be glad to be able to inform the Spanish Ambassador what procedure is contemplated; and, in the circumstances, it would be very convenient if you could let me know whether you propose to take up this matter yourself with the Spanish Ambassador shortly. If so, would you wish that the Spanish Ambassador should be informed accordingly?

DEAR MR. MARSH, Ritz Hotel, Piccadilly, London, 12th October, 1922.
I HAVE your letter of yesterday* respecting the Commercial Treaty with Spain.

I am not advised as to any formal negotiations between our Government and the Spanish Consul-General at Montreal. I do not think they have gone beyond the inquiry stage.

We are aware that the contemplated treaty between Great Britain and Spain does not meet Canadian conditions. Naturally we are desirous of seeing that Canadian products receive most favourable consideration in the Spanish market. For this purpose it may be necessary for us to have direct negotiations with the Spanish Government. I shall be glad at a convenient moment to discuss this point with Mr. Churchill.

(No. 266.) Commerce.

YOUR EXCELLENCY, Ministry of State, Madrid, 30th October, 1922.

I DULY received Your Excellency's Note No. 273, of the 23rd August, in which, and with reference to a question addressed by the Spanish Delegates to the British Delegation in the course of negotiations for a Treaty of Commerce between Spain and Great Britain, Your Excellency states, after receiving instructions from your Government to that effect, that after the Free State of Ireland shall have been established, the phrase "United Kingdom," which appears in the draft Treaty of Commerce between both countries, must be considered as not comprising the said State, and that the phrase "His Majesty's Territories outside the United Kingdom" will include from that time onwards the said Free State.

I have, therefore, the honour to inform Your Excellency that I take note of the said declaration, and that His Majesty's Government has no observations to offer concerning it.

I avail, &c.,

Sir Esmé Howard,
His British Majesty's Ambassador.

YOUR EXCELLENCY, Ministry of State, Madrid, 31st October, 1922.

WITH reference to the question which Your Excellency addressed to me a few days ago as to the treatment in respect of the Tariff which Spain will apply to the goods, the produce of British India and of the Dominions and Colonies of His Britannic Majesty at the time the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between Spain and Great Britain comes into force, after its signature to-day (taking into account the fact that the said Treaty, in accordance with the terms of its Article 24, is not applicable to those territories), and on the expiration ipso facto of the Commercial Agreement concluded between these two countries by exchange of Notes of the 20th and 29th of June, 1894, prorogued by that of the 28th and 29th December of the same year, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that His Majesty's Government is prepared to apply, for a period of six months as from the date on which the Treaty referred to comes into force, to merchandise originating in and emanating from the said territories, the duties under the Second Column of the Tariff on condition that these countries concede to Spanish products most-favoured-nation treatment.

J. FERNÁNDEZ PRIDA.

Sir Esmé Howard,

YOUR EXCELLENCY, British Embassy, Madrid, 1st November, 1922.
WITH reference to Your Excellency's Note No. 267 of 31st October, informing me that His Catholic Majesty's Government will apply, for a period of six months from the date of the coming into force of the Anglo-Spanish Treaty of Commerce and Navigation which was signed yesterday, the rates of import duty of the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff to goods, the produce and manufacture of British India, and of the British Dominions and Colonies, in return for most-favoured-nation treatment accorded to goods, the produce of Spain, by these British territories. I have the honour, while expressing to Your Excellency my best thanks for this communication, to request under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs that the Second Column rates of the Spanish Tariff may be applied to the goods of British India, the British Dominions and Colonies under similar conditions for an indefinite period, subject to six months' notice of denunciation of this arrangement being given by any of the parties interested.

I shall be grateful if Your Excellency will be so good as to inform this Embassy at your earliest convenience if His Catholic Majesty's Government agrees to this request.

Minister of State.

YOUR EXCELLENCY, Madrid, 31st October, 1922.
AN agreement having been arrived at between the Government of His Majesty and the Government of His Britannic Majesty respecting the manner of applying to the amount of 750,000 tons of coal the benefit of the reduction in the Customs duty established in the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between Spain and Great Britain signed this day, in order to obviate the inconveniences which the levying of the rate of duty stipulated in the said Treaty would involve in practice, and in view of the expediency of establishing definitely and formally the terms of the said agreement, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the shipments of coal to which Item 31 of the present Spanish Tariff refers, imported into Spain from the territories of His Britannic Majesty, constituting the annual amount of the seven hundred and fifty thousand tons mentioned in Schedule A, Section 1 of the said Treaty, shall pay, on being cleared through the Customs, the duty of seven pesetas fifty centimos as established for this item in the Second Column of the Tariff; but the Customs will return to the real and true consumers of the coal constituting the amount referred to the sum of three pesetas fifty centimos per ton imported to make up this amount; so that the importers in question will thus in reality pay a duty of four pesetas as laid down in the Treaty referred to.

The Governments of His Catholic Majesty and of His Britannic Majesty being in agreement with the procedure herein indicated, without prejudice to complementing it by the other regulations which the nature of the case may render necessary, hereby declare their agreement to this effect by means of the present Note and Your Excellency's, the exchange of which takes place immediately the Treaty is signed, taking effect as soon as this comes into force.

I avail, &c.,
FERNÁNDEZ PRIDA.

His Excellency
Sir Esmé Howard,
His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador.

Enclosure 6 in No. 286.

(No. 334.)

YOUR EXCELLENCY, British Embassy, Madrid, 31st October, 1922.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Note, No. 268 of 31st October, stating that the Government of His Catholic Majesty and the Government of His Britannic Majesty, having arrived at an agreement in regard to the methods of application to the amount of 750,000 tons of coal of the benefit of the reduction of Customs duty established in the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and Spain, signed this day, in order to obviate the inconveniences which the levying of the rate of duty stipulated in the said Treaty would involve in practice, and in view of the expediency of establishing definitely and formally the terms of the said agreement, it is stipulated that the shipments of coal referred to in item 31 of the Spanish Tariff now in force, and which are imported from the territories of His Britannic Majesty into Spain, constituting the annual amount of the seven hundred and fifty thousand tons mentioned in Schedule A, Section 1, of the said Treaty, shall pay, on being cleared through the Customs, the duty of Ptas. 7.50 (seven pesetas fifty centimos) established for this item in the Second Column of the Tariff; but the Customs will return to the real and true consumers of the coal constituting the amount referred to the sum of three pesetas fifty centimos per ton imported to make up this amount, so that the importers in question will thus in reality pay a duty of four pesetas as established in the Treaty referred to.

The Governments of His Catholic Majesty and of His Britannic Majesty being in agreement with the procedure herein indicated, without prejudice to complementing it by the other regulations which the nature of the case may render necessary, hereby declare their agreement to this effect by means of the present Note and of the reply to be received from me, the exchange of which Notes will take place immediately after the said Treaty has been signed, taking effect as soon as it comes into force.

I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that His Majesty's Government are in accordance with the terms of the above communication, and note that the procedure above indicated will take effect on the exchange of the present Notes.

SIR, Downing Street, 9th December, 1922

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 415 of the 6th of December,* I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, copies of Notes exchanged between His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Madrid, and the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, relative to the adhesion of Newfoundland to the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty of the 31st of October, 1922.

2. The instructions referred to in Mr. Wingfield's Note of the 11th of November, were sent at the instance of Sir Richard Squires.

(No. 343.)

YOUR EXCELLENCY, British Embassy, Madrid, 11th November, 1922.
WITH reference to my Note No. 336 of 1st November, and under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Colony of Newfoundland has signified her acceptance of and adherence to the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty in its entirety.

Your Excellency will no doubt recollect that under Article 24 of this Treaty it was established that in order to obtain the benefits of its provisions, each Colony or Dominion must, through His Majesty's Representative in this country, signify her adherence to it. I have now therefore the honour to request, on behalf of the Colony of Newfoundland, that the benefits of the Treaty may be extended to goods from that Dominion as from the date on which the Treaty provisionally came into force, and I am also instructed to request that the Treaty Tariff rates should be made applicable to all cargoes of Newfoundland produce already discharged and at present awaiting clearance in the Customs at the ports of this country.

I trust that Your Excellency will be so good as to inform me at your earliest convenience of your agreement with the terms of this Note.

I avail, &c.,

Enclosure 2 in No. 287.

(No. 277.)

SIR, Madrid, 13th November, 1922.
I AM in receipt of your Note No. 343, of the 11th instant, in which you kindly inform me that the Colony of Newfoundland has expressed her acceptance of and adherence to the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty in its entirety, and accordingly solicits under the terms of Article 24 thereof that the benefits of the Treaty should be extended to Newfoundland products as from the date on which it came into force, and, at the same time, that the Customs duties established in the Treaty should be applied to all shipments of Newfoundland products which may have been already unloaded and are awaiting clearance in the Customs Houses at Spanish ports.

In reply to your above-mentioned Note, I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government, in view of the fact that the Colony of Newfoundland accepts and adheres to the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty of the 31st October last in its entirety, agrees to the application of the benefits of the said Treaty to the products of the Colony in question; and although these products are not entitled, under the terms of Article 24 of the Treaty, to enjoy the benefits thereof, except from the 11th instant, on which date you were good enough to notify me of the acceptance, His Majesty's Government, in its desire to meet the wishes of the British Government, and taking into account the short period which has lapsed since the Treaty became provisionally operative on the 6th instant, is prepared to make its effects retrospective, as far as the said Colony is concerned, to the 6th instant, and the necessary instructions are being given in this sense to the Spanish Customs Houses.

DEAR MR. FIELDING,

11th December, 1922.

I ENCLOSE, with reference to your letter of the 15th of November,* a copy of a Note which the Foreign Office sent to the Spanish Ambassador as to the general lines on which an agreement between Canada and Spain on commercial matters might be concluded, together with a copy of the Spanish Ambassador's reply.

Yours sincerely,

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 25th November, 1922.

WITH reference to my note of the 18th instant, I have the honour to state that a further letter has been received in the Colonial Office from the Canadian Minister of Finance regarding his proposed discussion with Your Excellency on the subject of the commercial relations between Spain and Canada.

2. Writing on the 15th instant Mr. Fielding requested that Your Excellency might be informed that he expected to be in London at an early date, and that he would be glad to have the privilege of an interview with you. He stated that the conditions of the treaty recently concluded between this country and Spain could hardly be made applicable to trade between Spain and Canada. For the purpose of facilitating discussion, and not as a formal offer, Mr. Fielding suggests that an agreement between Spain and Canada might be reached on the following general lines:—

(i) Canada would be prepared to agree that Spain and Canada should mutually give and receive most-favoured-nation treatment in all tariff matters and incidental commercial privileges;

(ii) If, as Mr. Fielding is informed, it is not the policy of Spain to conclude with any country a general agreement for most-favoured-nation treatment, he suggests that such treatment might be applied to specific lists of goods, one list to be prepared on behalf of Spain covering articles which she particularly desires to send to Canada, the other list to be prepared by Canada covering articles which she particularly desires to send to Spain.

3. Mr. Fielding concluded his letter by stating that his stay in London would probably be short.

MY LORD,

Spanish Embassy, London, 4th December, 1922.

IN reply to the Foreign Office note No. W.9602/1/41 of the 25th ultimo, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that I have received instructions from my Government respecting the matter to which that note refers. In view of the fact that in order to save time the Canadian Minister of Finance has been enabled to express his views semi-officially through Your Lordship respecting a commercial agreement with Spain, it appears to me that with the same object in view, he might be informed that in the opinion of the Spanish Government, as the existing law of

* Not printed: its purport is stated in Enclosure 1.

Spain does not permit the general concession of most-favoured-nation treatment to any other power, a separate agreement between Spain and Canada would not necessarily offer any advantage, but that it would be better to advise the Canadian Government to adhere to the Commercial Treaty between Spain and Great Britain of the 31st October last. Once they have acceded to this agreement, the Canadian Government may claim in virtue thereof for the commodities in which they may be interested either the reduced duties of Schedule (A) of the Treaty in question, or preferential treatment for the articles included in section 2 of that Schedule, which comprises nearly all the items of the Spanish Customs Schedule. By adhering to the treaty the Canadian Government will have ample guarantees of treatment as favourable as any they might obtain by a special agreement with Spain, since they would not necessarily obtain more thereby than is conceded in the treaty.

Nevertheless, the Spanish Government will be pleased to examine any proposal the Canadian Government may wish to submit to them.

I should be grateful if Your Lordship would be so good as to transmit the foregoing information to the Honourable Mr. Fielding.

Board of Trade,

Great George Street, London, S.W.1, 30th November, 1922.

SIR,

WITH reference to your letter of the 14th October (No. W. 8648/1031/41), transmitting copy of the recent Commercial Convention between Spain and Norway, I am directed by the Board of Trade to state that they note that Article 1 of the Convention provides that certain Norwegian goods enumerated in List A., annexed to the Convention are to be subject to the rates of duty laid down in that list.

The list includes the following item to be dutiable at 18 pesetas per 100 kilograms:—

No. 1331 in the Spanish Tariff—

"Other fish, salted, smoked or cured, except those in tins."

Paragraph 2 of Article 5 of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation recently concluded between His Majesty's Government and the Spanish Government provides that the Spanish Government will be prepared to extend to the produce or manufactures of this country any benefit or advantage conceded by Spain to any foreign country in respect of any specified article which is of interest to the trade of His Britannic Majesty's Territories, the only formality required in such a case being that formal application for such extension should be made to the Spanish Government by His Britannic Majesty's Representative at Madrid.

As item No. 1331 of the Spanish Tariff is not specified in Schedule A to the Anglo-Spanish Treaty, and as the articles which it embraces are of some interest to British trade, I am to suggest for Lord Curzon's consideration that His Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid should be instructed to make formal application to the Spanish Government that the tariff concession in question which has been accorded to Norway should be forthwith extended to similar goods produced or manufactured in those of His Britannic Majesty's Territories to which the Anglo-Spanish Treaty applies.

ARTICLE 3 OF AN ITALIAN ROYAL DECREE, No. 860 OF 28TH MAY, 1922.

In peace-time, foreign ships of war are, in a general sense, allowed to visit Italian ports and Colonies, and to anchor in territorial waters at a distance less than six miles from the low-tide line, as long as the number of ships belonging to one Power does not exceed three for each subdivision or section, as indicated in the following paragraph.

Notwithstanding the contents of the first paragraph of this Article (3), it must be borne in mind that advice must invariably be given of such visit, through the channels of the Diplomatic Service, and such notice to be received at least seven days prior to the intended visit.

The said ships will not be allowed to remain in Italian ports or territorial waters for a period exceeding eight days. They must also be prepared to sail from such ports within six hours' notice, should they be requested so to do by the Naval Authorities; this clause also holds good even should they not have completed the eight days' stay.

In the event of a foreign Naval Power arriving at a port with a superior number of vessels than those mentioned in the first paragraph of this Article (3), the port Naval Authorities must at once advise the Commanding Officer of the squadron of the excess number of units, in order that he may take steps in ordering those in excess to proceed to sea again.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 23rd January, 1922.)

THE Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs presents his compliments to the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, and, by direction of the Secretary of State, transmits herewith copies of correspondence† with the British Minister at Christiania, on the subject of Norwegian legislation concerning territorial waters.

Foreign Office,

(No. 19.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, 19th January, 1922.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 350 of the 1st ultimo, I still await information from the Board of Customs and Excise in regard to the present position of United Kingdom legislation, and the regulations by which that legislation is enforced, in relation to the principle of the three-mile limit of territorial waters.

2. As regards legislation in the Overseas Dominions, the Canadian Customs Act, while providing that bulk may not be broken or any alteration of stowage of cargo made to facilitate unlawful unloading within three leagues of the coast, only authorizes the boarding of a vessel bound for a Canadian seaport when it is within three marine miles of the anchorage ground. The provisions of the Newfoundland Customs Act are, in these respects, similar to those of the Canadian Act.

3. It appears that all other Dominion legislation puts the limit of customs jurisdiction, both as regards the breaking of bulk and boarding, at three sea miles from the coast, except the New Zealand Customs Act of 1913. This Act provides that any customs officer may board and search any ship, whether within or without the territorial waters of New Zealand; but also that bulk may not be broken within one league of the coast and that masters of ships are to bring to for boarding, if called upon to do so, within one league of the coast.

4. On receipt of the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown on the question raised by the Customs with regard to the Customs Consolidation Act of 1876, the Secretary of State for the Colonies will give further consideration to my suggestion that the correspondence should be communicated to the Government of New Zealand and those of the other Dominions, with a suggestion that legal advice should be taken in order that their legislation may be revised, where necessary, in such a way as to bring it into harmony with the principle of the three-mile limit.

5. At the same time, Mr. Churchill asks that your special attention may be directed to the attitude of the Canadian Government as to the limits of territorial waters in connexion with the Spitzbergen Treaty. On 12th February, 1920, when it had been proposed that His Majesty's Government should make a formal declaration against the recognition of territorial waters beyond the three-mile limit, the Governor-General of Canada telegraphed that, on the presumption that this declaration would not be interpreted so as to apply to waters outside the areas affected by the Spitzbergen Treaty, the Government of Canada did not object to it. It was, however, finally decided not to make any reservation in respect of the extent of territorial waters in the official communication to the French Government, signifying the assent of His Majesty's Government to the terms of the Spitzbergen Treaty. The precise significance of the attitude adopted by the Canadian Government will doubtless be ascertained as the result of the communication contemplated in paragraph 4 of this despatch, but it is not at present clear what Canadian interests were regarded as being involved, other than those arising out of the special position with regard to bays in North America. As regards, however, the question of the application of the principle of the three-mile limit to bays, it is evident that this does not arise in connexion with the recent Norwegian legislation, and it is desirable that the question should not be raised.

6. It appears from the information so far available, that the municipal legislation of the British Empire is, with the exception of certain sections of the New Zealand Customs Act, in harmony with the general principle of the three-mile limit. While, therefore, it is advisable that you should bear in mind the fact that British Empire legislation on the subject is still under examination, and that definite information as to the views of the Canadian Government is not at present available, considerable importance is attached, on naval and other grounds, to the maintenance of the general principle.

7. The general review given above of the position as regards the United Kingdom and Overseas legislation is for your own information only; but I shall be glad if you will make a formal statement to the Norwegian Government that His Majesty's Government can only recognize the validity of the recent Norwegian legislation in so far as it does not infringe the undoubted rights of His Majesty's Government in international law. It will then be advisable for you to reserve a further communication as to the Customs Consolidation Act until the opinion of the Law Officers is available.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 6th May, 1922.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 434, Confidential of the 26th October, 1921,* [Your Excellency's,] [Your Royal Highness's,] [your] Ministers will observe from the despatch from His Majesty's Minister at Christiania of the 2nd September, 1921, that the Norwegian Government have endeavoured to justify the extension of the limits of Norwegian territorial waters for Customs purposes by reference to the United Kingdom Customs Acts.

2. In actual practice the Customs and Excise authorities do not attempt to seize or search any foreign vessel outside the three-mile limit, or to prosecute for offences committed on a foreign ship or by a foreigner outside it. So far as can be traced, the last case in which the Customs authorities interfered with a foreign vessel outside the three-mile limit was that of the French vessel, the "Petit Jules," in the year 1850. This case is presumed to have arisen under one of the earlier sections of the Act, 8 & 9 Vict. cap. 87, the Statute then in force for the prevention of smuggling. These sections differed greatly from Section 179 of the Customs Consolidation Act of 1876, which is derived from them.

3. After consultation with the Law Officers of the Crown, His Majesty's Minister at Christiania has been asked to inform the Norwegian Government that the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, and the other Customs Acts referred to by Dr. Raestad in conversation with Sir M. Findlay on the 1st September, 1921, have been carefully examined and have been found to involve no claim to jurisdiction over foreign vessels outside the three-mile limit.

4. So far as is known, the only sections which have been quoted, or are likely to be quoted, as involving a claim to jurisdiction over foreign vessels at a distance exceeding three miles from the coast of the United Kingdom are Sections 53, 135, 141, 142, 147, 169, 179, 180, 181, 189, 190, 229, and 282 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. cap. 36) and Section 7 of the Revenue Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. cap. 55). The views of the Board of Customs and Excise as to these may be summarized as follows:—

Section 53.—This Section, which occurs in a part of the Act headed "As to report of Cargo," provides that the master of every ship (whether British or foreign) arriving from parts beyond the seas shall at the time of making report answer the questions of the Customs officers. If he refuses or "if after the arrival within four leagues of the coast of the United Kingdom bulk shall be broken, or any alteration made in the stowage of the cargo of such ships so as to facilitate the unloading of any part of such cargo before report of such ship or cargo, or if any part be staved, destroyed or thrown overboard, or any package be opened" the master incurs a penalty. It would appear that this Section is limited in its application to ships which actually arrive at a port in the United Kingdom, and that, if a vessel breaks bulk outside territorial waters although within four leagues of the coast and proceeds on her voyage to a port in some other country, no penalty under this Section is incurred. A ship need not come into a British port unless it is desired to bring her there, but if she does come, the effect of the Section is that her master must comply with the conditions on which she is allowed to come, that he must make report in the ordinary course and that he must not arrive having broken bulk within four leagues of the coast.

Sections 135, 141, 142, 147, and 282, and Section 7 of the Act, 46 and 47 Vict. cap. 5.—The first and last of these deal with vessels going from one port to another in the United Kingdom while engaged in a coasting trade. The others deal generally with coasting ships. It is thought that these Sections do not conflict with international law, even though they give a right of interference with a foreign ship outside territorial waters. It has always been conceded that a country is entitled to retain in its own hands exclusively its own coasting trade, and, a fortiori, that it is entitled to impose restrictions upon this trade and to prescribe the conditions upon which foreigners may engage in it.

* No. 248 in Dominions No. 81.

Section 169.—This reproduces the provisions of the successive Customs Acts of 1825, 1833, 1845 and 1853. The provisions of the three earlier Acts were limited specifically to vessels belonging in whole or in part to British subjects, or on board which half the persons were British subjects. The reference to the number of persons on board was presumably intended to apply to those cases where the nationality of the ship was doubtful. The present Section does not mention the nationality of the ship or of the persons on board, but it seems obvious from its wording that it was only intended to apply to British craft.

Section 179.—This may be divided into three parts:—

- (a) That dealing with vessels having false bulkheads, etc.
- (b) That dealing with vessels from which part of the lading has been thrown overboard or on which goods have been destroyed to avoid seizure.
- (c) That dealing with persons found on such vessels or on board one of His Majesty's ships, or a foreign packet carrying mails to the United Kingdom, having on board spirits or tobacco in prohibited packages.

(a) It is held that this part of Section 179 of the Act of 1876 does not apply to any foreign vessel outside the three-mile limit. The part in question deals with vessels which (a) belong wholly or in part to British subjects, (b) have half the persons on board British subjects, or (c) are not British. If the vessel is British owned, no question arises. If it is definitely not a British vessel, the three-mile limit is applied strictly by the Section. There remains only the doubtful case where the nationality of the vessel is not known and in such cases, if half the persons on board are British subjects, she is to be treated as a British vessel.

(b) The construction of this part of the Section is difficult; it seems likely that in the consolidation of the law some reference to British ships or ships of doubtful nationality, was omitted inadvertently.

(c) This imposes a penalty upon—

(1) British subjects found to have been on board a ship liable to forfeiture under the Section within three leagues of the coast.

(2) Foreigners who have been on such a ship within one league of the coast.

(3) Any person who has been on board any vessel in His Majesty's Service, or on board a foreign post-office packet employed in carrying mails between any foreign country and the United Kingdom, having on board spirits or tobacco in illegal packets.

As regards (1) and (2), no question arises. As regards (3), so far as persons on board His Majesty's ships are concerned, no difficulty can arise from the detention of such persons on board the ship until they arrive at a British port, and are handed over to the Customs authorities for prosecution. As regards a person on a foreign packet, the Section assumes that the vessel will come to this country, and the prosecution can only take place here. The Section does not seem to contemplate detention except in this country.

Sections 180 and 181.—There is no statement in the former that it applies to any foreign vessel outside territorial waters. The opening words of the latter may include a foreign vessel liable to examination outside territorial waters, on the ground that she is engaged in the coasting trade, but unless a foreign vessel is engaged in coasting trade, which is clearly under the jurisdiction of this country, there is nothing in either Section to imply that it affects the vessel while outside territorial waters.

Section 189.—This mentions the distance of five miles from the sea coast, but it seems clear that the distance is to be measured inland.

Section 190.—Here again it seems clear that the distance is to be measured inland.

Section 229.—This merely regulates the procedure and defines jurisdiction. It does not mention foreign vessels or make any offence punishable in the United Kingdom which would not have been punishable if this Section had been omitted.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Minutes (Confidential) Nos. 2/1727 and 2/1733 of the 2nd and 8th June, 1922, respectively, and enclosures, regarding the extension of the limits of Norwegian territorial waters for Customs purposes.

While the interest of the Union Government in the Norwegian Government's attitude is purely academic, Ministers desire to state that, in the event of this precedent being followed at some future date by any of the Union's neighbours, they would advise strenuous opposition to any proposal by those countries for the extension of the limits of territorial waters beyond the internationally recognized limit of one marine league.

GOVERNMENT RESOLUTION OF 7TH JULY, 1922.

SANCTION is given to the following regulations for the use of wireless stations on board ships of foreign, non-belligerent powers during their stay in Norwegian waters in times of peace:—

1. Within Norwegian territorial limits wireless telegraph or telephone stations on board foreign vessels must not be used except in accordance with special permission, unless such use concerns:—

- (1) Correspondence regarding ships in distress, or for the prevention of accident.
- (2) Correspondence with the nearest Norwegian coast station, and also
- (3) Correspondence with other ship stations, when each of the ships is at least 10 nautical miles from the nearest Norwegian coast station.

In the cases mentioned under (2) and (3), however, transmission must at once cease when this is demanded by the Telegraph Board, the Naval Board, or by any wireless station which falls within the jurisdiction of these authorities.

2. In Norwegian ports where public wireless stations are established and within the areas which at any time may be determined by a Norwegian authority, and concerning which information is obtainable at the nearest public coast station; the station must not, however, be used for correspondence other than that mentioned under 1. (1), unless special permission is obtained.

3. Application for permission to make use of the station within Norwegian territorial limits for correspondence other than that mentioned above should be sent to the Telegraph Board, which will make its decision after conference with the Naval Board.

4. The above rules, however, with the exceptions mentioned below, are not applicable to stations on board the warships of foreign powers.

Should the latter whilst calling at a Norwegian port where a public wireless station is established (see the list issued by the Telegraph Board) desire to make use of the wireless apparatus on board, they must first make application to the director of the public wireless station at that place who will notify the times at which it is permissible to make use of the apparatus concerned.

In the said application which may be made by wireless, the wave length which it is desired to employ shall also be stated. Otherwise in Norwegian ports and Norwegian territorial waters such vessels may freely make use of their wireless stations. Transmission, however, shall at once cease when this is demanded by the Telegraph Board, the Naval Board, or by any wireless station which falls within the jurisdiction of these authorities.

5. When the station is used during the ship's stay in Norwegian waters, such use shall take place under observance of the provisions of the International Telegraph Convention, with the regulations appertaining to the same.

6. The above provisions only apply when Norway is not at war, and only in respect of the ships of non-belligerent powers.

7. The above rules come into force from 1st September, 1922. From the same date are cancelled the previous regulations sanctioned by Royal Resolution of 24th October, 1908.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 24th April, 1922.
I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before Your Ministers, copies of two telegrams* to Moscow regarding the arrest by the Soviet Government of the British trawlers "St. Hubert" and "Magenta" off the Murmansk Coast. Further evidence has brought out the fact that the "St. Hubert" was outside even a twelve-mile limit at the time of her arrest.

2. It will be remembered that when, towards the end of 1919, the Treaty regarding the status of Spitzbergen was under consideration, the addition to the Treaty was contemplated of a formal declaration to the effect that His Majesty's Government would not recognize any limit of territorial waters other than the three-mile limit. The Canadian Government was consulted in the matter, and in the Duke of Devonshire's telegram of the 13th February, 1920,† it was stated that Ministers had no objection to the declaration, on the presumption that it would not be interpreted as applying to waters outside the areas affected by the Treaty.

3. In view of the urgency of the present case, it was not thought feasible to consult Your Ministers before the despatch of the enclosed telegrams, which were, however, couched in terms which avoided any general statement of the attitude of His Majesty's Government on the question of the limits of territorial waters.

4. In this connexion I would invite reference to the correspondence ending with my Confidential despatch Dominions No. 82, of the 13th March,‡, regarding the recent Norwegian legislation extending the limits of Norwegian territorial waters in order to prevent the smuggling of wines and spirits.

5. It is presumed that, in making the reservation mentioned in paragraph 2 above, the Canadian Government had particularly in mind the special circumstances of British North America in regard to bays, but His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn, for guidance in such further eventualities as may arise, whether your Ministers regard any other interests as being involved, and to receive their views on the question generally.

SIR,

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 18th October, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Sir L. H. Davies's Confidential despatch of the 27th June,* relative to the policy of His Majesty's Government in refusing to recognize any extension of the three-mile limit of territorial waters.

2. This question arises not only in connexion with the action of the Soviet Government in seizing the British trawlers "St. Hubert" and "Magneta" off the Murmansk coast, and with the Norwegian law extending the limit of Norwegian territorial waters to ten miles for customs purposes, but also in connexion with recent cases in which the United States Prohibition Authorities have seized British ships outside the three-mile limit. Cases in which British ships registered in Canada were so seized formed the subject of the despatch, No. 242 of the 5th September,† addressed to you from His Majesty's Embassy at Washington, and of my despatch, No. 467, of the 23rd September.‡

3. I now enclose a copy of a telegram dated the 23rd September, from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, containing the substance of certain sections of the United States Tariff Act, which extend the jurisdiction of the United States Customs Authorities for certain purposes to a limit of four leagues from the Coast, together with an extract from a further telegram, dated the 26th September, giving the purport of a statement issued by the United States Government as to the searching of ships in future by the United States Prohibition Authorities outside the three-mile limit.

TELEGRAM FROM SIR A. GEDDES (WASHINGTON).

(Received 9.0 a.m., 24th September, 1922.)

23RD SEPTEMBER. (No. 374). My telegram, No. 361. Section 581, Tariff Act, in its final form empowers Customs Officers to board any vessel within four leagues of United States coast, to exercise right of search, and "to use all necessary force to compel compliance."

If it appears that any breach of United States laws has been committed, officer is empowered to seize vessel and to arrest any person engaged in such violation. Similarly, officers of Department of Commerce are empowered to board any vessel within four leagues of United States coast in enforcement of navigation law, and to arrest any person engaged in their violation.

Section 586 provides that master of any vessel from a foreign port who allows any merchandise to be unladen within four leagues of United States coast before receiving a permit to unlade shall be made liable to a fine of not less than 1,000 dollars and ship and merchandise subject to forfeiture (except in case of stress of weather, etc.).

26TH SEPTEMBER. No. 387. Statement was issued to-day at White House after a Cabinet meeting to the effect that activities of Prohibition Officers beyond three-mile limit have threatened an embarrassing situation, which may involve United States in diplomatic discussions with foreign nations. Prohibition officers will in future be enjoined to use more judgment, but this caution will not apply to searching of ships beyond three-mile limit which are known to be in contact with the shore, such as running of small craft of ship to some point on the land. This point, which is stated to be now before Supreme Court, has, according to communiqué, been held by several Courts of United States to be violation of prohibition laws.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 18th October, 1922.

WITH reference to previous despatches relative to the Norwegian law extending the limit of Norwegian territorial waters to ten miles for Customs purposes I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a telegram dated 23rd of September,* from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, containing the substance of certain sections of the new United States Tariff Act, which extend the jurisdiction of the United States Customs authorities for certain purposes to a limit of four leagues from the coast of the United States, together with an extract from a further telegram dated the 26th September† giving the purport of a statement issued by the United States Government as to the searching of ships in future by the United States Prohibition Authorities outside the three-mile limit.

2. In this connexion it should be mentioned that there had been several cases in which British registered vessels, among others, were seized outside the three-mile limit by the United States Prohibition Authorities on the ground of alleged violations of the United States Customs and Prohibition Laws. I enclose a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador to the Governor-General of Canada, dated the 5th September, which explains the attitude adopted by His Majesty's Government in regard to such cases.

3. I also enclose copies of two telegrams‡ sent to Moscow in March of this year regarding the arrest by the Soviet Government of the British trawlers "St. Hubert" and "Magneta" off the Murmansk coast. Enclosure 3 in No. 301.

(No. 242.)

MY LORD,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 5th September, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Canadian Gasboat "Half Moon," Captain R. E. B. Hunt, which cleared from Vancouver on 14th July last, ostensibly bound for Bonilla Point, was seized on 18th July at Port Angeles, Washington, by the United States Prohibition Authorities, after having been towed into that port in distress. The seizure was made on the grounds that the cargo, the owners and consignees of which were the Calgary Export Company of Vancouver, consisted of contraband goods in the shape of liquor destined for the United States. While it does not seem possible for the prosecution to advance any proof of the violation of the prohibition laws, it is almost beyond doubt, in view of the position of the vessel at the time of seizure, that she was engaged in liquor smuggling.

* Enclosure 1 in No. 300. † Enclosure 2 in No. 300. ‡ Enclosure 1 and 2 in No. 298.

Numerous cases of this nature involving British registered craft have recently occurred on the east coast of the United States. On the instructions of the Foreign Office I have confined my intervention to entering a general reservation of the right of His Majesty's Government to protest the seizure of British registered craft outside the three-mile limit. Therefore, as each individual case arose, I have done no more than to endeavour to secure equitable treatment, and the briefest possible period of imprisonment, for the British members of the crew of the vessel concerned.

In the present instance, although the circumstances are somewhat dissimilar, I venture to think that I should continue this procedure, unless the owners of the cargo are in a position to show conclusively that the voyage was a bona fide commercial undertaking.

18TH APRIL. Report has reached here that His Majesty's Government propose to hand over to Greece the Gallipoli Peninsula. In my Prime Minister's opinion to give effect to any such proposal would be very unpopular in New Zealand, and he believes also in Australia, and moreover it would create a very serious offence to the Mohammedan population throughout the British Empire. Prime Minister's view is that we have nothing to thank the Greeks for, and that, if the idea is contemplated by His Majesty's Government the very least that should be done would be to keep that part of the Gallipoli Peninsula in which our troops are buried, under the control of a British Commission. Nothing less would satisfy the people of New Zealand in whom British sentiment is very keenly alive, and who would view any departure from the arrangement intended in this connexion under the Turkish Treaty as a breach of faith. The Prime Minister would be grateful if His Majesty's Government's intentions in this matter could be communicated to me for the information of the New Zealand Government at the earliest possible moment.—JELlicoe.

SECRET. Following for your Prime Minister from the Prime Minister:—

Begins: Decision taken by Cabinet to-day to resist aggression upon Europe by the Turks and to make exertions to prevent Mustapha Kemal driving the Allies out of Constantinople and in particular, and above all, to secure firmly the Gallipoli Peninsula, in order to maintain the freedom of the Straits. We have received a notification from the French Government that they are in agreement with us in informing Mustapha Kemal that he must not violate the neutral zone which protects Constantinople and the Straits, and that their High Commissioner at Constantinople has been instructed accordingly. The Italians also are acting in general concert with us. We hope to secure the military participation of Greece, Roumania, and Serbia in the defence of the deep-water line between Europe and Asia, and we are addressing them accordingly. All the aforesaid Powers are being notified of our intention to make exertions, and that British division is to be placed under orders to reinforce the Allied Commander-in-Chief, Sir Charles Harington. The co-operation of the British Navy will also be forthcoming to the fullest extent necessary. The object of these arrangements is to cover the period which must elapse before it is possible to secure a stable peace with Turkey. Proposals are being made to hold a conference for this purpose, probably at Venice, but possibly at Paris, and the essential point is that we should have sufficient strength to maintain our position round the Straits and in Constantinople until this peace has been achieved. It seems improbable that if a firm front is shown by a large number of Powers acting together, the forces of Mustapha Kemal will attack. His armies, which have so far not had any serious resistance to encounter from the disheartened Greeks, are estimated at between sixty and seventy thousand men. But timely precautions are imperative. Very grave consequences in India and among other Mohammedan populations for which we are responsible might result from a defeat or a humiliating exodus of the Allies from Constantinople.

* No. 302. † 14892: not printed; it enclosed a copy of a Press statement showing the results of the discussions between the Allied Foreign Ministers of March, 1922, on the Near East situation.

I should be glad to know whether the Government of the [Dominion of Canada] [Commonwealth of Australia] [New Zealand] [Union of South Africa] wish to associate themselves with our action and whether they desire to be represented by a contingent. Not only does the freedom of the Straits for which such immense sacrifices were made in the War involve vital Imperial and world-wide interests, but we cannot forget that there are 20,000 British and Anzac graves in the Gallipoli Peninsula, and that it would be an abiding source of grief to the Empire if these were to fall into the ruthless hands of the Kemalists.

The announcement of an offer from all or any of the Dominions to send contingents even of moderate size would undoubtedly exercise in itself a most favourable influence on the situation, and might conceivably be a potent factor in preventing actual hostilities.

This telegram has also been sent to the Governors-General of [Canada.] [Australia.] [New Zealand.] [South Africa.] Ends.

VERY urgent and Secret. Following for General Smuts; private and personal:—

Begins: With reference to my Secret telegram of 15th September,* we do not contemplate prolonged or serious fighting near Constantinople; it is much more probable that nothing will occur, as, pending the Conference, the firm attitude of the Allies will restrain the Kemalists. The position as regards the Gallipoli Peninsula, of Australia and New Zealand, is a special one on account of their heavy losses there during the War. We certainly do not expect South Africa to make similar exertions, but we have made the invitation common to all the Dominions from the point of view of the importance of Imperial solidarity. Even if South African representation were almost nominal, any response that you could make in this sense will be very helpful. Ends.

SECRET and very urgent. Following is private and personal for your Acting Prime Minister:—

Begins: With reference to my Secret telegram of to-day's date,* we felt that in the general inquiry we were making from the Dominions, it was our duty to include Newfoundland; more especially having regard to the fact that a Newfoundland battalion fought with distinction on the Gallipoli Peninsula. We do not wish in making these inquiries of your Government to impose upon you the assumption of any serious burden. We think it is highly probable that the necessity for serious and above all prolonged fighting will be avoided by the firm attitude of the Allies, but at the same time any expression of association with the policy, and readiness to assist would be taken as illustrating the solidarity of the Empire. Ends.

Begins: Before communication could be sent to myself or other members of the Government of Canada of the contents of your cable* sent through Governor-General despatches from England appeared in our Press announcing the British Government's invitation to Canada to participate in resisting Turkish forces by despatch of troops. This has caused a most embarrassing situation, and Press representatives are inquiring of me if any, and if so what, communication has been received from the British Government. Seeing that your message takes the form of a secret telegram, your sanction seems to be necessary before disclosure of its contents. FOLLOWING from me for your Prime Minister. Secret and Personal:—
Begins: The message from the Prime Minister, which I transmitted to you on the 15th September,* is not suitable for textual publication. There would be no objection to the substance being given to the public, as has been done in Australia, but I send you on behalf of the Prime Minister a further telegram† separately, in case you want a message, the actual text of which can be laid before your Parliament.

It was in view of the special associations which they have with Gallipoli that we have communicated with Australia and New Zealand, and we felt bound to make the message common to all the Dominions. There is no probability of a serious war, but it is essential to prevent the Kemalists from crossing the Straits and entering Constantinople, except in accordance with the decision of a Peace Conference which will, among other things, effectively secure the freedom of the Straits, probably under some international arrangement. The main factor on which we rely is, of course, the British Navy, and we think it unlikely that hostilities will occur if the Allies continue to act together in forbidding the Kemalists to invade the neutral zone now guarded by Allied troops. However, it is extremely important that Great Britain should adopt a firm attitude, and anything that your Government can contribute towards the sense of Empire solidarity would be of the utmost value. At this juncture a statement to the effect that the Dominion of Canada associates itself with the general position of the Allied Powers in insisting upon the freedom of the Straits and would be represented by a contingent if the need arose, would be quite sufficient. That the actual need for despatching the contingent will arise seems most improbable, and in any case it is contemplated that it would be only of a very moderate size. Australia and New Zealand have already replied in a favourable sense.

It is a matter of great regret to me that it was not possible to give you longer notice, but the crisis developed too suddenly. I am sure that you will so handle the matter as to give the utmost moral support at this stage.
Message Ends.

FOLLOWING for your Prime Minister. Following for publication:—

Begins: In view of the possibility that the Turks under Mustapha Kemal may attempt aggression upon Europe His Majesty's Government, in concert with the Governments of France and Italy, have decided to resist any such attempt, to safeguard for the time being the position of the Allies at Constantinople and above all to maintain the freedom of the Straits by securing their firm hold on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

* No. 304.

† No. 310.

The Allied High Commissioners at Constantinople have accordingly been instructed to inform Mustapha Kemal that he must not violate the neutral zone which protects the Straits and Constantinople. British reinforcements have been placed under orders to join the Allied Commander-in-Chief at Constantinople, Sir Charles Harington, and the British Navy will co-operate to the fullest extent. These arrangements are intended to secure the situation pending the meeting of a Conference, the aims of which will be to secure a stable peace with Turkey, and timely precautions are imperative.

His Majesty's Government trust that in view of the vital Imperial and world-wide interests involved in the freedom of the Straits, for which such immense sacrifices were made by the Empire during the War, the Dominion of Canada will associate themselves with the proposed action, and the evidence of united purpose which would be afforded by the despatch of a contingent should circumstances render it necessary would exercise a most favourable influence upon the situation. Ends.

I SEND you at the request of the Prime Minister for your information, though not for publication or textual quotation, the following review of the position to date:—

Begins: The following is the situation. The evacuation of Asia Minor by the Greeks is now complete, and what remains to be settled is the future of the Straits and the disposition of European Turkey and Constantinople. The British Government, while they are quite prepared to discuss the settlement with every regard for Turkish as well as other interests, consider the following conditions essential to any lasting arrangement. First. The neutrality of Gallipoli, and the freedom of the Straits must be guaranteed for all time. Second. Any modification of the existing Treaties must be brought about not by force of arms, but by conference. Third. Mustapha Kemal must in the meantime respect the terms of the Armistice concluded with the Allies by Turkey in 1918. Any breach of the terms of the Armistice which at the moment governs our legal position, and any invasion of the neutral zone will be resisted if necessary by force. No reply has yet been received to an inquiry addressed to Kemal as to whether he proposes to respect the Armistice pending a Conference or not.

In the meantime we regard it as most important clearly to show the reality of our determination that the neutral zone shall be respected and that the solution shall be reached by Conference. From this standpoint two things are specially important. First. It is necessary immediately to reinforce our Naval, Military and Air Forces in the Gallipoli area in order to show that we can stop any sudden breach of the Armistice. We are doing this with good effect. Second. We must make it absolutely clear that the position of the Empire if challenged will be maintained firmly against any Turkish forces which can be mobilised against us. From this point of view the moral support of the Dominions and the undertaking to send contingents should the necessity arise is of the utmost value, not only in impressing the Turks, but in keeping our Allies sound. Although there is a general tendency to loss of morale among the Christian Powers in regard to the Eastern question, a quiet demonstration of firmness on our part supported by the Dominion Governments should be decisive. We are confident that any immediate attack can be resisted by the forces which we now have on the spot, with the assistance of the Navy and the Air Force, and the Admiralty has declared its ability to prevent the passage of troops from the Asiatic to the European shore, whether in the Bosphorus or the Marmora or the Dardanelles.

From the above it will be seen that there is in our opinion no immediate need for the organization of Dominion contingents, except as a means of showing the solidarity of the Empire in safeguarding the results of the War in the Eastern theatre. At present the French attitude is unsatisfactory, but in spite of their fear of standing up to the Turks they are unlikely to leave us in sole control of the Gallipoli Peninsula because it is a standing terror with them that Gallipoli may become another Gibraltar in the East of the Mediterranean. Lord Curzon, accompanied by Admiral Beatty, has just left for Paris to discuss the position with the French Government, and we are not by any means unhopful of a satisfactory agreement. In this respect the attitude of the Balkan nations, who were all signatories to the Treaty of Sevres, is important, since France has to consider her obligations to them as well as her desire to stand well with the Turks. The Balkan Allies are naturally opposed to the return of the Turk to Europe, since this would make inevitable another Balkan war in the near future. Assistance has been promised by Roumania if necessary at once, and the Serb-Croat-Slovene Government, although it has as yet come to no decision, is not likely to adopt a very different attitude. We hope, therefore, to be able to keep the Allies with us in resisting an appeal to force and in demanding a solution by Conference. By no means are we averse to the League of Nations intervening in the settlement when the time comes, but the first necessity is to ensure that the Turks respect the neutral zone, just as we insisted on the Greeks respecting it when they threatened Constantinople last month, and that the Peace Conference should meet in confidence that pending a settlement the Armistice will not be broken.

In taking up this attitude we are putting forward no new claims or fresh obstacles in the way of peace. We are, on the contrary, standing by our engagements, and we are absolutely convinced that much trouble will be saved in the future with the whole Mohammedan world by a quiet but decisive demonstration that the British Empire is not to be threatened or bluffed. To be weak, on the contrary, may lead to widespread disorder amongst Mohammedan populations everywhere. There is no question of our ability to deal with Mustapha Kemal should this become inevitable, as he commands only a force of 60,000 rifles, but our desire is to prevent hostilities by an immediate show of firmness, and the effect of the promise of Dominion contingents has already been most valuable from this standpoint. Ends.

TELEGRAM.

[Answered by Nos. 321, 323 and 330.]

(Paraphrase.)

20TH SEPTEMBER. Following from my Prime Minister for Prime Minister :—
Begins: Your telegram* was not received till late in the afternoon on Sunday and after arrival in Australia of Press messages giving substantially same information given to Press by yourself. This in a matter of such grave importance is most unfortunate as it precludes that full and judicial consideration of the position by Commonwealth which is its clear right as a national Government. It is not right that a Dominion should be stampeded into action by premature statements in the Press disclosing a position which, even admitting its gravity, is not set out in detail, and upon which no information had been previously received by the Commonwealth Government suggesting the probability of the Empire being involved in hostilities. Foreign Office despatches many weeks old relating to Greco-Turkish position have no doubt been received from time to time; but no information has come to hand suggesting that the Empire was likely to be involved in hostilities and no telegrams have been communicated to us bearing upon recent developments in the Near East.

Thus your telegram informing us that the British Cabinet had decided to take prompt action against the Kemalists came as a bolt from the blue. And we have not been told even now by what action of the Kemalists this decision has been necessitated. And as it would appear that the Press was notified before your telegram reached me of the fact that you contemplated hostilities, and that the Dominions were asked to associate themselves with Britain and send contingents, the Commonwealth Government found itself in most embarrassing position of being asked to decide not between peace and war, for Britain had already determined that issue without consultation with the Commonwealth, but whether after Britain had decided to go to war and had notified the Press that she had asked the Dominions whether they wished to join her, it was possible for us in all the circumstances to say that we could not do so. The point the Commonwealth Government desires to emphasize most strongly is this, that consultation with the Dominions ought to take place before any action is taken or irrevocable decision is made by Britain, as then and then only can our voices be heard and our counsels heeded. Either the Empire is one and indivisible or it is nothing. If it is only another name for Britain, and the Dominions are to be told that things are done after they have been done, and that Britain has decided upon war, and are then to be asked whether they wish to be associated with her and to stand by her side, when they have in fact no other alternative, then, it is perfectly clear, the relations between the Dominions and Britain being what they are, that all talk about the Dominions having a real share in deciding foreign and Imperial policy is empty air.

I feel that I ought to speak quite frankly and say that the unity of the Empire is gravely imperilled by such action.

The Australian people are sick of war. In their view war, except in defence of vital national interests, is not only a blunder but a crime. While they fully recognize the importance of the freedom of the Straits and would be grieved and angry if the sanctity of Anzac graves in Gallipoli were violated, they have no sympathy whatever with King Constantine's ambitious projects. They do not understand why the Dominions were not consulted before Britain took action, and before the situation had developed, and they do not understand why the Allies did not restrain the Greeks long ago from such action as it now appears has led up to the present deplorable situation. That situation is the natural and indeed inevitable result of the policy of action or inaction which the Allies have pursued in regard to Greece and Turkey. Australians have seen war raging for many months, great armies arrayed against one another almost within gunshot of Geneva, and they ask themselves what has the League of Nations that was to bring war to an end been doing to bring about peace. Towards the upkeep of the League Australia has paid and is paying very large sums of money. For a very long time war has been raging at its very doors. It now threatens to spread over the whole world. What is the League doing? Apparently it is fiddling with unimportant matters while the world is once more in danger of a general conflagration. Australia must ask that the League of Nations should actively interfere in this struggle; it was established to maintain peace, let it do so; if it cannot or will not, let it acknowledge itself helpless and make way for some more effective means. In order to make clear to the world the position of Australia in this grave matter, her representatives at Assembly now sitting at Geneva have been requested to urge the League to take immediate action.

I hope that I have made it clear that believing in the unity of the Empire as we do, and notwithstanding it has not been consulted until the Empire was by the declaration of the British Government committed to action, Australia will associate itself with Britain in retaining the Gallipoli Peninsula, and in maintaining the freedom of the Straits. But we think that we are clearly entitled to be told precisely what is the policy of Britain and her Allies in the Near East, and to have set out in most definite terms just how far Britain desires and intends to go. And we want to know (corrupt group) what is the policy of France and Italy and the other Powers who are allied with Britain.

First as to the policy of Britain, or rather of the British Empire, the Commonwealth Government fully recognize the most important bearing of the situation in the Near East upon Mesopotamia, Arabia, Egypt, India, and upon the Empire as a whole. This being so, what we desire to know is what is the policy of Britain towards Turkey in Europe and in Asia, and what it proposes to do towards effecting a modus vivendi. Mention is made of a Conference; well, what is to be done there? What are you prepared to concede? Anything? Nothing? The Empire is a world in itself composed of many countries peopled with different races holding widely different religious and other opinions. Is Britain's policy satisfactory to the Moslems in Turkey and throughout the British Empire? If not, is any modification compatible with vital Imperial interest possible and contemplated? We are prepared to back Britain in frustrating the ambitious projects of Kemal, with which we have, of course, no sympathy whatever. On the other hand, Australia is not prepared to risk one soldier's life in furthering the schemes of Constantine. Aggression leads to counter-aggression: violence to further violence; and unless the cause for which we fight is just, and the military objective is laid down in the most precise and definite way we are not prepared to participate actively in a war. We are not, for example, to be dragged behind the chariot of French intrigues and ambitions in the Near East. Australia will not be a party to treating Turkey unjustly because it is weak. Are we asked, for example, to associate ourselves in an enterprise whose object is to maintain the status quo under the Sèvres Treaty? What we want to know is, are we to defend the neutral zone, ensure the inviolability of the Gallipoli Peninsula and the freedom of the Straits, but go no further no matter how much France, Greece, or the Balkan States may urge us to take advantage of the superior naval and military strength of the Allied forces? Is it the settled and deliberate conviction of the British Government that the provisions of the Treaty of Sèvres are fair to Turkey and to the Moslem world, and that no further concessions can be or ought to be made? If not, then to what extent and in what direction ought Treaty to be modified in order to meet the legitimate demands of Turkey? The Commonwealth Government, while expressing no opinion on the provisions of the Treaty of Sèvres relating to Turkey, strongly urges that if it is possible to make any modifications likely to render it more acceptable to Turkey, they ought to be offered now before hostilities commence. Every effort ought to be made to avoid war. In the unsettled state of the world, war is like going with a lighted torch into a powder magazine. The Empire must set an example to the world. It must not go to war to gain more territory for itself or its Allies or do anything incompatible with its solemn declarations during the Great War and since the Armistice. It ought not to go to war unless in defence of its clear rights, and unless these are vital to Empire. And the League of Nations must be appealed to and be compelled to shoulder its responsibilities and either prove its worth or confess its futility. Australia wants also a plain and detailed statement on the policy of France in regard to Thrace, Smyrna, and the Near East generally. To what extent is the Treaty of Sèvres or its attitude or its policy towards Kemal, Gallipoli, and the Straits affected or impaired by the Franklin-Bouillon Treaty? Was the Angora Government financed or supported by France against Constantine? Did Britain or any other of her allies support Constantine in his campaign in Thrace and Angora? What is the general policy of France or Italy? What troops if any have they agreed or are they likely to supply?

The Commonwealth Government hopes this frank expression of its views will not be misunderstood by the British Government. Frankness on a matter of such grave importance is imperatively demanded. The Empire ought not to be pushed into a war. The Dominions ought not to be asked whether they will associate themselves with Britain after Britain has in effect committed them. And, above all, they should not be asked to join in an unnecessary or unjust war. Once the war is begun, no one can say where it will end. We are a peace-loving democracy. We have been through a dreadful ordeal in which we hope that you and the world will agree we played our part worthily. In a good cause we are prepared to venture our all; in a bad one, not a single man. In our own defence and in that of the Empire we are quite ready to fight, but we must know where we are going.

Ends.

FOLLOWING from me for your Prime Minister: Private and Personal:—
 Your long telegram of the 20th|| has been sent by me to the Prime Minister, who is out of town for a few hours, by a special messenger, and I will transmit to you his reply* as soon as possible. Let me say meanwhile that I feel acutely the difficulty in which the rapidity with which this situation has developed has placed you. It is very important for us to hold Chanak, without which the navigation of the Straits would be gravely compromised. Our force at Chanak is a very small one, though we are doing our utmost to reinforce it as quickly as possible. The immediate danger and urgency is that Kemal should invade the neutral zone, march on Chanak, and with greatly superior forces attack our troops. If he does not do this, but remains outside the neutral zone or at any rate out of contact with our men, the peril of immediate rupture will be averted. When the Prime Minister sent his telegram† to you the Cabinet had before them statements attributed to Kemal that he would be at Chanak in eight days, four of which have already passed. To-day it is reported that Turkish cavalry are already at Bigha, fifty miles away. From Smyrna the Navy report that considerable forces of Turkish cavalry and infantry are moving north, i.e., towards Chanak. From secret sources which must not be referred to we also know that the Turkish Foreign Minister, who is at present in Paris, had telegraphed to the Angora Government strongly urging a march on Chanak immediately where "the English would not dare to resist."

In the circumstances then known to us and not since removed, it seemed to us that the best chance of preventing fatal consequences lay in a firm and immediate indication that Great Britain could not submit to the infraction of the neutral zone or the compromising of the freedom of the Straits. You will remember how often it is said that if Great Britain had taken up a plain and clear position at the beginning of the fateful week the Great War itself might have been averted. The Prime Minister therefore, as result of Cabinet decision, sent you the telegram you have received. We also felt the next day that it was indispensable that the country as a whole should be enlightened on the gravity of the situation of which, in spite of their proximity to the scene, they were as little conscious as your own public in Australia. Once the telegrams had been despatched to the Dominions the fact was bound to become public within a few hours through the immediate response which New Zealand made. That Press messages should have overtaken the official telegram, which had to be ciphered and deciphered, is certainly a matter for the very greatest regret.

I hope you will consider any defect in procedure in the light of the emergency and of our anxiety to avert war.

Last night, at the request of the Prime Minister, I sent you a review‡ of the situation, to which this "Private and Personal" of mine is supplementary. As the situation develops I will make it my business to keep you informed privately.

SECRET. With reference to your telegram 20th September.* Following for your Prime Minister from Prime Minister:—

Begins: I hope that the most important questions in your long personal telegram* just received will have been answered by the appreciation of the position and other information telegraphed† to you yesterday. As you know, no one feels more strongly than I do the great importance of keeping you and all my fellow Prime Ministers in the Dominions informed fully of the problems which face us and of the considerations which we think should guide our policy. There was really no failure on our part in this respect. Full information regarding every stage of the Turkish question has steadily gone out to you. This last phase, however, was sprung upon us suddenly by the totally unexpected collapse of the Greek armies and the sudden threat of the Kemalist forces to advance upon Constantinople and Gallipoli, thereby breaking the terms of the Armistice. Not to have resisted this firmly at the very outset would, in our opinion, have been to sacrifice everything that we won in this theatre in the War. There was no idea here of trying to rush the opinion of Australia or any other Dominion. But the threat to the neutral zone was extremely sudden, and stopping it meant an effective declaration of policy by the British Empire within a comparatively small number of hours. It was because we remembered all that Dominion statesmen, including yourself, have said regarding your legitimate grievance in the first week of August, 1914, because nothing had been officially done to explain to the Governments and the public the serious and critical character of the issues by which we were then faced, that we made public the statement of policy issued on Saturday. I regret very much that we should not have succeeded in making the position plain to you, and think I can do so best by taking the main points of your telegram in succession and answering them at once as clearly as I can. You express, in the first place, the fear that our action may drag the Empire into war. There is no question whatever of our declaring war, but only of war being resumed against us by the breach of the Armistice which at present regulates our relations with Turkey. In spite of all our efforts to make peace Turkey has hitherto absolutely refused to come to an agreement. We are perfectly prepared to make another effort at the present time, and in doing so to show the fullest regard for her interests, as well as for those of the many other States concerned, but we must insist (and I am sure that you agree with this) that the solution shall be reached not by surrender to force but by conference. Here lies the importance of showing the reality of our determination that until peace is signed the terms of the Armistice shall be preserved, and that Kemal shall not be allowed to rush the position by occupying neutral territory on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles or the Bosphorus, which commands the passage through those Straits. In the second place, you mention the special interests of Greece and the dynastic interest of Constantine. Absolutely no part is played by these in the considerations by which we are moved. In March last we agreed in Paris that Greece should evacuate Asia Minor and that Constantinople should be returned to the Turks. The only reason this has not been done before is that Kemal refused the terms which the Sultan's Government had accepted, and that Greece insisted on maintaining her position in Asia Minor longer than her troops were really able to stand, because she thought it her duty to get the best guarantees possible for the Minorities, which during the War had fought on her side and on the Allied side. Guarantees under the League of Nations were then proposed, but Kemal would not concede anything. It is an open question whether or not the Greeks are to be blamed for taking great risks as they did with such disastrous consequences, in order that they might help the Minorities in Asia Minor. But our policy has no relation to that. The situation between Turkey and Greece in Asia has been definitely liquidated, and we are now brought back to the question of peace between the Allies and Turkey in matters which do not concern Greece one jot more than they concern the other Allied European nations.

In the third place you seem to fear that we may be guided by considerations which are of only secondary importance to the British Empire. I beg you to remove all such fears from your mind. Our supreme interest in the Near East is the freedom of the Straits and the neutrality of the territories which command the Straits both on the European and the Asiatic shores. This is, and has always been, the guiding consideration for us in deciding what terms of peace we are prepared to sign. The allocation of Thrace is not a primary interest for us. It concerns the Balkan nations directly and creates the imminent danger of a Balkan war which would involve Europe. If possible we desire to avoid this, because we desire that peace should be genuinely established everywhere, and because our interests suffer even from wars in which we are not directly concerned.

Nevertheless, we regard the allocation of Thrace as a secondary interest only, and are prepared to accept any reasonable terms in regard to it which the other interested States, including Turkey, can agree to accept.

In your suggestion that the League of Nations might be very well invoked to play some part in the settlement I am entirely with you. Lord Curzon, in point of fact, suggested last March in Paris, as you were then fully informed, that the whole question should be referred for decision to the League of Nations. This was refused by the French mainly on the ground that it would never be accepted by the Turks. It has ever since been perfectly well known that we are in favour of a reference to the League of Nations whenever such a reference is practicable, but what can the League of Nations do to prevent Mustapha Kemal, if he chooses to do so, from breaking the terms of the Armistice? Until all the Powers concerned are prepared to lay down their arms and accept a settlement by conference the League of Nations cannot intervene at all. That is what we are trying to secure, and that is what we believe we shall secure by a timely display of resolution and strength.

In another telegram* I will send you a full reply to the other detailed questions which you ask, but I hope that this message meets the main points on which you telegraphed to me, and that any fears which you may have entertained that we are engaging in a bellicose policy in matters of only secondary interest to the British Empire will be removed. Ends.

SECRET. With reference to my telegram of 21st September.† Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: I send you, as promised in last paragraph of my previous message,† following additional indications regarding points contained in your telegram of 20th September,‡ which have not already been answered.

(1) French Policy. You will have gathered from the Foreign Office papers which have been sent to you in print during the last year, that French policy is based on agreement with Turks on the lines of the Franklin-Bouillon Agreement of October last year, the text of which is contained in [Cmd. 1556.] Lord Curzon's comments on the Agreement will be found in his despatch to Paris No. 2863 of 3rd November, 1921. You should refer to correspondence between Foreign Office and French Embassy in November of that year ([Cmd. 1570]) for further illustration of the respective attitudes of His Majesty's Government and the French Government. Further light is thrown by Sir H. Rumbold's despatch No. 1051 of 21st November and Lord Curzon's despatch to Lord Hardinge No. 3189 of 1st December. The causes underlying French policy in the Near East are well given in Sir H. Rumbold's despatch No. 892 of 27th September, 1921, and in Lord Curzon's despatch to Lord Hardinge No. 344 of 2nd February last. Valuable commentary is also afforded by memorandum addressed to the Cabinet by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs on 7th October, 1921, and Sir Eyre Crowe's memorandum of 29th September of that year.

For more recent French policy you should read proceedings of the ten meetings held in Paris by the three Foreign Ministers from 22nd March to 26th March of this year, as also the despatch from Paris No. 1821 of 4th August and from Constantinople No. 683 of 1st August.

(2) Italian Policy. Agreement with the Turks is also desired by Government of Italy since they are anxious to obtain concession for raw material and emigration facilities for their surplus populations. The Italian Foreign Minister made general statement of their attitude on 7th June last, and this will be found printed as an enclosure in Rome despatch No. 518, 12th June.

(3) British policy towards Constantine. At one time it was hoped that Greece was capable of acting as guardian of the Straits. She can no longer be relied upon since her recent complete defeat. We see quite clearly that the problem of the Straits must be faced without counting on co-operation of Greeks, and whatever action is taken will be taken in interests of British Empire only, and there is no thought of considering Greek ambitions.

The printed Foreign Office despatches which you have received, and to some of which I have above made specific reference, record all the more important phases of the Near Eastern question during the last year. If, however, there are any further points on which you may be in doubt I should be glad to furnish explanations. Ends.

25TH SEPTEMBER. Following message for Prime Minister from General Smuts:—

Begins: I regret that an answer to your message of 15th September† has been delayed by my absence on tour in inaccessible part of the Union. In the meantime position appears to have altered materially for the better, and no longer to call for the active intervention of the Union.

Union Government understands and appreciates determination of the Imperial Government to maintain the freedom of the Straits of the Dardanelles and of the Bosphorus, which was one of the most beneficial results of the Great War. They most sincerely trust, however, that military intervention of the Empire will not be necessary for the purpose, and they rejoice at the more favourable turn of events which has been largely brought about by the successful British diplomacy during the last week.

* Nos. 326 and 328. † No. 304.

They believe that the measures which have been taken by the Imperial Government to safeguard the position of the Straits pending the meeting of the coming Conference will be found adequate for the purpose. Very important question of policy would be involved as far as the Union is concerned by any decision of the Union Government to take part in military operations in Eastern Europe, and it is felt by the Union Government that such a step should not be taken without calling Parliament together.

They are relieved that that step is rendered unnecessary by the more reassuring information now in their possession.

With regard to peace in the Near East, the Union Government venture to express the opinion that the future régime for maintaining the freedom of the Straits should be placed under the League of Nations, and they trust such a solution will be approved by the coming Conference. Ends.

Begins: The Commonwealth Ministry was content to leave the matter in the hands of Great Britain, being convinced that interference at this end would be calculated to embarrass rather than to help the efforts made by Great Britain towards peace. The declaration of Australia's intention to assist was unqualified, and therefore it had been unnecessary to strengthen it. Ends.

After Cabinet meeting Prime Minister amplified this statement as follows:—

Begins: He said that he wanted to make it clear that in the Great War Australia had put into the field a larger army than the Turks could now muster. We shall do so again, said Mr. Hughes, if necessity arises, and it will be well if Mustapha Kemal remembers this. We are for peace, and we want the Turks to have a fair deal, but if war is to come Mustapha Kemal must not forget what the entry into war by Australia means. Ends.

to evacuate Eastern Thrace, and Allied troops are meanwhile going to prevent panic and massacre there and to arrange for peaceful transference. French and Italian Generals lined up at the end with Harington, but as they had informed him previously that in no circumstances would their Governments resist the Turk, the value of their support was limited. Great credit is due to Harington, whose qualities were well known to [To Canada: the Canadian armies in France.] [To Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand: all Anzac troops passing in and out of the First and Second Armies in France.] He has shown great coolness and, at the right moment, that determination without which other qualities would have been useless. Situation is now greatly relieved, and we may hope for a peaceful outcome. We have been greatly hampered by the repeated failures of support from our Allies, and also by factious and vicious Party and Press campaign in this country. We have, for the time being, however, preserved, in spite of this, all the essential interests. The Greeks have been persuaded to withdraw by the influence of Great Britain, and our handful of good troops, backed by the British Navy and Air Force, have compelled the Turks to pause. There is every reason to hope that the war will be kept out of Europe. The Straits and the Gallipoli Peninsula, meanwhile, are in our complete control, and will remain so until they are handed over to the League of Nations under conditions satisfactory to the British Empire. Had it not been known that behind the British troops on the spot stood the united strength of the Empire these results could not have been achieved with the small amount of force at our disposal.

Please be assured that I and my colleagues have no desire other than to relieve of all possible future embarrassment matter of defect of procedure to which it refers. I shall do gladly whatever I can towards this end. It is, however, important that our position should be made perfectly clear to Parliament on its reassembling, and I hope therefore that you may find it possible to send me, in a form which may be given to Parliament, a reply to a second message† which I am sending you to-day. Ends.

18TH OCTOBER. Prime Minister asks me to send you following message:—

Begins: We have duly received the several despatches respecting the Near East situation. I have not thought it necessary to send continuous acknowledgments, but I desire, now that Near East crisis is at an end, to thank you for keeping my colleagues and myself informed so fully of material developments. From day to day we have kept ourselves as closely in touch with situation as has been possible at this distance.

We have refrained pending (sic) the crisis from pressing for an explanation of the circumstances referred to in my first message,* namely, that in advance of any word to us respecting the Near East situation the Press of our country carried despatches referred to as semi-official, to the effect that Canada and the other self-governing Dominions had been invited to render military assistance. We feel that we are entitled to be given some explanation of this, which we may have your authority to communicate to Parliament, and we shall be grateful if it can be supplied at your earliest convenience.

The need for an immediate summoning of Parliament having apparently passed, we intend to adhere to our original purpose of having Parliament reassemble in January, 1923. We should like to be free to bring down at that time all the correspondence that has passed between our respective Governments on the Near East situation. Parliament will expect this and serious misunderstanding and misapprehension will certainly be created by any refusal on our part to comply with wish of Parliament. Ends.

27TH OCTOBER. Following for your Prime Minister :—

Begins: Yesterday invitations were sent by Governments of Great Britain, France and Italy to the Japanese, Roumanian, Yugoslav, Greek and Turkish Governments (both of Constantinople and of Angora) to send representatives to Lausanne, 13th November, to conclude Treaty to end war in East, which would replace Treaty of Sèvres. Russian Soviet Government and Bulgarian Government also being invited to send to Lausanne, at a date to be fixed, representatives to take part in discussions on questions of the Straits, which the Conference will undertake at a later stage. Inquiry is also being addressed by the three Governments to the Government of the United States expressing hope that they will permit United States representative to be present during Lausanne negotiations in a capacity similar to that in which United States representative was present during negotiations at San Remo in 1920, or to take more active part in the negotiations specially on the question of the Straits.

According to arrangements agreed upon with French and Italian Governments, each Government will be represented at Lausanne by two plenipotentiaries. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will personally act as Chief British Plenipotentiary, and it is proposed that he should be accompanied by British High Commissioner at Constantinople. Dominion Governments will be kept informed from time to time of the general lines of policy on which British plenipotentiaries propose to proceed, and of the course of negotiations, and as in case of the other Treaties arising out of the Peace settlement, they will of course be invited to sign new Treaty and any separate instruments regulating status of the Straits.

His Majesty's Government trusts that this procedure will be in accordance with wishes of your Government.

British plenipotentiaries are fully acquainted with the Imperial aspect of the problem, and with the keen interest taken by the Dominion Governments in its solution. Similar telegram sent to other Prime Ministers. Ends.

PERSONAL and Secret. Following for your Prime Minister :—

Begins: My code telegram of to-day's date.* You have been sent by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs prints containing correspondence between Monsieur Poincaré and himself as to arrangements for Near East Conference. You should know that Monsieur Poincaré, in course of the discussions, informed Lord Curzon privately that if the Dominions and India were represented at Lausanne the French Government would demand that Morocco and Tunis should equally be represented. Lord Curzon replied to this that the status of the Dominions and India was once and for all settled in Paris in 1919 with full concurrence of Monsieur Clemenceau, that they signed the Treaty of Versailles and other treaties, including the Treaty of Sèvres, and that they became separate members of the League of Nations. He was unable to admit that similar status could be accorded to Tunis or Morocco. Monsieur Poincaré replied that at that moment he did not wish to engage in discussion on this point but he continued to press claim as regards Tunis and Morocco. Monsieur Poincaré's precise object in raising question is not clear but you will see that Lord Curzon fully maintained right of Dominions. Arrangements outlined in my code telegram of to-day for representation of British Empire by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs follow those adopted in connexion with Treaty of Sèvres, and in any case practical considerations render it desirable to limit the number of the plenipotentiaries at Lausanne. Ends.

31ST OCTOBER. Prime Minister sends you following message with reference to your telegrams of 27th October† on the subject of Lausanne Conference :—

Begins: The Government of the Union of South Africa has no intention and makes no claim to be represented at Lausanne Conference by Union delegate and assumes that this will also be the attitude of the other Dominions. It is, however, questionable whether the Dominions should in such cases be called upon to sign the eventual peace treaty. I know that this course has been adopted in case of other similar treaties arising from the Versailles Treaty where Dominions were not represented at Conference, but it does not seem fair or even necessary that in such cases the Dominions should sign the treaties, and it would be preferable for them simply to take note of the conclusion of the treaty without being called upon to sign it.

* No. 355.

† Nos. 355 and 356.

U

Awkward Parliamentary questions may be raised in the Dominions by signature under such circumstances, and it is in the interest of all to leave such questions alone.

Union Government feels much disturbed by the attitude of the present French Prime Minister in regard to Dominion representation at international conferences. Monsieur Poincaré's attitude and his reference in this connexion to Tunis and Morocco form a grave challenge to Dominion status as settled at Peace Conference and in the Peace Treaty and may lead to most serious complications on some future occasion. The correct attitude of Lord Curzon is appreciated most deeply. Occasions may arise, as at Washington, where the Dominions do claim representation, and if France resists the claim or tries to bring on the scene Tunis and Morocco, the Dominions may have to request the support of Great Britain, even to the extent of not attending herself without the Dominions. This may give rise to serious crisis, but at all costs the Dominions must defend their status even to the extent of imperilling friendship with France. Dominions will consider it an insult to be placed on the same level as Morocco and Tunis. It may have been a mistake originally to have recognized India as she was not fully self-governing, but that recognition was the deliberate act of the Peace Conference under very special circumstances and should form no precedent for the future. I have complete confidence in the future support of the Imperial Government should it become necessary, but it may be advisable to warn M. Poincaré in advance as to the grave danger to Anglo-French co-operation which might arise if France were in any way to call in question Dominion status. Ends.

Begins: I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Grace's telegram of 27th October* informing Government of Canada of invitations to the Lausanne Conference which the Governments of Great Britain, France, and Italy have sent to the Governments of other countries setting forth the procedure in reference thereto.

Government of Canada has no exception to take to the course pursued by His Majesty's Government regarding the conclusion of a treaty to end the war in the Near East. As it is proposed, however, to keep Canadian Government informed from time to time of the general lines of policy which British plenipotentiaries propose to follow and of the course of the negotiations, and to invite us to sign a new treaty and any separate instrument regulating the status of the Straits, we consider it advisable to take the earliest opportunity to inform His Majesty's Government that, in our opinion, the extent to which the proceedings of the Conference or the provisions of any treaty or other instrument arising out of the same may be held to bind Canada is necessarily a matter for the Parliament of Canada to decide, and that the rights and powers in these particulars of our Parliament must not be held to be affected by implication or otherwise in virtue of information which may be supplied to our Government. Ends.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 6.1 p.m., 2nd November, 1922.)

TELEGRAM.

(Paraphrase.)

2ND NOVEMBER. Secret. Mr. Hughes asks me to send following message:—

Begins: With reference your telegrams of 27th October* re Near East Conference and representation of Australia thereat, the suggestion of the French Prime Minister that if the Dominions were represented France would demand that Tunis and Morocco be treated similarly, and Lord Curzon's rejoinder to Monsieur Poincaré are noted. I fear, however, that I cannot quite appreciate your point when you say "You will see that Lord Curzon fully maintained rights of Dominions," after which you proceed to notify me that "Practical considerations render it desirable to limit the number of plenipotentiaries and, in short, that Lord Curzon and the British High Commissioner at Constantinople would act."

It is understood, of course, that we are to sign the new treaty when made or to refrain from doing so as we deem fit. That, put very shortly, is the position, and what it all means is quite clear. We are to go on in the same bad old way. No part whatever was taken by us in making Treaty of Sèvres. We signed it when made. Technically we are concerned only in enforcing observance of its provisions by the fact that Australia was a signatory. Our position in the recent Near East crisis would actually have been same if we had not signed. Australia was prepared to go to war—not because Treaty of Sèvres had been signed by her, but because she was part of the Empire, and Britain had rightly or wrongly committed herself to a policy which might lead to war, and the interests of the Empire were involved. The Commonwealth Government did not approve of many of the provisions of the Treaty of Sèvres nor of British policy towards Greece, which seems to have been one of the factors that led to recent crisis. The Commonwealth Government was asked to sign the treaty when it was made and when it could not be modified. It did so. It was asked to say whether it was ready to support Britain in a policy upon which it had not previously been consulted, and although this probably meant being once more launched into a war made by Britain acting on her own responsibility it said that it was ready to stand by her—to be represented if necessity arose by a great army, not merely by a contingent of troops. But it protested against these declarations of policy by Britain acting alone by which whole Empire might ipso facto be plunged into war.

Now we are informed that we are not to have representation at a Conference which is going to effect substantial modifications in Treaty of Sèvres. We are assured that a valiant defence of our status and rights was made; that the French Prime Minister was told very plainly that the question of our status was finally settled in 1919, and could not be reopened, and also, no doubt, that it was not material in any case as practical considerations made it desirable that Empire should be represented by Foreign Secretary and the High Commissioner at Constantinople.

Plain speaking between friends and blood relations is best. What you suggest may be, probably will be, quite satisfactory to Canada and South Africa; they were not prepared to fight. Australia was, and most emphatically it is not satisfactory to her. The suggestion may be dismissed that modified Treaty will commit us to nothing unless and until we sign it. We are equally involved in whatever consequences arise out of it whether we sign it or not. This habit of asking Australia to agree to things when they are done and cannot be undone—and when there is only one course open to us in practice, and that is to support Britain—is one which will wreck the Empire if persisted in. Already seen Canada and South Africa standing aloof on the plea that they had not been consulted. I have pointed out in the Imperial Cabinet many times that what is wanted, and what we are entitled to, is a real share in moulding foreign and Imperial policy. In foreign affairs the Empire must speak with one voice: but whose voice is that to be? Surely not only that of a British political party! As things are, foreign policy matters by which all are affected are treated as the footballs of British political parties. This is all right in British domestic affairs, but in foreign affairs we cannot tolerate such a state of affairs. Suppose that at the coming elections Labour party gets a majority, there will be another change in foreign policy, and it may be a complete volte face. We may be quite sure that after the election things will not be the same as before it. True position: yesterday one foreign policy is put forward by the British Government, and we are asked to support it, and we do so. A change of Government comes about, and we are asked now to support quite another one: or is it the same? Nobody knows and nobody can tell us. We have not had a voice in either case in moulding the policy. We ought not to be forced into war without previous consultation whilst peace was yet possible or be made to appear ridiculous in the world's eyes by declaring ourselves to-day in favour of one policy, and in little more than a month's time being compelled by a change of Government in Britain to favour quite another.

* Nos. 355 and 356.

I do not know we are very deeply concerned about the Treaty of Sèvres, but war in the Near East may come out of it—so much has been demonstrated—and then India, Egypt, and the Far East would be affected. Australia would have to fight to defend Suez Canal.

The Treaty of Sèvres will affect Moslem world, and so India and Egypt. If it affects India it will not leave Far East as it is.

In the face of all this you tell us that we are not to have representation at this Conference, and that Empire will be represented by two Englishmen: that we shall, of course, be kept fully informed of how things go, and that we shall have right to sign treaty or to decline to sign it. All I can say is that it is most unsatisfactory. Ends.

14TH NOVEMBER. Secret. Please communicate following to your Prime Minister:—

* No. 355.

Begins: Active negotiations have been pursued during the last few days between His Majesty's Government and the French Government with a view to establishing some basis of agreement on which the Allies can enter Lausanne Conference. French opinion has turned distinctly in favour of unity with us, and M. Poincaré has begun to show a more conciliatory disposition.

New Italian Government has expressed itself as being strongly favourable to close Allied co-operation.

Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is communicating following document regarding revised Treaty with Turks to French and Italian Governments to-night. It is in two parts, of which Category A represents the points of cardinal importance on which we feel that absolute assurance of Allies' support must be obtained. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will not feel justified in entering Conference without such assurance. Category B represents various points on which agreement is most desirable but which nevertheless admit of discussion.

Document begins:

CATEGORY A.

I. Western Thrace. Adherence to the understanding arrived at in the March discussions that the position in Western Thrace shall not be altered, and that the Turkish demands for a plebiscite shall be refused.

II. Frontier of Western Thrace, to be the frontier ceded by Turkey to Bulgaria under the Turco-Bulgarian Treaty of September, 1915.

(This agreement may be subject to possible creation of a neutral zone to provide railway access for Bulgaria to the Aegean.)

III. Freedom of the Straits. This principle is accepted by all the Allies (vide Note of 23rd September). The actual manner in which it is to be applied remains for discussion. The Allied Governments should maintain a firm accord as to the demilitarization of certain zones on the Dardanelles, Marmora, and Bosphorus, and as to the inspection of these areas under conditions to be determined.

IV. Capitulations. Adherence to the March resolutions with certain modifications which His Majesty's Government will be prepared to suggest to their Allies.

V. The Islands in the Aegean. To be ceded by Turkey to the Allies to be disposed of in the manner agreed to by the latter.

VI. Frontiers of Syria and Iraq. To be maintained except in so far as the Mandatory Powers may be disposed to consider or to propose local rectification.

VII. Mandated territories in Syria, Iraq, and Palestine. No change to be admitted.

VIII. Allied Graves. The Allies to insist upon a transfer of the ownership of the soil to them.

IX. Indemnities. A Turkish indemnity to be demanded as proposed in the March resolutions. The exact figure to be determined by agreement between the Allies.

The Turkish demand for an indemnity from Greece to be refused.

X. The Mudania Convention. To be strictly enforced, and all Turkish violations of it to be firmly resisted.

XI. Constantinople position. No withdrawal of Allied troops until ratification of the new Treaty of Turkey (September note).

CATEGORY B.

I. Protection of Minorities. As regards Minorities in Asia adherence so far as is still possible to resolutions of March, and as regards Minorities in Europe strict adherence to terms of September agreement.

II. Turkish Military Forces. General adherence to terms of March resolutions. If a relaxation of these is conceded, this should not apply to the Turkish Army in Europe which should be strictly limited in numbers.

III. Financial Clauses. These should remain for discussion between the Allied experts.

IV. Economic Clauses. Insistence upon recognition by Turkish Government of Allied pre-war concessions, and annulment of Turkish repudiation of contracts since the Armistice. The methods to be discussed by the Allied experts. Document ends.

Note of 23rd September has been published, see my telegram of 25th September, Secret.* For March discussions at Paris and resolutions see despatch of 10th April, Dominions No. 115† and Foreign Office prints sent you at the time. Ends.

We recognize the force of your criticism and also to the fullest extent feel the great danger to what we regard as the greatest of all considerations, namely, the unity of the British Empire, which would be involved in the adoption of a foreign policy which would, as you point out, affect the whole Empire, but which either through the absence of representatives of the Dominions or from any other cause, would not command the full support and approval of the Empire as a whole.

In this case the crisis arose suddenly, and an immediate conference seemed the only hope of avoiding conflict. If it were possible we would welcome most warmly your assistance and that of the representatives of the other Dominions at Lausanne. As this is impossible we can think of no

16TH NOVEMBER. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your message of 31st October* as to Lausanne Conference was brought before Cabinet to-day.

Our impression is that Poincaré's reference to Tunis and Morocco arose out of his desire a few weeks ago to be able to cite in support of a pro-Turkish policy views of Mohammedan communities under French protection. Evidently subsequent events have to some extent modified this desire, and our present view is that it would be best not to raise at present general question referred to at end of your message.

As to first part of your message, any Treaty resulting from Lausanne Conference will, of course, replace Treaty of Sèvres, and until it comes into force, a state of war between the British Empire and Turkey will technically continue. The Treaty must therefore be binding on the whole Empire when ratified. It remains to be seen whether there will be successful issue to Lausanne Conference, but if there is we should much prefer that any new Treaty should follow Paris precedent and include signatures on behalf of all the Dominions. If other Dominions sign, arguments against non-signature on behalf of Union of South Africa given in Mr. Lloyd George's message of 1st December, 1921,† in relation to Washington Conference apply with at least equal force. That you should be kept fully informed of the developments of the Conference is our most earnest desire, and we shall endeavour to insure that full details are sent. Ends.

It has been realized ever since declaration to Egypt of the 28th February, 1922—see my despatch of 16th March*—that modification of Articles 101-114 of the Treaty of Sèvres would be required. Reference to Egypt in any new Treaty of Peace with Turkey is necessary both to regulate the position between the two countries arising out of the War, and to ensure that Egypt should assume obligation of meeting service of the Ottoman loans secured upon the tribute formerly payable by Egypt to Turkey. It is now proposed as result of several weeks' negotiations that Egypt should, on the signature of the new Treaty, accede to those portions of it which affect her interests by means of a protocol signed by accredited representatives to Conference, and as the revised articles will contain a specific recognition by Turkey of the declaration of 28th February result of the Egyptian accession will be to give that declaration the force of a bi-lateral Anglo-Egyptian Agreement. British interests in the Suez Canal, Sudan, and Egypt will in these circumstances be fully safeguarded, and Egypt will definitely assume at the same time the service of the Ottoman Loans of 1855, 1891, and 1894, though payments on this account will no longer bear the character of tribute payable by a vassal State. Ends.

20TH NOVEMBER. Secret. Following for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Have now received further details from Lord Curzon regarding his discussions with M. Poincaré and French President 18th November. President was disturbed over two questions, apparent doubt on British side of France's determination to stand with us at Constantinople in all circumstances, and the suspicion in certain French circles of our desire to obtain an exceptional position there. Lord Curzon welcomed President's renewed assurances on the first point; on the second he repudiated any such British intention and added that the British Government had in fact been taken absolutely by surprise by flight of the Sultan.

* No. 57.

In the discussion with M. Poincaré, in which the new Italian Ambassador participated, Lord Curzon elicited that there would be no French reinforcements, that French troops would resist military attack and would refuse to go if Turks demanded evacuation, and finally that, if withdrawal became necessary, French troops would retire to Gallipoli with the British and hold the Peninsula.

M. Poincaré refused to commit himself on the general question as to what was to be done if the Allies were menaced at Lausanne by Turkish military action.

Following is summary of result of discussions on various points in Memorandum telegraphed to you 14th November.*

CATEGORY A.

(1) and (2). Agreed that Turkish demand for West Thracian plebiscite should be refused. Neutral zone west of Maritza giving Bulgaria access to sea agreed to in principle, but Poincaré in favour of ceding Karagatch to the Turks.

(3) Poincaré produced formula providing freedom of the Straits for commerce, Turkey if belligerent to retain right of search. For ships of war of all flags, free passage in time of peace; in time of war, if Turkey neutral, similar freedom subject to Hague Convention restrictions as to belligerent action; if Turkey is belligerent, freedom for neutral ships only. Lord Curzon agreed that the French should put forward this formula at the Conference. French were prepared to demand demilitarization of Gallipoli, Chanak and existing neutral zones on both sides of the Bosphorus, and suggested that all four zones should be put under the League of Nations. Lord Curzon pointed out the difficulties such as possibility of the League's unwillingness, objections from Turkey and Russia, and the lack of guarantee. This criticism was frankly admitted, but it was contended by Marshal Foch that League's protection might give a breathing space enabling the Straits to be forced in case of war before the Turks had time to block or defend them. Under the League of Nations, the inspecting body would be the International Straits Commission set up under the Sèvres Treaty. Lord Curzon agreed to leave it to the French to make this suggestion.

(4) Each State with capitulatory treaties with Turkey to be invited to send a representative to be heard at the Conference. Name "capitulations" is to be dropped and draft articles to be drawn up by Allied experts.

(5) France inclined to restore Tenedos and Imbros after demilitarization, to Turkey, a suggestion Lord Curzon proposed to resist.

(6), (7) and (8). Lord Curzon's proposals accepted.

(9) Lord Curzon considered that no substantial indemnities could be obtained from anyone, and that most demands would probably cancel out one another.

CATEGORY B.

(1) March resolutions as far as possible.

(2) The danger of conceding conscription to Turkey was pointed out by Lord Curzon, but he suggested that, in accordance with March formula, date of introducing a voluntary system might be indefinitely postponed. Marshal Foch proposed limitation of Turkish forces in Europe to 15,000. Lord Curzon insisted that if Turkish gendarmerie was to be officered by foreigners, three Great Powers should be equally represented, and that the monopoly of instructors should not be granted to the French. There was a good deal of vagueness on this whole question, and Lord Curzon is doubtful whether the French will stand firm on any point except that of Turkish Army in Thrace. Ends.

25TH NOVEMBER. Secret. My Prime Minister sends you following message:—

Begins: 24th November Cabinet carefully considered to-day Your Grace's message of 16th November* in reply to mine of 31st October† on the subject of the Lausanne Conference. We feel that purport of my message of 31st October has not been correctly interpreted or understood. Government of Canada has not expressed a desire that any treaty with Turkey which may result from Conference should be submitted for approval to Canadian Parliament before His Majesty is advised to ratify it, nor do we wish to be understood as preferring any such request. Intention of my message was to make clear that no exception was taken by us to Canada not being invited to be represented at the Conference, but, inasmuch as we had been informed that we would be invited to sign a new treaty and any separate instrument regulating status of Straits, we wished to make it perfectly clear that extent to which Canada may be held to be bound by the proceedings of Conference or by provisions of any treaty or other instrument arising out of the same was, in our opinion, necessarily a matter for the decision of the Canadian Parliament. That there should be no misunderstanding as to our position with respect to Canada's obligations in this and kindred matters is, we consider, of the utmost importance. Parliament will, in our opinion, desire as respects treaty with Turkey and any other instruments arising out of the Conference to reserve to itself the right to decide, upon the merits of the case, what action is right and proper on the part of people of Canada. We shall in this connexion be pleased to have authority to place all the information with which from time to time we may be supplied before Parliament. Ends.

8TH DECEMBER. Secret. Your telegram 25th November‡ Please communicate following message to your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Treaty with Turkey. Assumption on which our message of 16th November* was framed was that Canadian Government would wish to follow procedure adopted in case of peace treaties with Germany, Austria and Bulgaria. I am sorry if your telegram of 31st October† was not fully understood here. It is, as you say, most important that there should be no misunderstanding on so important a question. May I therefore set out position as it appears to us. It is this. Any Treaty which may result from Lausanne Conference will, of course, replace Treaty of Sèvres, and until it comes into force a state of war between the British Empire and Turkey will technically continue. The Treaty when ratified must therefore be binding on the whole Empire. Whether there will be successful issue to Lausanne

* No. 362.

‡ No. 368.

Conference remains to be seen, but if there is we should much prefer that any new Treaty should follow Paris precedent and include signatures on behalf of all the Dominions. Do I gather from your telegram that the Canadian Government are not averse from procedure proposed as regards signature of new Treaty and of any separate instrument regarding Straits, but wish to make it clear that should anything in Treaty or instrument be held to impose any serious international obligation on Canada as part of the British Empire, it cannot be considered binding on Canada until approved by Parliament? If so, it does not appear to us that procedure which you propose is essentially different from that which we should adopt in relation to Parliament here if contingency contemplated should arise. In any event should legislation be required to give effect to technical provisions of Treaty, this would presumably necessitate its submission to Parliament in Canada as here.

As regards last sentence of your telegram, would it not be well to wait until it is known whether the Lausanne Conference results in signature of a Treaty or Treaties, and then lay instruments themselves before Parliament? I do not think that it would be possible for any of the telegrams now being sent to you regarding Lausanne proceedings to be published, in view of fact that records of confidential interviews and impressions and other material intended only for private information are often contained. Ends.

It is now proposed by Lord Curzon that the conclusions reached so far, although it cannot be said that Turks have actually accepted any of them, shall be embodied in a draft preliminary treaty. Turks will be then invited either to accept, subject to any necessary alterations, or to reject as a whole. If all parties sign, the final treaty will be drafted and signed at a future meeting. It is probable that the Straits Convention will be completed for presentation at the same time as the preliminary draft treaty.

8TH AUGUST. Secret. Following from my Prime Minister for Prime Minister.

Begins: Naval Service Department has felt forced during recent years to consider seriously the irregular situation which has been created in the Great Lakes region by what has seemed on the part of Government of United States of America an indifferent attitude towards Rush-Bagot Agreement, 1817, which calls for a rigorous limitation of Naval Armament in that region. The Canadian Government, with strict regard for the letter and spirit of the Agreement, have not a single armed vessel on the Great Lakes at present. The United States, however, have at various times, and even in some instances without notifying us, stationed there vessels, which, though small and lightly armed at first, have been increased gradually in size and efficiency until they are now in fact assuming the character of a squadron with a definite fighting value, numbering from fifteen to twenty and exceeding the limits of agreement either in tonnage or armament. They are used as training ships for the Naval Militia of the States bordering on the Great Lakes, and as such they form a part of the Federal Naval Establishment. We have had no doubt whatever that this is their sole purpose. We have never entertained a thought that they could indicate any unfriendly intention toward Canada. If it became realized, however, their presence might arouse unfortunate recriminations and misunderstandings in the minds of the Canadian people who have valued so highly the 1817 arrangement, and it would be deplorable if the situation were allowed to precipitate demands for counter arming on our part.

We have carefully considered these factors laid before us by our Naval Advisers, and we reached the conclusion that the matter should not be allowed to rest. As a result I recently paid a brief visit to Washington accompanied by my colleague, the Minister of National Defence, in order that we might frankly put before the American Government the whole situation. Our reception at the hands of the President and the Secretary of State was satisfactory in every way. It was agreed that some arrangement should be reached to (?group omitted) the matter. It was felt that this could be done best by way of a treaty which, while preserving the full spirit and effect of the Rush-Bagot Agreement, would at the same time adapt its principles to present day conditions. It was arranged finally that after our return to Ottawa we should submit a draft for the purpose. We have accordingly had prepared by our technical officers, and are now considering, the draft Treaty, the terms of which are set out below. We think, however, that before proceeding further with the matter, full information of the project should be conveyed to you for any comment and suggestion that may occur to His Majesty's Government. In its direct operation it primarily concerns Canada, and we are confident, moreover, that it will be welcomed by other members of the Empire; we realize, however, that it is of concern to them as affecting in some degree the political relations of the Empire toward a great foreign power, and it happens also that original Agreement was on our side made solely by the Government of Great Britain. We should accordingly be glad to have your views, and we should particularly value any suggestions of a technical or practical nature concerning the conditions and safeguards that should be incorporated in the Treaty.

It seems essential that any new arrangement should take account of the undoubted fact that conditions which to-day obtain on the Great Lakes differ materially from those of 1817. Our Naval Service Department point out that the main changes are the following.—First. The present practicability of egress and ingress to and from the ocean of vessels of considerable size partly through national and partly through international waters, and the possibility that this water communication between the lakes and the ocean may in the future extend to vessels of increasing size.

Second. The natural desire of shipbuilding interests of both countries on the great lakes to (?group omitted) in the construction of naval vessels of a size that may pass out to the ocean.

Third. The great increase and variety of naval squadrons and establishments under modern conditions calling for increased personnel both in active service and in the reserve, and the consequent tendency to seek recruits in such promising areas as the Provinces or States bordering on the Great Lakes. It is believed that these changes can be met under adequate safeguards without any departure from the fundamental purpose and effect of the 1817 Agreement, and it is on this basis that the draft set out below has been prepared. It will be seen also that certain of the proposed articles are based on articles of the Naval Limitation Treaty concluded at Washington.

As regards the method of signature of the proposed Treaty, we consider that having regard to the character and implications (?) of the document, it would be appropriate that the full powers should be issued to Canadian subjects of His Majesty. We propose, therefore, when the time comes, to pass an Order-in-Council authorizing the issue of full powers to myself as Prime Minister and Secretary of State for External Affairs, and to my colleague the Minister of National Defence to sign on behalf of His Majesty.

The preamble and articles of the proposed draft follow: Preamble His Majesty the King, &c., and the United States of America.

Desiring through the abolition of their naval armament on the Great Lakes to contribute to the maintenance of peace and understanding that has happily so long subsisted between them, and having to that end agreed to adapt to present day conditions the principles of the Agreement between Great Britain and the United States of America concluded at Washington on the 28th and 29th April, 1817, and to supplement by provisions relating to the Great Lakes the treaty between the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan for the Limitation of Naval Armament signed at Washington on the 6th February, 1922, have resolved, etc.

Article No. 1.—The present treaty shall apply to the waters of the Great Lakes, the waters connecting the Great Lakes, the international boundary waters of the St. Lawrence, and the waters of Lake Champlain.

Article No. 2.—No armed vessel shall be maintained on the waters designated in Article No. 1 by either High Contracting Party, except in accordance with Article No. 3.

Article No. 3.—Such vessels may be maintained on the waters designated in Article No. 1 by either High Contracting Party as may be necessary for revenue and police duties.

The numbers, specifications, and armament of such vessels shall be agreed upon from time to time between the Canadian and American Governments.

Such vessels shall not be used on the waters designated in Article No. 1 for naval or militia training or for naval manoeuvres.

Article No. 4.—No vessel built on the waters designated in Article No. 1 for naval purposes shall have any offensive or defensive armament placed on board while it is in these waters.

Any such vessel shall be removed from these waters within six months of the date when it is ready for launching.

Each High Contracting Party shall promptly inform the other of any such vessel to be built on these waters within its jurisdiction communicating the date of the signing of the contract, the date when it is ready for launching, and its main dimensions.

The provision of this Article shall not be taken to prevent the use on these waters for Naval Reserve training purposes of unarmed vessels built thereon.

Article No. 5.—Should either of the High Contracting Parties become (engaged) in a war which in its opinion affects the naval defence of [or] its national security it may, after notice to the other High Contracting Party, suspend for the period of hostilities its obligations under Article No. 4, provided that it shall notify the other High Contracting Party that the emergency is of such a character as to require such suspension. On the cessation of hostilities this suspension shall terminate and Article No. 4 shall resume its full force and effect.

Article No. 6.—The present treaty shall be ratified in accordance with the constitutional methods of the High Contracting Parties, and shall take effect on the exchange of ratifications which shall take place at Washington as soon as possible.

It shall remain in force until two years after one of the High Contracting Parties has given notice to the other of an intention to terminate it.

Within one year of the date on which such a notice of termination has been received the High Contracting Parties shall meet in conference.

The present treaty shall supersede the Agreement between Great Britain and the United States of America which was concluded at Washington on the 28th and 29th April, 1817.

We are anxious in accordance with our conversation in Washington to submit a draft to the American Government as soon as possible, and I should therefore be specially grateful for a reply at your earliest convenience. Ends.

19TH OCTOBER. Secret. Mr. Lloyd George sends following message for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: The pressure of the last few weeks has, I am very sorry to say, prevented me from answering earlier your telegram of the 8th of August.* Your action in consulting us at this stage of the negotiations is much appreciated. The matter, as you point out, may well affect the political relations of the Empire generally with the United States. We sympathise entirely with your proposals for the revision of the Rush-Bagot Agreement. As to the proposed draft Treaty the only technical observations which we have to offer are as follows:—

(a) The last paragraph of Article 4 would allow the United States to have an unlimited number of unarmed ships built on the Lakes to be used for training.

(b) Under the Treaty, Canada would have no grounds for refusing request of the United States to pass into the Lakes any number of warships with guns removed.

(c) Such vessels could in either case be armed at short notice and used against Canada.

It further occurs to us that it would appear desirable that the vessels used for training United States reservists should be so limited in size and type that they would not outclass any of the Canadian ships on Great Lakes which it might be possible to arm on outbreak of hostilities. It is undesirable, for instance, that old cruisers should be used by the United States for training reservists, as vessels of this class would dominate the situation in the event of hostilities, unless Canada in peace time maintained vessels of similar type on the Lakes.

We think, at the same time, that you ought to know there is considerable doubt felt here whether the United States is likely to consent to any agreement which will decrease the existing armed strength on the Great Lakes, for the following reasons:—

(a) Great difficulty is experienced by the United States in manning their fleet, and they are likely to want to make use of the keenness displayed among naval reservists and sea scouts in the States bordering the Lakes. Armed ships appear to be essential to encourage recruiting and training, but it is suggested by the draft Treaty that all training should be done in unarmed ships.

(b) The financial position of the United States for building and maintaining ships is a strong one, and that Government may not feel any great interest in agreeing to restrictions as to ships on the Lakes.

(c) In the future the United States may have direct communication to the Lakes independent of Canadian waters.

Of course, these considerations afford no reason for refraining from putting proposals in your draft Treaty before the Government of the United States, but I mention them because if in the course of the negotiations you find that the United States Government is not able to accept the proposal that no ships on the Lakes should be armed except those which may be required for revenue and police duties, you may find it necessary to consider the substitution of a provision permitting the use of armed ships for training but limiting their number, size, etc. In that case if you desire we should be glad to offer suggestions as to appropriate wording. Ends.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Ottawa, 23rd November, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to transmit, herewith, copies of an Approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada on the subject of a proposed new Treaty between Great Britain and the United States regarding naval vessels on the Great Lakes.

Copies of this Minute are being forwarded to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington.

Enclosure in No. 378.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 7TH NOVEMBER, 1922.

P.C. 2333.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 3rd November, 1922, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for External Affairs, representing that Your Excellency's Ministers having for some time past had under consideration various deviations on the part of the United States Government from the Rush-Bagot Agreement of the 28th April, 1817, limiting the naval forces to be maintained by the two powers on the Great Lakes, decided to make direct representations to the Secretary of State of the United States, and with that purpose in view, the Prime Minister and the Minister of National Defence, shortly after prorogation of the last session of Parliament, visited Washington and had an interview with Mr. Hughes on the 12th July, 1922, at which meeting it was suggested that the principles contained in the Rush-Bagot Agreement should be embodied in a new treaty, due regard being had to the changed conditions of the times. Mr. Hughes concurred in this, and asked the Canadian Ministers to supply him with a memorandum showing the extent and disposition of the armament at present employed on the Great Lakes. He also requested that he might be furnished with a draft treaty of what the Canadian Minister proposed. A draft was accordingly prepared, in consultation with His Majesty's Government, and is submitted herewith, together with a memorandum as to the strength of the naval vessels on the Lakes, asked for by Mr. Hughes.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward this draft treaty, together with the memorandum for the Secretary of State of the United States, to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington for the consideration of the United States Government, and for an expression of their views thereon.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,

Clerk of the Privy Council.

PREAMBLE.

His Majesty the King, etcetera, and the United States of America,

Desiring through the abolition of their naval armament on the Great Lakes, to contribute to the maintenance of the peace and good understanding that has happily so long subsisted between them, and

Having to that end agreed to adapt to present day conditions the principles of the Agreement between Great Britain and the United States of America concluded at Washington on the 28th and 29th April, 1817, and to supplement by provisions relating to the Great Lakes the Treaty between the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan for the Limitation of Naval Armament, signed at Washington on the 6th of February, 1922.

Have resolved, etcetera,

Article One.—The present Treaty shall apply to the waters of the Great Lakes, the waters connecting the Great Lakes, the international boundary waters of the St. Lawrence River, and the waters of Lake Champlain.

Article Two.—No armed vessel shall be maintained on the waters designated in Article 1 by either High Contracting Party except in accordance with Article 3; nor shall there be passed, for any purpose whatsoever, from the sea into the waters designated, by either High Contracting Party, any vessel, either armed or unarmed, which has been designed, built or used for naval purposes, without a mutual agreement beforehand.

Article Three.—Such vessels may be maintained on the waters designated in Article 1 by either High Contracting Party as may be necessary for revenue and police duties.

The numbers, specifications, and armament of such vessels shall be agreed upon from time to time between the Canadian and American Governments.

Such vessels shall not be used on the waters designated in Article 1 for naval or militia training or for naval manoeuvres.

Article Four.—No vessel built on the waters designated in Article 1 for naval purposes shall have any offensive or defensive armament placed on board while it is in these waters.

Any such vessel shall be removed from these waters within six months of the date when it is ready for launching.

Each High Contracting Party shall promptly inform the other of any such vessel to be built on these waters within its jurisdiction, communicating the date of the signing of the contract, the date when it is ready for launching and its main dimensions.

Article Five.—Should either of the High Contracting Parties become engaged in war, which in its opinion affects the naval defence of its national security, it may, after notice to the other High Contracting Party, suspend for the period of hostilities its obligations under Article 4, provided that it shall notify the other High Contracting Party that the emergency is of such a character as to require such suspension. On the cessation of hostilities this suspension shall terminate, and Article 4 shall resume its full force and effect.

Article Six.—The present Treaty shall be ratified in accordance with the constitutional methods of the High Contracting Parties, and shall take effect on the exchange of the ratifications, which shall take place at Washington as soon as possible.

It shall remain in force until two years after one of the High Contracting Parties has given notice to the other of an intention to terminate it.

Within one year of the date on which such notice of termination has been received the High Contracting Parties shall meet in conference.

(P.C. 4583.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 8th December, 1921, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for External Affairs, stating that he has had under consideration a despatch, dated 25th November, 1921, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, relative to the Supplementary Extradition Convention with the United States, signed on the 15th January, 1917, intimating that the amendments introduced into this Convention by the United States Senate will necessitate the signature afresh of the Convention in its amended form, and stating that, if the Canadian Government concur, the United States Ambassador at London will be invited to proceed to such signature with the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

As Canada has already agreed to the ratification of this Convention in its amended form, the Committee, on the recommendation of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to inform the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies that the Canadian Government concur in the course suggested.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 28th March, 1922.

(P.C. 633.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 18th March, 1922, from the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, to whom was referred a despatch, dated the 16th December, 1921, Dominions No. 499, on the subject of the proposed International Convention regarding the treatment of venereal disease among seamen, inquiring whether the Canadian Government would desire to participate in such Convention.

The Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs submits that it is represented by the Minister of Health, who has had the matter under consideration, that the facilities necessary to meet the requirements imposed by the provisions of this agreement are already in large measure possessed by Canada and, where lacking, can be readily provided, and that in view of the advantages of adequate treatment secured under the agreement to Canadian sailors in all parts of the world, which under present conditions it is not possible to obtain, and of the protection afforded to the citizens of Canada through diminishing the risk of introducing infection into the Dominion, the Minister of Health is strongly of opinion that Canada should become a party to it.

The Committee concur in this opinion and, on the recommendation of the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to inform the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies that the Canadian Government approve the principle of the proposed Convention and would desire to participate therein.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 12th July, 1922.
REFERRING to your despatch dated 16th December, 1921, Dominions No. 499,* relative to the proposed International Convention regarding the treatment of venereal disease among seamen, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that the treatment of venereal diseases amongst seamen employed on foreign-going ships of the mercantile marine is provided for by the Commonwealth Quarantine Act, under the provisions of which members of the ships' crews affected by these diseases are removed to Quarantine Station Hospitals, and there detained until the departure of the ship from the port or until any infective stage of the disease in question has been terminated.

During this period of detention a charge is made on the shipping company sufficient to cover the maintenance of the sailor or seaman, but medical attendance, necessary drugs and surgical dressings are provided free.

While to this extent the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia is acting in accordance with the terms of the proposed Convention, it is, nevertheless, not considered desirable that the Commonwealth should adhere in its entirety to the text of the proposed Convention, inasmuch as the method of providing free treatment is not in accordance with that implied by the wording of the Convention. To the extent, however, of using the model card of medical record, the Commonwealth is prepared to conform to the proposed method so that uniformity of practice will, to this extent, be secured.

I have, &c.,
FORSTER,
Governor-General.

Note.—Correspondence was still proceeding with the Belgian Government as to this Convention at the end of 1922.

3RD FEBRUARY. Quadruple Pacific Treaty signed Washington, 13th December. Question has arisen as to most appropriate time for ratification. Anticipated that there will be discussion of Treaty in Parliament here prior to ratification, but His Majesty's Government would wish that His Majesty the King should be in a position to ratify as soon as they are assured of United States ratification. Would this be in accordance with your Ministers' views? It will be, of course, necessary at or before ratification to take steps to give effect to arrangement that Quadruple Treaty shall not be interpreted as applying to main islands of Japan, which is understood to have been agreed to at Washington beginning of January. As regards this point Mr. Balfour is being consulted, and as soon as possible further communication will be sent to you.

MATTER most urgent. With reference to my telegram 15th July.* Following for your Prime Minister. Begins: All other Dominions have now concurred in ratification by His Majesty of treaties signed at Washington, and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is pressing to know how soon approval of Commonwealth can be obtained. If this approval is likely to be delayed beyond the end of July he thinks that it will be necessary for His Majesty's ratification to be sent in with reservation as to Australia. He strongly deprecates this course, however, as he thinks that political interests of Empire render it most desirable that no part should be excluded from His Majesty's ratification. It is gathered from your telegram of 12th June† that Commonwealth Government are only waiting for necessary action in Commonwealth Parliament. Can you expedite this? Ends.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

APRIL 6TH. Your telegram of 21st January,* Women and Children Convention. Ministers are in complete sympathy with aims and objects and are prepared to use all means under existing laws or by administrative instructions to give effect to Convention, but are not at present in position to introduce legislation to amend laws to cover points in which they may be defective. Existing laws make sufficient provision for carrying out terms of Convention with following exceptions, which appear of no great moment:

(1) Article 3. While under South African system of law mere preparation for commission of offence is not punishable because it does not constitute what is technically attempt to commit offence, nevertheless where specific attempt to commit offence is accompanied by act directed towards execution of intent, then if that act is part of series of acts necessary or thought by accused to be necessary to commission of offence it is punishable as attempt. This seems to go very far towards fulfilling terms of Convention.

(2) Article 6. Existing law in two most populous provinces provides for such licensing and supervision. There appears to be no practical need for extending those laws at present to other two provinces. Further inasmuch as under existing circumstances women and children do not leave shores of South Africa to such employment in another country there is apparently no necessity for specific regulations for ensuring protection after they have left Union.

(3) Article 7. Social conditions in Union render undesirable exhibition of notices in railway stations and ports warning women and children.

Subject to reservation(s) on points indicated, Ministers are prepared to recommend that Convention be ratified on behalf of Union.—ARTHUR FREDERICK.

As regards points mentioned, position in this country regarding Article 3 is same as in Union, also second part of Article dealing with preparatory acts is governed by words "within legal limits" and understood that this part was only intended to apply to countries where preparatory acts recognized as offences in legal system. Unless existing agreement covering entry of United States aircraft into Canada is accepted by Commission as "a special and temporary authorisation," amendment will not solve difficulty with regard to Canada's relations with United States. Brancker evidently of opinion that it cannot be so construed (see Air Ministry letter to High Commissioner for Canada, 22nd November*). Government of Canada is not prepared to ratify proposed amendment unless assurance can be given either that application of Article 5 will be postponed or derogation granted until regular Convention governing flying between Canada and United States can be concluded or present agreement with United States considered "special or temporary authorisation."—BYNG.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 15.]

(No. 407.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 10th July, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, copies of two Parliamentary Papers [Cmd. 1609 and 1741] containing the texts (a) of the Convention for the Regulation of Aerial Navigation signed at Paris on the 13th October, 1919, (b) of the Additional Protocol of the 1st May, 1920, regarding certain derogations to Article 5 of the Convention, and (c) of the Procès-Verbal of the Deposit of Ratifications of the Convention and of the Additional Protocol.

(2) It will be remembered that this Convention was one of the International Conventions which formed the subject of the letter from the Provisional Government of Ireland Committee of the Cabinet of the 2nd May, 1922, which was acknowledged by the Secretary to the Provisional Government on the 5th May, 1922.†

(3) In order to give effect to the Convention and to the Additional Protocol an Order in Council, entitled the Air Navigation Order, 1922,‡ of which I enclose copies, was made on the 20th June, 1922, under the provisions of the Air Navigation Act, 1920.

(4) Your Ministers will observe that under Section 30 of the Order and Article 73 of the Irish Free State Constitution, the Order is operative in the Irish Free State until the Parliament of the Irish Free State makes separate provision for the purpose of giving effect to the Convention or any part thereof.

(5) I have further to enclose copies of two letters§ from the General Secretary of the International Commission for Air Navigation formally notifying certain resolutions adopted by the Commission at the meetings held in London on the 25th, 26th, and 27th October, 1922, and in Brussels from the 28th February to the 2nd March, 1923. It will be seen that these Resolutions referred to the amendment of certain Annexes to the Convention and the adoption of regulations concerning matters referred to in the Convention.

(6) At the earlier of the two meetings referred to in the preceding paragraph, the Commission discussed an amendment proposed by the French representatives modifying Article 5 of the Convention in such a way as to make it possible for a contracting State to conclude a special agreement with a non-contracting State enabling the aircraft of the latter to fly over the territory of the former, provided that the rights of the States who are parties to the Convention are not infringed, and that its rules and annexes are not contravened. I enclose a copy of the Draft Protocol|| which was prepared to give effect to the agreement reached at the Meeting of the Commission, signed by the President of the Session and the Secretary-General of the Commission.

* No. 12. † Nos. 152 and 153 in Dominions No. 87. ‡ S.R.O. 1922, No. 663. § 9649 and 23030: not printed; see Treaty Series No. 14 of 1923 for the text of the Amendments. || 56748: not printed; see Treaty Series 1925, No. 12.

(7) The Protocol was signed by His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires in Paris on the 28th March, and it is proposed that it should be ratified by His Majesty. This ratification will, of course, apply to the Irish Free State: in view, however, of the fact that the Protocol does not impose any additional obligations but is, in fact, a relaxation of the provisions of the original Convention, I presume that your Ministers will not have any objection to the necessary steps being taken for the ratification of the Protocol.

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th January, 1923.

WITH reference to your letter of the 13th December, 1922,† and to the letter from this Department of the 10th January,‡ I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to transmit to you, to be laid before the Air Council, a copy of a telegram§ from the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa regarding the application of the Belgian Government for a derogation from Article 5 of the International Convention for the Regulation of Aerial Navigation.

2. It is observed that your letter of the 13th December† refers only to the Governments of the self-governing Dominions whose representatives signed the Convention. In accordance with the third and fourth paragraphs of the Additional Protocol to the Convention of the 1st May, 1920 (vide page 3 of Cmd. 1741), however, applications for derogations from Article 5 of the Convention must be submitted to, and approved by, "the Contracting States" before the derogation becomes effective: Article 40 of the Convention provides that "the British Dominions and India shall be deemed to be States for the purposes of the present Convention," and it may be held that the expression "British Dominions" should be interpreted as including all the self-governing Dominions, as distinguished from the Colonies and Protectorates which are expressly included with the Mother Country by Article 1 of the Convention, and that Newfoundland and the Irish Free State should accordingly be treated as "Contracting States" for the present purpose in addition to those Dominions whose representatives signed the Convention.

3. This question has already arisen in connexion with the representation of the Dominions on the International Air Navigation Commission, and I am to refer to the correspondence ending with the letter from this Department of the 29th July, 1922.||

4. In the present instance, the immediate question whether the Belgian Government should be granted a derogation from Article 5 did not appear to be of any practical importance to Newfoundland or the Irish Free State, and the Secretary of State confined himself, therefore, to telegraphing to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa. He considers it essential, however, that the reply returned to the letter of the 30th November, 1922,¶ from the International Air Navigation Commission should not be such as to admit explicitly or by implication that

Newfoundland or the Irish Free State are not "Contracting States" for this purpose, and he would suggest that the reply might be simply that the derogation is accepted by "His Majesty's Government and the Governments of the Dominions" without specifying which of the Dominions are included in the term.

Paris, 3, rue François Ier,

SIR,

le 30 novembre, 1922.

IN accordance with the provisions of the Additional Protocol to the Air Convention, dated in Paris 1st May, 1920, the Belgian Government has made an application for a derogation from Article 5 in favour of the States signatory to the Air Convention of the 13th October, 1919, but which have not yet ratified it as well as in favour of Spain, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Finland, Esthonia, Lettonia and Monaco.

This request for derogation was examined and approved by the International Commission for Air Navigation last October. Further, the duration of such derogation has been fixed for a period of six months, but it will not take effect until after it has been expressly accepted by the Contracting States.

In consequence of, and in accordance with, the said Additional Protocol, I have, therefore, the honour to propose such application for the acceptance of your Government, and I beg to request that you will kindly inform me as soon as possible of its decision with regard thereto.

[MY LORD.] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 31st December, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a letter from the International Commission for Air Navigation regarding an application by His Majesty's Government for a derogation from Article 5 of the Aerial Navigation Convention of 1919.

2. It will be recollected that provision for the grant of derogations from this Article was made in the additional Protocol to the Convention, which appears on pages 3-5 of Parliamentary Paper Cmd. 1741—Treaty Series No. 11 (1922)—of which copies were enclosed in my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 315 of the 29th August, 1922.† A declaration was inserted in the procès-verbal of the Deposit of Ratifications of the Convention and the Additional Protocol (pages 5-7 of the same Parliamentary Paper) to the effect that, until it might be possible to grant the derogations provided in the Additional Protocol, the Governments concerned might postpone the application of the provisions of Article 5 of the Convention as regards the signatory States which had not yet deposited their ratifications as well as Spain, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, the Netherlands, Denmark, Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Monaco. As stated in my predecessor's despatch Dominions Treaty No. 44 of the 20th September, 1922,‡ it was at first considered inopportune to institute steps for the purpose of obtaining the grant of specific derogations under the Additional Protocol, and a formal notification was made to the French Government, for communication to the International Commission and to the other Contracting States, of the intention of His Majesty's Government to postpone the application of the provisions of Article 5 in respect of the States referred to in the declaration inserted in the procès-verbal of the Deposit of Ratifications. As, however, an application for a derogation has since been made by the French Government (vide my telegram of the 14th April*), it has been thought well for His Majesty's Government to make a similar application, and the result of the application is shown in the enclosed letter.

3. It will be observed that the list of States specified in the application is the same as that covered by the notification to the French Government mentioned in the preceding paragraph, and it is presumed that your Ministers would agree to a reply being sent to the International Commission, to the effect that they accept the derogation.

4. I shall be glad if a reply to this despatch can be returned by telegraph.

SIR,

20, Avenue Kleber, Paris, 13th December, 1923.

IN accordance with the provisions of the Additional Protocol to the Convention dated in Paris the 1st of May, 1920, the British Government has made, in the name of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, an application for a derogation from Article 5 in respect of the States signatory to the Air Convention of the 13th October, 1919, which have not yet ratified it, as well as of Spain, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Monaco.

This application for a derogation was examined in October last by the International Commission for Air Navigation which approved same, the duration thereof being fixed at six months, but the derogation granted will not take effect until after having been expressly accepted by all the Contracting States.

I have the honour, in consequence thereof and in accordance with the said Additional Protocol, to propose such application for a derogation for acceptance by the Governments of the Dominions and of India and to request that you will be so good as to notify me, as soon as possible, of the decisions they make in regard thereto.

Ottawa, 12th December, 1922.

WITH reference to a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor-General, dated 13th November, 1922, transmitting copy of a letter from the Secretary-General of the International Commission for Air Navigation regarding the adoption of the necessary legislative or administrative measures for giving effect to the provisions of Article 25 and paragraph 16 of Annex H of the Convention relating to the Regulation of Aerial Navigation, I have the honour to represent that the Canadian authorities have power under Section 38 of the Canadian Air Regulations, 1920, to deal with breaches of the provisions of Annex D of the Convention, whether these breaches occur within or beyond Canadian territory, by the suspension or cancellation of the certificates of persons responsible for such breaches.

The question of whether action may be necessary in the future to obtain further powers to ensure the prosecution and punishment of offenders in the case of breaches committed beyond Canada, will receive consideration.

As regards breaches of paragraph 16 of Annex H, powers exist for the suspension or cancellation for cause of any certificate granted under the Canadian Regulations. The Department of Militia and Defence is prepared to take such action as may be deemed necessary to deal with any properly authenticated infringements which may be reported.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to cause the Secretary of State for the Colonies to be informed in the above sense.

sary legislation or administrative measures for giving effect to the provisions of Article 25 and paragraph 16 of Annex H of the Convention relating to the regulation of Aerial Navigation, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that the provisions of Article 25 of the Convention for the Regulation of Air Navigation have been brought into force in Australia by the Air Navigation Regulations (Statutory Rule No. 33 of 1921) issued under powers conferred by the Commonwealth Air Navigation Act, 1920.

The provisions of Annex H of the Convention were not included in the Air Navigation Regulations, and so brought into operation, as this section of the Convention referred mainly to Customs matters.

It is proposed to insert a provision in the Customs Act to cover the importation and exportation of goods by air vessels of all kinds, and also the report and clearance thereof, upon the same lines as for the control of surface vessels. For this reason and to avoid overlapping of functions the Customs authorities asked that provisions relating to Customs requirements be not included in the proposed Air Navigation Regulations.

The Commonwealth Government has, however, full power under its Air Navigation Regulations to suspend, either for a limited time or permanently, the Certificate of any aircraft which may infringe the Customs or Quarantine Regulations of Australia, and, should such action be taken in the case of visiting aircraft belonging to other contracting States, full information will be forwarded to the International Commission for Air Navigation for further action by the Commission with the State concerned.

8TH MAY. Confidential. Belgian representative on International Air Commission has put forward proposal that Article 34 Air Convention should be amended to following effect:—

(i) Each State represented on Commission should have only one vote, British Empire as at present counting as one State for voting purposes.

(ii) Majority required for any modification of Annexes of Convention should include at least three of following five States: United States of America, British Empire, France, Italy, Japan.

French representative has proposed further amendment that expenses of Commission should be apportioned as follows: Two shares each by United States of America, British Empire, France, Italy, Japan, and one share each by all other Contracting States.

Question was discussed at last meeting of Commission, and at request of British Representative deferred until meeting to be held in June, in order to allow time to ascertain views of Dominions and India.

Provisions of Article 34 in its present form, by giving preponderance of votes to principal Allied and Associated Powers, have deterred former neutral and enemy States from adhering to Convention and have also proved unpalatable to smaller Contracting States. Your Ministers will appreciate that adhesion of European States generally would be of advantage from point of view of British Empire as removing possibility of formation of separate Convention by Germany and certain other Central European States which might serve to block route from United Kingdom to East. For this reason Air Council strongly impressed with desirability of removing obstacle to adhesion presented by existing allocation of votes. Amendment is likely to be generally acceptable to Contracting States, and both France and Japan, whose voting power, like our own, would be reduced by it from present figure of two votes to one, have expressed themselves as in agreement. Amendment would not affect existing provisions of Article 34 as to representation of Great Britain, the Dominions, and India on International Air Commission and their right of veto with regard to proposals for amendment of Convention as distinct from Annexes. In the circumstances Air Council would wish their representative at next meeting of Commission to support proposal, and hope that your Ministers will concur in similar attitude being adopted on their behalf. If amendment finally adopted present practice as to casting of British Empire vote at meeting of Commission would not be substantially altered, as there would, of course, be consultation before hand on any point of doubt.

Please telegraph reply.—DEVONSHIRE.

9TH JUNE. Confidential. Your telegram of 8th May,* proposal put forward by Belgian and French representatives for amendment to Article 34 of Air Convention. Prior to receipt of this telegram Canadian Government was disposed to consider more acceptable original proposal of Belgium whereby each Contracting State would have one vote, but it appreciates the difficulties of European States as indicated in your telegram, and desirability of increasing number of Contracting States and obtaining adherence of as many Powers as possible to Convention, and agrees that present allocation of votes is not satisfactory and will, therefore, not press its views at present. At the same time it is not considered that this country should permanently accept position which would give her only one-sixth of a vote, and it is therefore suggested that any amendment adopted should be subject to reconsideration either at fixed date, say, 1st January, 1926, or when number of adhering States reaches fixed number, say, 30; and, while it can be readily understood that, as long as the number of States adhering to the Convention is small, voting power of six held by British representatives might well be objected to by other countries, as number of States increases, grounds of this objection tend to disappear, and six votes out of total thirty could not be considered disproportionate considering variety of conditions, extent of territories, and probable development of aviation in British Commonwealth.—BYNG.

SIR,

Downing Street, 19th October, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 407 of the 10th July,* I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that, at a meeting of the International Commission on Aerial Navigation early in the year, the Belgian representative on the Commission put forward a proposal that Article 34 of the Aerial Navigation Convention, 1919, should be amended to the following effect:—

(I) Each State represented on the Commission should have only one vote, the British Empire as at present counting as one State for voting purposes.

(II) The majority required for any modification of the Annexes of the Convention should include at least three of the following five States: the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan.

2. The French representative proposed a further amendment that the expenses of the Commission should be apportioned as follows:—

Two shares each by the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy and Japan, and one share each by all other Contracting States.

3. The provisions of Article 34 in its present form, by giving a preponderance of votes to the Principal Allied and Associated Powers, have deterred former neutral and enemy States from adhering to the Convention and have also proved unpalatable to the smaller Contracting States. As your Ministers will appreciate, the adherence of the European States generally would be of advantage, as removing the possibility of the formation of a separate Convention by Germany and certain other Central European States, which might serve to block the route to the East. For this reason, the Air Council were strongly impressed with the desirability of removing the obstacle to adherence presented by the existing allocation of votes. Both France and Japan, whose voting power also would be reduced by the first amendment from the present figure of two votes to one, had expressed themselves as in agreement with the amendments which would not affect the existing provisions of Article 34 as to the representation of Great Britain, the Dominions and India on the Commission and their right of veto with regard to proposals for the amendment of the Convention as distinct from its Annexes.

4. In the circumstances, the Air Council felt it desirable that their representative at the meeting of the Commission, at which the proposed amendments were considered, should support the proposals, and the Governments of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, who were consulted as to the amendments, concurred in a similar attitude being adopted on their behalf.

5. At the meeting of the Commission held in June, the amendments were adopted, and they have now been embodied in a Protocol, of which a copy is enclosed.† According to the provisions of the Protocol and of Article 34 of the Convention, the amendments will not take effect until after the deposit, at the seat of the Commission, of the ratifications of all States at present Contracting Parties to the Convention.

6. I should be glad to learn whether your Ministers would desire that the Protocol should be signed on their behalf, if arrangements can be made to this effect, and subsequently ratified on their behalf by His Majesty. If arrangements can be made, signature of the Protocol on behalf of the Irish Free State would be a convenient method of securing recognition of the inclusion of the Irish Free State amongst the "British Dominions" which, in accordance with Article 40 of the Convention, are to be deemed to be States for the purposes of the Convention.

7. The Governments of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa are being consulted with regard to the question of signature and ratification of the Protocol on their behalf.

SIR,

WITH reference to the recent correspondence between your Department and the Air Ministry, regarding the status of Newfoundland for the purposes of the International Convention for the regulation of Aerial Navigation, and to previous correspondence between this Department and yours on the same subject, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to state, for the information of the Duke of Devonshire, that, after further examination of the question generally, and with particular regard to the considerations set forth in your letter of 8th July last,* he feels unable to modify the opinion given in the letter from this Department of 26th June last.†

2. The signature affixed to the Convention on behalf of Great Britain (under a full power drawn in general terms without special mention of Newfoundland), covered all parts of the British Empire except those which were specifically recited in the preamble, and which signed separately on their own behalf. All parts of the Empire included in the first category can only be treated, or have been intended to be treated, as an indivisible whole. Indeed, in order to obviate any doubt as to the position even of India and of the four Dominions, which signed independently, their separate existence as states for purposes of the Convention was stipulated in terms in the instrument itself (Article 40). In effect, the only ground on which treatment equal to that accorded to the signatory Dominions could be claimed on behalf of Newfoundland would be that the word "Dominions," as used in Article 40, was expressly intended to include Newfoundland. On that point, the Secretary of State, for the reasons given in the letter from this Department† already referred to, still fails to see how such an interpretation could be substantiated. That this view is the one which would almost certainly be taken by the other parties to the Convention, is borne out by the fact that the Secretary of the International Commission for Air Navigation, when recently notified‡ of the intention of the Government of Newfoundland to postpone the application of the provisions of Article 5 of the Convention, returned the letter on the assumption that it had been written under a misapprehension, inasmuch as Newfoundland, not being a signatory of the Convention, had no independent locus standi on the Commission.

3. In expressing what appears to him to be the only possible view the Secretary of State, needless to say, is not prompted by any motive other than the desire to avoid a claim on behalf of Newfoundland being publicly rejected in the event of it being formally put forward. The Duke of Devonshire will doubtless agree that it would be preferable that no such claim should be made rather than be made and fail.

4. The position of the Irish Free State appears to the Secretary of State to be on a different footing. Newfoundland was in existence at the time of the signature of the Convention, and for the purposes of the Convention elected, whether deliberately or by default, to associate herself with Great Britain. The Irish Free State, on the other hand, has only come into existence since the signature of the Convention, and could under no circumstances have signed it separately.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 47.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 29th June, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that he has had under consideration your letter of the 22nd February,§ regarding the status of Newfoundland for the purposes of the International Convention for Aerial Navigation, 1919.

2. The first sentence of paragraph 2 of your letter raises a number of important questions, but the Secretary of State does not on the present occasion desire to discuss these, since it is admitted that the signature of the Convention by the representative of His Majesty's Government committed Newfoundland to acceptance of the Convention, subject to her eventual agreement to ratification.

3. The Secretary of State does not, however, understand the second sentence of paragraph 2, having regard to the provisions of the second paragraph of Article 1 of the Convention, which only includes with the Mother Country its "Colonies,"—an expression which cannot be construed as including Newfoundland.

* No. 22 in Dominions No. 87. † No. 18 in Dominions No. 87. ‡ See enclosure in No. 4. § No. 45.

4. As regards the third sentence of paragraph 2, it will be recollected that it was originally proposed that the Convention should include a "Colonial Article," by which the stipulations of the Convention would only have applied to the Dominions and Colonies, if notice of accession were given on their behalf, and similarly the Convention could have been terminated separately in respect of any of the Dominions and Colonies. In this connexion, I am to invite reference especially to your letters of the 18th February, 1919,* and of the 12th March, 1919,† This proposal was eventually abandoned in favour of the existing wording of the Convention, but it must be supposed that the intention of the wording actually adopted was the same as that of the proposed "Colonial Article," viz., that each of the Dominions should have an opportunity of considering the provisions of the Convention before becoming bound by it, and that any Dominion which had accepted the Convention should be free to withdraw separately later. The first of these objects was secured in the case of Newfoundland by the fact that the Newfoundland Government were consulted as to ratification, in accordance with the regular constitutional procedure. In order to secure the second object, it seems necessary to hold that Newfoundland, equally with the other Dominions, is a "State" under Article 40.

5. As regards the latter part of paragraph 3 of your letter, there are obvious limits to the principle of the separate status of the Dominions for the purposes of the Convention, which have already been discussed. Apart from the question of voting power, which is dealt with in Article 34 of the Convention, there are limits arising from the internal circumstances of the British Empire, e.g., in connexion with the application of Article 7. Consequently, the reference in Article 40 to the British Dominions must be construed with regard to those circumstances, and on such a point, the Secretary of State cannot regard the Secretary of the International Air Commission as possessing authority.

6. As has been indicated in previous correspondence, the matter would not be of great importance if only Newfoundland were affected, but the Secretary of State attaches importance to the question in view of its bearing on the position of the Irish Free State. It appeared to him that the end in view could most satisfactorily be secured if the expression "the British Dominions" in Article 40 could be interpreted as including all the self-governing Dominions existing at any given time. This interpretation does not appear to him to present any greater difficulty than that suggested in paragraph 4 of your letter, viz., that the expression included the four Dominions, whose representatives signed the Convention, and any others which might be created in future, but excluded a Dominion existing at the time of signature, merely because its representative did not sign the Convention separately.

7. In this connexion, it will be observed that the expression "the British Dominions" used in Article 40 of the Convention is that used in Article 296 (e) of the Treaty of Versailles, dealing with the establishment of Clearing Offices for the settlement of enemy debts (where also the Colonies and Protectorates are grouped with the Mother Country). No doubt has hitherto been raised as to the inclusion of Newfoundland among the British Dominions for this purpose, and in actual fact notice was given to Germany under Article 296 (e) of the desire of the Newfoundland Government to adopt the Clearing Office system (vide your letter of the 25th February, 1920†), and Newfoundland has since been regarded as being on the same footing as the other Dominions which adopted the system.

8. It will also be recollected that it has been held that, for the purposes of the Labour Clauses of the Treaty of Versailles, the position of Newfoundland is not assimilated either to that of the Mother Country or to that of the Colonies, and that, although Newfoundland is not separately represented in the International Labour Organization, the requirements of the Treaty are satisfied if draft Labour Conventions and Recommendations are merely communicated to the Newfoundland Government for such action as they think fit. In this connexion, I am to invite

No. 47.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 48.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 25th July, 1923.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th ultimo‡ regarding the present position of Newfoundland, and the future position of the Irish Free State, under the International Convention for Aerial Navigation, 1919, and to offer the following observations thereon:—

Paragraph 3.—The word "colonies" in Article 1 of the Convention is used in its wider sense, i.e., colonial possessions generally. This is the sense usually attributed to it in international usage, and there would be considerable difficulty in obtaining acceptance of the narrower, more technical, interpretation by the other signatories, who regard the distinctions in status between different parts of the British Empire as a matter of domestic rather than international concern.

Paragraph 4.—While it is true that the inclusion in the Convention of a "colonial clause," such as was at one time contemplated, would have provided for the separate withdrawal of any colonial territory which had acceded, it is doubtful whether this privilege can be claimed under the wording of the Convention as signed. However that may be, it would not appear to affect the question of Newfoundland's right, or otherwise, to a separate seat on the International Commission for Air Navigation, which was the point of departure of the present discussion, and of which the sole test is the interpretation of the word "Dominions" as used in Article 34 and other articles of the Convention.

Paragraph 5.—The Secretary of State does not altogether follow the argument, but in any case he agrees that the Secretary of the International Air Commission is not an authority qualified to interpret the Convention. The fact of his having taken the step referred to was mentioned merely to show that the Secretary of State is not alone in his view of the point under discussion.

Paragraph 6.—It appears far from certain that the interpretation of the expression "the British Dominions" suggested in your letter could be upheld with any prospect of success. In the event of it becoming necessary to appeal to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the decision would in all probability be that the word "Dominions," wherever it occurs in the Convention, must be taken to refer to those Dominions which are specifically mentioned in the instrument itself.

Paragraph 7.—As the notification made to the German Government applied to all parts of the Empire, to the exclusion only of certain stated exceptions, the precise category under which Newfoundland was classified was not material to the German Government, who in any event were not likely to challenge it. The fact that they did not do so affords no guide as regards a case where numerous other Powers are concerned, some at least of whom might be expected to resist what rightly or wrongly they would regard as an attempt to claim for the British Empire advantages in excess of those to which it is legally entitled.

Paragraph 8.—The argument advanced appears to weaken rather than to strengthen the theory upheld by your Department. The fact that Newfoundland is not separately represented on the International Labour Organization seems if anything to indicate a position of inferiority as compared with the Dominions which are independent members of the Organization, and have assumed obligations on their own account under the labour clauses of the Treaty of Versailles.

* No. 133 in Dominions No. 87.

† No. 121 in Dominions No. 81.

‡ No. 46.

2. The above observations are not intended to be an exhaustive reply to the arguments set out in your letter, so much as a cursory indication of their vulnerability. The whole discussion seems somewhat purposeless since the Government of Newfoundland have not themselves raised the question, and the interest of the Secretary of State for the Colonies is in the main confined to the bearing on the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Convention. Lord Curzon has already expressed his opinion that the Free State is on a different footing from Newfoundland, and he still thinks that the best prospect of obtaining for the former a position in relation to the Convention equal to that of the signatory Dominions, would be on the ground that the Free State was not in being at the time of the signature of the Convention, that it has since come into existence with the status of a fully self-governing Dominion, and that it should therefore both assume the same obligations and enjoy the same privileges as the original signatory Dominions.

3. His Lordship fears, however, that such a claim will be seriously compromised by the failure of the Free State to sign the protocol amending Article 5 of the Convention, a matter which is dealt with separately in your letter of the 13th instant.* Such failure would either constitute in itself an admission that the Irish Free State has no separate position for the purposes of the Convention; or conversely, supposing such a contention could be successfully refuted, would have the effect of invalidating the amendment, since any modification of the articles of the Convention, before it can become effective, must be formally adopted by all the parties to the instrument (Article 34).

4. Lord Curzon is not aware of the grounds of the Duke of Devonshire's objection to inviting the Irish Free State to sign the protocol. In the absence, however, of some overwhelming reason, he would strongly urge His Grace to reconsider his decision in the interest itself of the Free State's position in relation not only to this Convention but to all other international instruments in the same category, for which it would constitute a precedent. On the other hand, the acceptance unchallenged of the Free State's separate signature of the protocol (whether it appoints its own special representative or delegates His Majesty's Representative in Paris is immaterial) would furnish a strong argument in its favour when the time comes to press its claim for rights equal to those of the original signatories. If such a step were not to pass unchallenged, nothing would be lost, since the question must be threshed out sooner or later.

5. The matter is one of considerable urgency as, for several reasons which need not here be discussed, it is desirable to proceed as soon as possible with the ratification of the protocol. As matters at present stand, the King's ratification would have to be drawn without specific mention of the Irish Free State which could then only be covered by it generically as part of the British Empire in the same way as it was covered by the original signature of the Convention by His Majesty's Government.

I am, &c.,
R. H. CAMPBELL.

SIR,

Downing Street, 20th August, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th July† regarding the position of Newfoundland and the Irish Free State in relation to the International Aerial Navigation Convention of 1919.

2. The Secretary of State is not wholly convinced by the arguments set forth in your letter, but he does not think it necessary to pursue the discussion of the matter as it has been agreed semi-officially that action might be deferred, as regards Newfoundland, indefinitely and, as regards the Irish Free State, until the Irish Free State has become a separate Member of the League of Nations.

* 23672: not printed; this intimated that, as the Protocol provided for a relaxation of the provisions of the Convention and imposed no obligations, it was not considered necessary formally to consult the Irish Free State Government as to signature on behalf of the Free State.

3. Meanwhile, the Secretary of State would suggest that steps should be taken forthwith for His Majesty's ratification of the Protocol amending Article 5 of the Convention, without raising any question of the separate signature of the Protocol on behalf of the Irish Free State.

(Secret.)

MY LORD, Downing Street, 1st February, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to refer to my telegram of the 8th January,† in which I informed you that the Law Officers of the Crown have now advised that the transfer of the administration of the Ross Sea area could not be effected by the issue of Letters Patent.

The opinion of the Law Officers is that discovery offers an inchoate title which is perfected by occupation or by acts of ownership exercised over a long period and acquiesced in by other Powers. It follows that it would be unwise to proceed by way of annexation in the Antarctic, and that His Majesty's Government is right to assert existing British sovereignty in the region in question. If this course is adopted, in their opinion it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the territories in question are "British possessions" which have not been acquired by cession or by conquest, and therefore that they are "British Settlements" within the British Settlements Act, 1887.

But in their opinion it is possible to confer upon you the powers proposed in the draft Letters Patent, printed in the Secret Memorandum of March, 1921.‡ This, however, can only be done by Order in Council, and not by way of Letters Patent.

If an Order in Council is made on the lines of the draft Letters Patent it does not, in their opinion, involve any alteration of the boundaries of the Dominion of New Zealand. There is nothing unconstitutional in entrusting such powers to the Governor-General of a British Dominion without incorporating the territory for which the powers are to be exercised in that Dominion provided that the consent of the Dominion Ministry is first obtained. It would, therefore, be unnecessary to proceed under the Colonial Boundaries Act of 1895.

I have accordingly caused a draft Order to be prepared, a copy of which is enclosed herewith, for the consideration of your Ministers. I regret that the memorandum prepared in this Office was incorrect as to the form of instrument required, but it does not appear that any practical inconvenience results from the substitution of an Order in Council for Letters Patent.

DRAFT ORDER IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS by the British Settlement Act, 1887, it is, amongst other things, enacted that it shall be lawful for His Majesty in Council from time to time to establish all such laws and institutions and constitute such courts and officers as may appear to His Majesty in Council to be necessary for the peace, order and good government of His Majesty's subjects and others within any British settlement:

And Whereas the coasts of the Ross Sea, with the islands and territories adjacent thereto, between the 160th degree of East Longitude and the 150th degree of West Longitude, which are situated south of the 60th degree of South Latitude, are a British settlement within the meaning of the said Act:

And Whereas, it is expedient that provision should be made for the government thereof:

Now, Therefore, His Majesty, by virtue and in exercise of the powers by the said Act, or otherwise, in His Majesty vested, is pleased, by and with the advice of His Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:—

I. From and after the publication of this Order in the Government Gazette of the Dominion of New Zealand that part of His Majesty's Dominions in the Antarctic seas, which comprises all the islands and territories between the 160th degree of East Longitude and the 150th degree of West Longitude, which are situated south of the 60th degree of South Latitude shall be named the Ross Dependency.

II. From and after such publication as aforesaid, the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of New Zealand for the time being (hereinafter called the Governor) shall be the Governor of the Ross Dependency; and all the powers and authorities which by this Order are given and granted to the Governor for the time being of the Ross Dependency are hereby vested in him.

III. In the event of the death or incapacity of the said Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of New Zealand, or in the event of his absence from the said Dominion, the Officer for the time being administering the government of the Dominion shall be Governor for the time being of the Ross Dependency.

IV. The said Governor is further authorized and empowered to make all such Rules and Regulations as may lawfully be made by His Majesty's authority for the peace, order and good government of the said Dependency, subject, nevertheless, to any instructions which he may from time to time receive from His Majesty or through a Secretary of State.

V. The Governor is authorized to make and execute, on His Majesty's behalf, grants and dispositions of any lands which may lawfully be granted or disposed of by His Majesty within the said Dependency, in conformity with such Rules and Regulations as may from time to time be in force in the Dependency.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

WITH reference to my despatch [Dominions No. 81 of the 10th of March,*] [No. 165 of the 24th of March,†] I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that an Agreement for the renewal for five years from the 4th of June, 1923, of the Arbitration Convention with the United States of America of the 4th of April, 1908, was signed by His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington on the 23rd of June.

Enclosure 1 in No. 63.

EXCELLENCY,

Department of State, Washington, 23rd June, 1923.

In connexion with the signing to-day of an agreement for the renewal of the Convention of Arbitration concluded between the United States and Great Britain, 4th April, 1908, and renewed from time to time, I have the honour, in pursuance of our informal conversations, to state the following understanding which I shall be glad to have you confirm on behalf of your Government.

On 24th February last, the President proposed to the Senate that it consent under certain stated conditions to the adhesion by the United States to the Protocol of 16th December, 1920, under which the Permanent Court of International Justice has been created at the Hague. As the Senate does not convene in its regular session until December next, action upon this proposal will necessarily be delayed. In the event that the Senate gives its assent to the proposal, I understand that the British Government will not be averse to considering a modification of the Convention of Arbitration which we are renewing, or the making of a separate agreement providing for the reference of disputes mentioned in the Convention to the Permanent Court of International Justice.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

The Right Honourable

Sir Auckland Geddes, G.C.M.G., K.C.B.,
Ambassador of Great Britain.

Enclosure 2 in No. 63.

(No. 523.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 23rd June, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your note of to-day's date in which you were so good as to inform me, in connexion with the renewal of the Arbitration Convention of 4th April, 1908, between Great Britain and the United States, that the President of the United States had proposed to the Senate the adherence of the United States, under certain conditions, to the Protocol of 16th December, 1920, creating the Permanent Court of International Justice at the Hague, and that, if the Senate assents to this proposal, you understand that His Britannic Majesty's Government would be prepared to consider the conclusion of an agreement providing for the reference to the Permanent Court of International Justice of disputes mentioned in the Convention.

Under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, I have the honour to confirm your understanding of His Majesty's Government's attitude on this point, and to state that, if the Senate approve the President's proposal, His Majesty's Government will be prepared to consider with the United States Government the conclusion of an agreement for the reference to the Permanent Court of International Justice of disputes mentioned in the Arbitration Convention.

I have, &c.,

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 579.)

SIR,
Downing Street, 26th September, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a Note† from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Argentine Republic to His Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires relative to the adhesion of the Republic to the Arms Traffic Convention and Protocol of the 10th September, 1919.

2. The Convention is printed in Treaty Series paper No. 12 (1919), copies of which are enclosed. It was signed on behalf of the British Empire, but has not been ratified by His Majesty the King, the position in this respect being as follows. In 1921, the representative of His Majesty's Government at the League of Nations was authorized to state that His Majesty's Government would proceed to ratification as soon as the other Principal Allied and Associated Powers were prepared to ratify, subject to safeguards being provided against the Convention being rendered nugatory by non-signatory States, e.g., the Soviet Government. The Governments of the Dominion Members of the League expressed concurrence in this view. In August, 1922, a memorandum was received from the United States Government

* No. 55.

† Not printed: it notified the adhesion of the Government of the Argentine Republic, subject to the approval of Congress.

intimating that they felt themselves unable to ratify the Convention. A copy of this memorandum is enclosed.* The Third Assembly of the League in 1922 considered the matter and adopted the following resolution:—

"The Assembly considers it highly desirable that the Government of the United States should express the objections which it has to formulate to the provisions of the Convention of St. Germain as well as any proposals which it may care to make as to the way in which these objections can be overcome."

Accordingly a letter was addressed to the United States Government by the President of the Council on the 3rd May, 1923. A copy of this letter is enclosed. It is understood that no reply has yet been received.

3. The following foreign States have ratified the Convention, the ratifications being deposited in Paris on the dates given:—

China, 2nd October, 1920.

Greece, 24th August, 1920.

Portugal, 17th July, 1922.

Siam, 30th March, 1921.

4. The following States (in addition to the Argentine Republic) have acceded to the Convention:—

Brazil, 22nd December, 1919.

Bulgaria, 13th September, 1921.

Chile, 5th August, 1920.

Finland, 30th June, 1921.

Enclosure 4 in No. 66.

SIR,

Geneva, 3rd May, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that the Council of the League of Nations at its meeting of the 21st April adopted the following resolution:—

"The Council on the proposal of the Temporary Mixed Commission for the Reduction of Armaments, requests its President to ascertain whether the Government of the United States would be disposed to state its views as to the manner in which it would be willing to co-operate with other Governments in the control both of the traffic in arms and the private manufacture of arms."

You are perhaps aware that both the questions of the private manufacture of arms, and that of the international control of the arms traffic have engaged the continuous attention of the Assembly and the Council of the League.

The Convention of Saint-Germain was framed, as you will recall from the records of the American Peace Commission which co-operated in its drafting, with a view to an adequate solution of the Arms Traffic question on a world-wide basis. As it is obvious that this Convention could not fulfil its aim unless ratified by all the manufacturing Powers, the Assembly and the Council, when they first took up the question in 1920, directed their efforts towards this end, and an inquiry was accordingly conducted by the Secretary-General.

The Temporary Mixed Commission, in the report which it submitted to the Assembly on 7th September, 1922, summed up the results of this inquiry in the following terms:—

"The following States have ratified or adhered to the Convention:—

Brazil.

Guatemala.

Chile.

Haiti.

China.

Peru.

Finland.

Siam.

Greece.

Venezuela.

Great Britain, as well as Spain, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa, are prepared to ratify the Convention as soon as all the other principal Powers are willing to do so.

* Sub-enclosure in No. 47 in Dominions No. 87.

France has announced that the President of the Republic has been authorized by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate to ratify the Convention, and that ratification will be carried out as soon as the principal Signatory Powers shall themselves have taken steps to ratify the Convention.

Italy has expressed her readiness to ratify the Convention as soon as it has been approved by Parliament, and Japan has promised to ratify it with as little delay as possible after its ratification by the other Powers.

A certain number of States, such as Denmark, India, Sweden and Norway, make their ratification conditional on that of all the Signatory Powers, whereas Roumania, Luxemburg, Colombia, Uruguay and Persia declare their willingness to adhere to the Convention.

It will be seen from this statement that the principal Powers which have replied to the inquiry make their ratification depend on that of the other principal Signatory Powers. This reservation would seem to refer especially to the United States of America, which are signatory to the Convention and which had not, up to the present, replied to the invitation addressed to them.

In reply to the Note addressed to the United States on 21st November, 1921, you were good enough to inform the Secretary-General, on 28th July, 1922, that 'while the Government of the United States was in cordial sympathy with efforts to restrict traffic in arms and munitions of war, it found itself unable to approve the provisions of the Convention, and to give any assurance of its ratification.'

The Third Assembly which met shortly afterwards, in September, had therefore to consider the situation thus created.

The Third Committee of the Assembly, referring to this reply, expressed the following opinion:—

"This reply puts an end to the hopes that the Convention of Saint-Germain in its present form would receive general acceptance.

As has already been said, it is most desirable that some Treaty should be universally accepted for the control of the international trade in arms, and that all civilized countries should co-operate in a common policy of regulation.

Whether that can be done, however, depends on the attitude of the United States of America. It is important, therefore, that the Members of the League should endeavour in every way to meet the views of the United States Government, and to secure their co-operation in a common policy."

In the meantime, the work carried out by the Permanent Advisory Commission on Military, Naval and Air questions, and by the Temporary Mixed Commission for the Reduction of Armaments, had led these bodies to the conclusion that the two problems of the private manufacture of arms and the international control of the arms traffic were too closely connected to be dealt with separately, and that the solution of both had to be sought at the same time and by the same methods. The Third Assembly therefore adopted the following resolutions:—

"The Assembly, having noted the proposal of the Temporary Mixed Commission for an international agreement for the control of the manufacture of arms by private companies, urges on the Council to consider the advisability of summoning at an appropriate moment a conference of the Members of the League to embody this agreement in the form of a Convention. The Assembly is further of the opinion that States not Members of the League should be invited to participate in this conference, and to co-operate in the policy on which it may agree.

The Assembly considers it highly desirable that the Government of the United States should express the objections which it has to formulate to the provisions of the Convention of Saint-Germain as well as any proposals which it may care to make as to the way in which these objections can be overcome."

Since these resolutions were taken, the Council and the Temporary Mixed Commission have given their attention to this matter with the result that the Council passed at its last session the resolution quoted at the beginning of this letter. In virtue of this resolution, I have the honour to ask you whether the United States Government would be ready to inform the Members of the League of Nations as to the general lines on which it would be willing to co-operate in an attempt to solve on a universal and permanent basis the two problems of the private manufacture of arms and the international control of the arms traffic.

In order to enable you to form an accurate opinion of the scope and nature of the work carried out on this subject by the organs of the League, I beg to enclose the report of the Temporary Mixed Commission to the Council and that of the Third Committee to the last Assembly, in each of which two chapters are devoted to these questions.

I have, &c.,

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

For the Press.

27th September, 1923.

In making public the text of the communication to the League of Nations with regard to the Arms Traffic Convention, it was pointed out that the refusal to ratify the Convention for the reasons therein stated did not indicate that this Government was less anxious than other Powers suitably to control the traffic in arms. Quite the contrary is the case as is shown by the action of the Executive under existing legislation and by the policy which has actually been adopted in taking the measures for the proper restraint of this traffic which lay within the authority of the executive departments of the Government.

In a letter from the late President to the Secretary of War, dated 23rd April, which was made public on 24th April, Mr. Harding stated:—

" I hope it will be the policy of the War Department not only to make no sales of war equipment to any foreign Power, but that you will go further and make certain that public sales to our own citizens will be attended by proper guarantees that such supplies are not to be transferred to any foreign Power. I would gladly waive aside any financial advantage that might attend such sales to make sure that none of our surplus equipment is employed in encouraging warfare in any place in the world. I am writing a similar Note to the Secretary of the Navy, and shall confidently expect the co-operation of both Departments in adhering to this policy."

The Executive branch of the Government is not in a position to intervene in transactions which are wholly within the law; but not desiring to encourage other Powers to arm themselves for conflict, which is deemed contrary to the spirit of the country, this Government, in addition to adopting a strict policy with regard to the sale of surplus Government army stores, has replied to the recent inquiries which it has received that it does not encourage the shipment of war material to the troubled areas of the world. This stand has been taken although this Government was not unmindful of the fact that intending purchasers would no doubt resort to other markets to supply their wants. It may also be added that, under present conditions, the Department would not favour the flotation of a foreign loan in this country for which the proceeds would be utilized for armament.

The objections made by this Government to the ratification of the Convention of Saint-Germain dealt with matters which were believed to be fundamental, and which did not lend themselves to suggestions of modifications which would be consistent with the structure of the Convention.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

For the Press.

Traffic in Arms.

27th September, 1923.

The Department, under date of 12th September, 1923, instructed the American Minister at Berne, Switzerland, to transmit informally to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, the following communication:

"The Secretary of State of the United States of America has given most careful study to the communication from the Acting President of the Council of the League of Nations dated 1st May, 1923, asking the views of the United States regarding the control of the traffic and private manufacture of arms set forth in the Convention of Saint-Germain, and to inform you that the Government of the United States is in cordial sympathy with efforts suitably to restrict traffic in arms and munitions of war."

"As evidence of its interest in the matter, it may be recalled that by a joint resolution approved 22nd April, 1898, as amended 12th March, 1912, the following provision was made with respect to the regulation of the shipment of arms from the United States. 'That whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress.'

"By a resolution approved 31st January, 1922, this provision of law was extended so as to include any country in which the United States exercises extra territorial jurisdiction. It is also the policy of the Government to restrict the sale of Government supplies of arms and munitions.

"After a careful examination of the terms of the Convention, it has been decided that the objections found thereto render impossible ratification by this Government.

"While the application of the Convention to certain designated areas or zones, extending in effect the Brussels Convention, may fulfil a useful object, the plan of the present Convention is much broader. The distinctive feature of this plan is not a provision for a general limitation of armament, but the creation of a system of control by the signatory Powers of the traffic in arms and munitions, these signatory Powers being left free not only to meet their own requirements in the territories subject to their jurisdiction, but also to provide for supplying each other with arms and munitions to the full extent that they may see fit.

"There is particular objection to the provisions by which the contracting parties would be prohibited from selling arms and munitions to States not parties to the Convention. By such provisions, this Government would be required to prevent shipments of military supplies to such Latin American countries as have not signed or adhered to the Convention, however desirable it might be to permit such shipments, merely because they are not signatory Powers and might not desire to adhere to the Convention.

"It should be observed also that the acceptance by the United States of an agreement of the nature and scope of the Convention of Saint Germain would call for the enactment of legislation to make it operative, and particularly for the imposition of penalties applicable to private arms-producing concerns as a means of establishing an effective control. This Government is not in a position to undertake to obtain the enactment of such legislation.

"Finally, it may be observed that the provisions of the Convention relating to the League of Nations are so intertwined with the whole Convention as to make it impracticable for this Government to ratify, in view of the fact that it is not a member of the League of Nations."

With regard to question 5, my Ministers would be glad if the Danish Minister could be informed that no commercial treaties have recently been concluded affecting the relations of Australia with foreign countries, but that the undermentioned commercial arrangements have been entered into with other British Dominions:—

(a) An agreement between South Africa and Australia for preferential treatment of importations was concluded in 1906 and is still in force. A copy of the Commonwealth Customs Tariff (South African Preference) Act, No. 17 of 1906, is forwarded herewith.

(b) A reciprocal tariff agreement between New Zealand and Australia which came into force on 1st September last. A copy of the Commonwealth Customs Tariff (New Zealand Preference) Act, No. 3 of 1922, is enclosed.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 17th January, 1923.

WITH reference to Count Ahlefeldt-Laurvig's Note of the 12th May last (No. 160/64.D.1) inquiring as to the position of the self-governing Dominions in respect of certain commercial treaties, I have the honour to inform you that the questions asked in paragraph 2 of that Note may be answered as follows:—

(1) and (2). The Governments of Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Mexico, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland agreed to the proposal made by His Majesty's Government in 1911 as regards the right of the self-governing Dominions to withdraw from existing commercial treaties. The Commonwealth of Australia—including Papua and Norfolk Island—has taken advantage of the agreement and has withdrawn from the commercial treaties with all the above-mentioned States and the Union of South Africa has withdrawn from the treaty with Mexico.

(3) No foreign countries have in virtue of these agreements denounced their treaties with respect to any of the Oversea Dominions.

(4) It is presumed that this question refers only to obligations under commercial treaties, of which those with the Argentine Republic, 1825; Italy, 1883 (save as regards South Australia); Morocco, 1856; Peru, 1850; Venezuela, 1825; and Muscat, 1891 (renewable annually), are at present in force in respect of the Commonwealth of Australia.

(5) No commercial treaties have recently been concluded affecting the relations of Australia with foreign countries. The following commercial arrangements have been entered into with other British Dominions:—

(a) An agreement between South Africa and Australia for preferential treatment of importations was concluded in 1906 and is still in force.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 28th April, 1923.

As [Your Excellency's] [Your Royal Highness's] [your] Ministers are aware, under Part X, Section I, of the Treaty of St. Germain-en-Laye, Austria undertook to accord to the Allied and Associated Powers most-favoured-nation treatment in various matters, but, under Article 232, an Allied or Associated Power cannot, unless the League of Nations decides otherwise, require the fulfilment of these obligations by Austria after the expiration of three years from the coming into force of the Treaty (i.e., after the 16th July, 1923), unless that Power accords correlative treatment to Austria.

2. Accordingly, a draft Treaty* (of which a copy is enclosed) has been prepared by His Majesty's Government, and sent to the Austrian Chargé d'Affaires for communication to the Austrian Government.

3. The draft Treaty grants national and/or most-favoured-nation treatment in matters dealt with in the Treaty to the subjects, goods, etc., of the one party in the territories of the other. In the United Kingdom, however, there are still in force restrictions upon nationals of ex-enemy States in regard to employment in certain trades and professions. It is not possible for His Majesty's Government to concede that Austria should enjoy, under the provisions of the new Treaty, rights or privileges in derogation of the restrictions regarding ex-enemy nationals generally referred to above. To secure this general reservation, they have prepared a draft Declaration to be signed at the same time as the Treaty, rather than endeavour to insert reservations in the text of the Treaty itself. A copy of the draft Declaration is enclosed.

4. In the case of the Dominions and Colonies in which legislation against ex-enemy aliens is still in force, it will presumably be necessary, should they desire to become parties to the Treaty, for some similar Declaration to be prepared and signed reserving from the rights conferred by the Treaty the special restrictions imposed by the legislation in question. The Austrian Chargé d'Affaires has been asked to draw the attention of his Government to this possibility.

Enclosure in No. 70.

SUBSTANTIVE PORTION OF DECLARATION TO BE SIGNED SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH AUSTRIAN TREATY.

It is understood that nothing in the Treaty signed this day can be invoked by Austria to support a claim for exemption from the following disabilities to which Austrian nationals (in common with the nationals of other Powers with which His Britannic Majesty was at war) are subject by Acts of Parliament of the United Kingdom, so long as those Acts remain in force; namely:—

(a) No Austrian national may be employed or act as master, officer or member of the crew of a British ship registered in the United Kingdom (Alien Restriction Amendment Act, 1919).

(b) For a period of five years from 31st August, 1921, no business connected with certain non-ferrous metals and metallic ores may be carried on in the United Kingdom by, or under the influence or control of, an Austrian national, except under licence of the Board of Trade, in accordance with the Non-Ferrous Metal Industry Act, 1918.

(c) For a period of five years from 31st August, 1921, and thereafter until Parliament may otherwise determine, no banking business may be carried on in the United Kingdom for the benefit or under the control of an Austrian national (Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1918).

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 72.]

(No. 281.)

SIR, Downing Street, 14th May, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to invite the attention of your Ministers to the provisions of the Treaty of Peace with Austria, signed at St. Germain-en-Laye, on the 10th September, 1919.

2. Under Part X, Section I of that Treaty, Austria undertook . . . [The rest of paragraph 2 and paragraphs 3 and 4 are identical with paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of No. 70.]

5. The Declaration relates to legislation in force in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Where other portions of the British Empire become parties to the Treaty in accordance with Article XXIII, they will obviously not accede to the Declaration, nor will their Treaty relations with Austria be in any way affected by it. This, of course, applies to the Irish Free State. But your Ministers will appreciate that while the Acts referred to in the Declaration are Acts of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, they are not included in the Schedule to the Irish Free State (Adaptation of Enactments) Order, 1923, and therefore in them the term "United Kingdom" is to be construed in this country as meaning Great Britain and Northern Ireland only. Seeing, however, that the Acts referred to were passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom before the coming into operation of the Constitution of the Irish Free State, and that, under Article 73 of that Constitution, they will remain in force in the Irish Free State until repealed by the Irish Free State Legislature, it will presumably be necessary, should the Free State Government desire to become a party to the proposed Treaty, to arrange for a similar Declaration to be signed and agreed to by Austria in order to ensure that the Austrian Government cannot claim in the Irish Free State under any of the provisions of the Treaty, rights or privileges in derogation of the Acts referred to, if at the date at which the Irish Free State becomes a party to the Treaty, these Acts have not been repealed by the Free State Legislature.

6. The Austrian Chargé d'Affaires has been asked to call the attention of his Government to the possible necessity of such Declarations being made in the case both of the Irish Free State and of the other self-governing Dominions.

2. Goods produced or manufactured in Austria are accorded in the Irish Free State treatment as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country, and, accordingly, my Ministers are of the opinion that, under the terms of Article XXIII of the proposed Treaty, the most important advantages conferred by the Treaty so far as the Irish Free State is concerned are secured, even though the Free State does not bind itself to the Treaty.

3. In the circumstances mentioned in the preceding paragraph the Government of the Irish Free State does not propose to become a party to the proposed Treaty, at least for the present.

WITH reference to your despatch Dominions No. 147 of the 28th April,† I have the honour to inform Your Grace that my Ministers advise me that the New Zealand Government does not at present think it desirable to adhere to the proposed Commercial Treaty, firstly on account of the existence of the Undesirable Immigrants Exclusion Act, 1919, and secondly, because of the necessity under existing laws of imposing depreciated currency duties upon goods from Austria which might prejudicially affect industries established in New Zealand or in other British Dominions.

2. A further reason for non-adhesion is that, if a special treaty or tariff agreement were later arranged with any of the Allies of Great Britain during the recent War, similar terms would have to be granted to Austria.

MY LORD MARQUESS,

London, 8th September, 1923.

IN connexion with the pending negotiations for the Commercial Treaty which is to be concluded between Great Britain and Austria, I have the honour to submit to Your Lordship a précis received from the Austrian Federal Chancery, Foreign Affairs Department, concerning the application of certain clauses of the Treaty-to-be to India and the Dominions.

I should feel very grateful if a reply could be obtained on this matter at Your Lordship's earliest consideration, as the Austrian Government is most anxious to be enlightened on this matter as soon as possible

I have, &c.,

A. KUNZ,

Chargé d'Affaires.

The Most Honourable

The Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E.,

His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

"Article 23 of the draft for a commercial treaty between the United Kingdom and Austria transmitted by His Britannic Majesty's Government states that the stipulations of this Treaty shall not be applicable to India or any Dominions, Colonies, etc., unless special notice is given to this effect. complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment so long as goods produced or manufactured in Austria are accorded in India or such self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate treatment as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country.

This clause has been interpreted by the Federal Government as stipulating reciprocity of treatment of the mutual imports on the most-favoured-nation basis, though the rest of the stipulations of the Treaty be not applicable in the relations between the British Colonies and Austria. According to this interpretation, the second paragraph of Article 23 of the draft would assure to Austrian goods in Dominions having an intermediate tariff between the general tariff and the preferential tariff for British products the application of this intermediate tariff as long as Austria continues to apply to imports from the said Dominions the most favourable tariffs accorded to the products of any other country.

The Federal Government would be greatly obliged to His Britannic Majesty's Government for any information whether this interpretation of the said clause is correct."

Enclosure 2 in No. 75.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 1st November, 1923.

WITH reference to Monsieur Kunz's note of the 8th September last, relative to the draft Anglo-Austrian Commercial Treaty, I have the honour to inform you that the memorandum enclosed therein does not appear to be a correct representation of the effect of Article XXIII of the Treaty in its present form.

2. The second paragraph of this Article is not intended to impose upon India or upon any Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate, in respect of which notice has not been given under the first paragraph of the Article, any obligation as regards the tariff treatment of goods produced or manufactured in Austria; the intention is to stipulate that, if India or any Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate does in fact accord to goods produced or manufactured in Austria treatment as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country, Austria shall accord most-favoured-nation treatment to goods produced or manufactured in India or in any such Dominion, Colony, Possession, or Protectorate.

3. I would point out that a provision on the lines of this paragraph is to be found in a considerable number of Treaties of Commerce and Navigation which have been concluded by Great Britain with other foreign countries.

No. 76.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR.

(No. 49.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 14th November, 1923.

As your Ministers will be aware, under Part X, Section 1 of the Treaty of St. Germain-en-Laye, Austria undertook to accord to the Allied and Associated Powers most-favoured-nation treatment in various matters, but under Article 232 an Allied or Associated Power cannot, unless the League of Nations decides otherwise, require the fulfilment of these obligations by Austria after the expiration of three years from the coming into force of the Treaty (i.e., after the 16th of July, 1923), unless that Power accords correlative treatment to Austria.

2. Accordingly, a draft Treaty* (of which a copy is enclosed) was prepared by His Majesty's Government, and sent to the Austrian Chargé d'Affaires for communication to the Austrian Government.

3. The draft Treaty grants national and/or most-favoured-nation treatment in matters dealt with in the Treaty to the subjects, goods, etc., of the one party in the territories of the other. In the United Kingdom, however, there are still in force restrictions upon nationals of ex-enemy States in regard to employment in certain trades and professions. It is not possible for His Majesty's Government to concede that Austria should enjoy, under the provisions of the new Treaty, rights or privileges in derogation of the restrictions regarding ex-enemy nationals generally referred to above. To secure this general reservation, they prepared a draft Declaration to be signed at the same time as the Treaty, rather than endeavour to insert reservations in the text of the Treaty itself. A copy of the draft Declaration† is enclosed.

3. In the case of the Dominions and Colonies in which legislation against ex-enemy aliens is still in force, it will presumably be necessary, should they desire to become parties to the Treaty, for some similar Declaration to be prepared and signed reserving from the rights conferred by the Treaty the special restrictions imposed by the legislation in question. The Austrian Chargé d'Affaires was asked to draw the attention of his Government to this possibility.

No. 77.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 6th March, 1923.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1., 5th March, 1923.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to transmit to you herewith, for the consideration of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, a copy of a letter from the Board of Trade, enclosing a letter from the Treasury dated 22nd February, relative to a proposed commercial agreement with Brazil.

2. Dissatisfaction has existed among British exporters for some time past owing to the fact that, in the case of a certain number of articles imported into Brazil, the Customs duties leviable on products of the United States (and recently also on those of Belgium) are levied at a lower rate than those on similar British products.

3. While, however, the Secretary of State attaches considerable importance to the removal of this grievance, he is sensible of the fact that some of the products of Brazil, which it is now proposed should be admitted free into the United Kingdom for a period of three years, are also produced within the Empire, and that consequently there is a possibility of the extension to these articles of the principle of Imperial Preference, or a development of such preference as already exists, within the period specified.

4. The Secretary of State would, therefore, be glad to be informed whether the Duke of Devonshire considers that His Majesty's Ambassador at Rio de Janeiro may be instructed to approach the Brazilian Government in the sense recommended by the Board of Trade with a reasonable certainty that this course will not seriously prejudice the position of the United Kingdom vis-à-vis the Dominions and Colonies on the question of Imperial Preference.

5. As the subject of the Brazilian tariffs is at present under revision by a committee in Brazil, the Secretary of State would be glad to receive an early reply.

6. Copies of this letter are being sent to the Board of Trade and Treasury.

I have, &c.,

Board of Trade (Commercial Relations and Treaties Department),
Great George Street, London, S.W.1.

SIR,

27th February, 1923.

WITH reference to the letter addressed to you from this Department on 13th February, on the subject of a proposed Commercial Treaty with Brazil, I am directed by the Board of Trade to forward to you, for the information of the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, copy of a letter which they have received from the Treasury.

I am to suggest that, should Lord Curzon see no objection, the substance of the Treasury letter should be telegraphed to His Majesty's Ambassador at Rio de Janeiro with the information that the articles to which His Majesty's Government are prepared to give a guarantee of freedom from duty account for one-half of the imports from Brazil into this country, and that he should be instructed to sound the Brazilian Government as to the prospects of concluding a Commercial Treaty on these terms. Should the Brazilian Government receive the proposal favourably, I am to suggest that, having regard to the fact that a full Commercial Treaty would take a considerable time to negotiate, Sir John Tilley should endeavour to arrange an Exchange of Notes on which the substantive portion might be on the following lines:—

The respective Governments being desirous of extending the commercial relations of the two countries and of entering into a Treaty for that purpose, it is agreed that pending the conclusion of such a Treaty and in any case for a period of three years from the date of the Exchange of Notes, Brazilian products and manufactures shall enjoy in the United Kingdom and the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom shall enjoy in Brazil, complete most-favoured-nation treatment in all matters relating to Customs, and that the following articles, the produce of Brazil, are and shall continue, during the period in question, free of all Customs duty on importation into the United Kingdom, namely: Brazil nuts, lard, meat, raw cotton, hides, raw rubber and cotton-seed oil.

I am to suggest that Sir John Tilley should be instructed to report by telegraph the views of the Brazilian Government in order that the further consideration of the matter may be expedited.

The Under Secretary of State,
Foreign Office, S.W.1.

SIR,

Treasury Chambers, 22nd February, 1923.

I HAVE laid before the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury your letter of the 13th instant, relative to a proposed commercial agreement with Brazil, and in reply I am to request you to inform the Board of Trade that My Lords concur in the proposal that Brazil should be offered full most-favoured-nation treatment together with a guarantee that for a period of, say, three years no duties would be levied in this country on the following goods of Brazilian origin:—Brazil nuts, lard, meat, raw cotton, hides, raw rubber, and cotton-seed oil. It would, of course, be clearly understood that this offer would not involve extending the benefits of Imperial Preference to goods of Brazilian growth or produce.

My Lords regret, however, that they do not feel able to give any undertaking with regard to the dutiable articles mentioned in the last paragraph of the letter under reply.

I have, &c.,
O. E. NIEMEYER.

The Secretary, Board of Trade.

THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE to SIR P. LLOYD-GREAME.

[Answered by No. 79.]

MY DEAR LLOYD-GREAME,

Downing Street, 23rd March, 1923.

I SPOKE to you as to the bearing on the question of Imperial Preference of the proposal to arrange an exchange of notes with Brazil, under which, pending the conclusion of a definite Commercial Treaty and in any case for a period of three years, certain Brazilian products would be free of Customs duty on importation into the United Kingdom. The products in question include meat, lard, and hides, which are of interest to the Dominions, and raw rubber and cotton, which are of interest to the Colonies.

There are, of course, already several cases in which we are bound by Treaty engagements with foreign States either not to impose any import duties on specific articles or not to increase the duties on specific articles above a certain figure. I attach a note on these prepared in the Colonial Office.

In the case of Greek currants and Spanish wine and wine lees, brandy and raisins, the undertaking given was merely not to increase the duty above a certain figure and accordingly does not preclude the grant of Imperial Preference in respect of these articles and would not preclude an increase in the existing preference, though the possible increase is to a certain extent limited. In the case of the other articles (i.e., those which are promised free admission) the undertaking given precludes the grant of any preference at all. The Japanese Treaty dates back to 1911, and the only article affected by it, in which the Dominions and Colonies are interested to any extent, is copper. The list of articles which under the Spanish Treaty are to be admitted duty free, includes several of interest to the Dominions and Colonies (e.g., iron ore, oranges and bananas), but when that Treaty was being negotiated, the Colonial Office were given to understand that it was of paramount importance to British trade to secure the Treaty and that the only method of securing it was by giving Spain concessions in respect of these articles, so that it would not have been desirable to raise any question as to the possible effect of the concessions on Imperial Preference.

Since the Spanish Treaty was negotiated, the position has been somewhat changed by the proposal to summon an Imperial Economic Conference. The Prime Minister's telegram to the Dominion Prime Ministers of the 29th November, 1922* mentioned that the Conference might wish to survey certain aspects of the external commercial relations of the Empire. "For example, it (i.e., the Conference) might think well to consider the question of mutual co-operation amongst the various Governments to safeguard their economic interests in relation to foreign countries and any proposals for promoting international arrangements for the more equitable treatment of commerce." Mr. Bruce, the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia, in his telegram to the Prime Minister of the 24th February,† stated that "Commonwealth's position such that it will have to press for some further preference in return for substantial preference granted British goods," and in his telegram of the 5th March‡ (replying to a telegram§ recalling Mr. Bonar Law's announcement that this Parliament would not make any fundamental change in the fiscal system of this country), he again referred to his intention to raise the question of preference, though not in a manner to conflict with Mr. Bonar Law's pledges.

You will remember that last year the Commonwealth Government|| urged that Australian currants should be granted a preference of 1½d. a pound, and Australian raisins and other dried fruits a preference of 2d. a pound. It was pointed out in reply that this proposal was impracticable, both because it would involve a very large increase in the duty levied on an article of food largely consumed by the working classes, and because it would involve a large increase over the present general rate of preference and would lead to reactions on the British Exchequer, which in present financial circumstances could not be faced. This particular proposal has not been revived, but I understand that the representatives of the Australian dried fruit industry are making fresh suggestions.

The West Indian Colonies also have pressed for a guarantee of continuity in the case of the preference on sugar, and an increase in the rate. Mr. Churchill announced in the House of Commons on the 23rd February, 1922,¶ that His Majesty's

* No. 135 in Dominions No. 91. † No. 144 in Dominions No. 91. ‡ No. 149 in Dominions No. 91.

Government were prepared to give an undertaking (subject to the approval of Parliament) that the preference on goods at present entitled to preferential rates on importation into the United Kingdom should be continued for ten years, i.e., that the Customs duties on such goods, other than spirits, should bear to the duties on similar goods imported from foreign countries the proportions prescribed by the Second Schedule of the Finance Act, 1919, and that the Customs duties on spirits should be lower, by not less than 2s. 6d. per proof gallon, than the duties on foreign spirits of a like kind. The requests of the West Indian Colonies were that the present rate of preference should be doubled, i.e., increased from one-sixth to one-third over a period of years (preferably ten years) and also that, should the sugar duties be reduced during the period, the substantive preference on British sugar should not fall below the present figure, viz., in the case of 96° test sugar, approximately £3 15s. a ton. Both requests have recently been renewed and are now under consideration.

I quite recognize that it may not be practicable to defer the conclusion of an agreement with Brazil until after the Imperial Economic Conference, and I understand that you think the present a peculiarly favourable time for securing such an agreement. At the same time, it seems to me that we must take into account the psychological effect on the Dominions if they see us giving a foreign country a guarantee of free imports in respect of articles in which they are greatly interested at a time when an Economic Conference is in contemplation. Also in the case of rubber, although it is extremely unlikely that there will be any question of imposing an import duty in the near future, the attitude of the Dutch Government towards proposals for co-operation in schemes for restoring the British rubber-growing industry makes it undesirable to enter into engagements which would by implication relieve that Government of any anxiety as to the possible treatment of Dutch rubber in this country.

I should be glad to know what you think of the matter after taking into consideration the above points.

Yours sincerely,

DEVONSHIRE.

Greece.—By Article 1 of the Commercial Agreement of the 28th March, 1890, His Majesty's Government engaged to recommend to Parliament that the duty on currants imported into the United Kingdom should be reduced from 7s. to 2s. per cwt. (The Greek Government have denounced this Agreement, but it still continues in force for successive three months' periods unless notice to the contrary is given).

Japan.—By Article 8 of the Commercial Treaty of the 3rd April, 1911, the following Japanese goods are to be free of duty on importation into the United Kingdom:—

Habutæ of pure silk.
Handkerchiefs of habutæ of pure silk.
Copper, unwrought.
Plaiting of straw and other materials.
Camphor and camphor oil.
Baskets and basketware of bamboo.
Mats and matting of rush.
Lacquered wares.
Rape-seed oil.
Cloisonné wares.

(The Treaty is in force until the 16th July, 1923, and continues operative thereafter unless one year's notice of termination is given).

Spain.—By Article 6 of the Commercial Treaty of the 31st October, 1922, the following Spanish goods are to be free from Customs duties in any part of His Majesty's territories to which the Treaty applies (i.e., at present the United Kingdom and Newfoundland):—

Iron ore.
Corks and cork discs.
Grapes.
Walnuts.
Hazel nuts.
Almonds.
Onions.

Tomatoes.
Oranges.
Bananas.
Olive oil.
Preserved vegetables.

By the same Article, His Majesty's Government have undertaken not to increase the present import duties on the following Spanish products:—

Wine and wine lees.
Brandy.
Raisins.

(The Treaty, which came into force as a modus vivendi on the 6th November, 1922, continues in force for three years, and remains in force thereafter unless terminated by six months' notice).

26th March, 1923.

MY DEAR DEVONSHIRE,

MANY thanks for your letter of the 23rd March.*

I fully appreciate the importance of avoiding as far as possible any agreement in new commercial treaties which would prejudice the carrying out of any recommendations on preference which the Imperial Conference is likely to adopt. The case of Brazil is, however, a very special one. We have been constantly pressed by British manufacturers and traders to do our best to conclude a Commercial Treaty with Brazil which would give exporters from this country the benefits of preference, which Brazil gives to the United States and Belgium. We have been trying in one way or another to get this through for a considerable time; and, before the centenary celebrations opened in Rio, we had instructed the Ambassador to use this occasion for a renewed attempt. The Ambassador recently telegraphed to say that, if he could make the concession to which you refer in your letter, he hoped to be able to make a Treaty which would give us the preference either on all the articles affected, or at any rate on those in which British exporters have a material interest. You will observe, however, that what we have authorized the Ambassador to do is not to give Brazil a preference on any article which is now subject to duty, but merely to undertake that certain articles of food and raw material should not be taxed during the period of the Treaty if they come from Brazil. The concession certainly does not mean much. I can hardly conceive it possible that this country could put a duty on meat, lard, hides, raw rubber or raw cotton; but if we can persuade the Brazilians to accept this as a concession we should get an arrangement of considerable advantage to our trade without precluding ourselves from giving a preference to the Dominions on any article which there is a possibility of our being able to tax.

Yours, etc.,

P. LLOYD-GREAME.

No. 34. Your telegram No. 16 (of 6th February) Commercial Treaty with Brazil.

His Majesty's Government are prepared to conclude reciprocal most-favoured-nation agreement with Brazilian Government to last for two or three years with continuance subject to six months' notice. During the period of the agreement His Majesty's Government will guarantee freedom of duty to following Brazilian products, which accounted in 1921 for more than thirty per cent. of total imports into the United Kingdom from Brazil: Brazil nuts, raw cotton, hides, raw rubber, and cotton-seed oil.

In making this proposal to Brazilian Government you should say that His Majesty's Government have carefully considered special concessions which they could offer to Brazilian Government. As they cordially reciprocate desire of Brazilian Government to encourage closer commercial relations between the two countries, and feel that the moment after the close of the exhibition in which His Majesty's Government took so keen an interest is peculiarly appropriate, they are prepared to go so far as to offer an undertaking on the above-mentioned lines. You should add that as this offer ties the hands of His Majesty's Government in the matter of foreign and Imperial economic policy, it is only after considerable hesitation that they have been able to make it.

We desire if possible to conclude a formal Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with Brazil, but the negotiations would take time, and as we are anxious to have a formal agreement securing most-favoured-nation treatment as soon as possible you should suggest to Brazilian Government that in the meantime an exchange of notes on the following lines should be entered into immediately.

Text begins: The respective Governments, being desirous of extending the commercial relations of the two countries, agree to enter as soon as possible into negotiations for a treaty for that purpose. Pending the conclusion of such a treaty it is agreed that for a period of three years from the date of this exchange of notes and thereafter subject to denunciation by either party at six months' notice Brazilian products and manufactures shall enjoy in the United Kingdom and the products and manufactures of the United Kingdom shall enjoy in Brazil complete most-favoured-nation treatment in all matters relating to customs, and that the following articles, the produce of Brazil, are and shall continue during the period in question free of all customs duty on importation into the United Kingdom, namely: Brazil nuts, raw cotton, hides, raw rubber, and cotton-seed oil. Text ends. By most-favoured-nation treatment is, of course, understood the most favourable treatment granted to any foreign country.

Note.—Negotiations on the subject were still proceeding at the end of 1923.

* 27200: not printed; it dealt with the terms of the proposed telegram to His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Ottawa, 30th June, 1923.

In a despatch dated the 18th July, 1912, No. 487,* Mr. (afterwards Viscount) Harcourt, then Secretary of State for the Colonies, transmitted to His Royal Highness The Duke of Connaught certain copies of a list prepared in the Foreign Office showing those Treaties of Commerce and Navigation between the United Kingdom and foreign countries in force on the 1st of June, 1912, which applied to Canada. My Government would be grateful if they could be furnished with a corresponding list of Treaties relating to Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and Foreign Powers brought up to date.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 29th August, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 348 of the 30th June,† and to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, two copies of a list showing those Treaties of Commerce with foreign countries which apply to Canada, revised to the 31st July, 1923.

2. It will be observed that this list includes the Notes exchanged in November, 1905, by which His Majesty's Government took note of the desire of the Swedish and Norwegian Governments that Treaties concluded in common by Sweden and Norway should be considered as valid by the Swedish and Norwegian Governments until further notice. It was thought desirable to include these Notes, in virtue of which the Convention of the 18th March, 1826 (mentioned both under "Norway" and under "Sweden and Norway") remains in force.

3. It will also be observed that the Treaties with Persia of the 4th March, 1857, and the 9th February, 1903, are included. As your Ministers are aware, the latter Convention was modified by an Agreement, of the 21st March, 1920, which was so drawn up as to enable any of the Oversea Dominions to free itself from all Treaty obligations in regard to the treatment of Persian subjects, goods and vessels, on giving notice to that effect,‡ and notice was accordingly given on behalf of Canada,§ but the Persian Government have raised certain difficulties as to the acceptance of this notice (vide correspondence ending with my despatch No. 37, of the 19th January||).

(2) Procedure for Issue of Full Powers to Canadian Plenipotentiaries.

No. 84.

MR. W. S. FIELDING (MINISTER OF FINANCE, CANADA) to SIR J. MASTERTON SMITH (COLONIAL OFFICE.)

[Answered by No. 85.]

(Confidential.)

DEAR SIR JAMES,

Ottawa, 22nd January, 1923.

If the question I am about to ask touches a matter in which you are not free to speak, please tell me so and I shall be content.

In connexion with our Franco-Canadian Treaty, I informed the Colonial Office* and the Foreign Office of what my colleague and I were proposing on behalf of the Government of Canada and asked that the necessary Full Powers for the negotiation of a Treaty be granted to us by His Majesty. Our request was promptly honoured, the Powers were issued, and the Treaty was signed in due course. We had similar good fortune in the case of the Treaty with Italy.

What I desire to know is what procedure was taken respecting the issue of the Powers. Was there any Imperial Order in Council authorizing His Majesty to issue the Powers? If there was such an Order, could I obtain a copy of it? Perhaps the matter was regarded as a departmental one and His Majesty signed the Powers at the request of the Foreign Office.

For myself, I am quite satisfied with what has happened. We, as Ministers of Canada, conveyed our request through your Office, the necessary Powers were issued, and everything was disposed of in a satisfactory manner. But some people over here who are occasionally troubled with what I may call "status on the brain," are raising questions (not in a public way) as to how these things are done; hence, my asking these questions confidentially.

With warmest thanks for the attention so promptly given to us by the Colonial Office and the Foreign Office in these matters,

I am, &c.,

W. S. FIELDING.

DEAR MR. FIELDING,

19th February, 1923.

I AM very glad to be able to give you the information for which you asked in your letter of the 22nd January,† as to the procedure followed in connexion with the grant of Full Powers to you and to Mr. Lapointe to enable you to sign the recent Commercial Treaties with France and Italy.

The procedure was that we informed the Foreign Office officially of your desire that Full Powers should be issued; the Full Powers were prepared in accordance with your request, and were then signed by the King. No Imperial Order in Council was required as a preliminary to signature by the King, nor did His Majesty in signing the Full Powers purport to act on the advice of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, or indeed of any Minister, British or Canadian. In constitutional theory the appointment of Plenipotentiaries (like the ratification of a Treaty), is the personal act of the Sovereign.

[Answered by No. 87.]

(No. 343.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 7th June, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to invite the attention of your Ministers to the fact that, as a result of an informal arrangement made during the latter part of last year, two copies of the Bulletins issued by the International Customs Tariffs Bureau at Brussels are being periodically supplied by the Board of Trade for the use of the Free State Government.

2. It has been suggested to me that your Ministers may now think it desirable to adhere to the International Convention for the Publication of Customs Tariffs signed at Brussels in 1890, which established that Bureau. By this means, your Ministers would be able to obtain direct from Brussels a much larger number of the Bulletins than the Board of Trade are in a position to supply from their stock. I enclose a copy of the Convention* in question.

3. All the other self-governing Dominions with the exception of the Union of South Africa are parties to the Convention; the Government of Newfoundland have, however, expressed their intention of withdrawing from the Union at the end of the next septennial period, as in their opinion the Board of Trade Journal and Kelly's Customs Tariffs now give all the information needed in respect of changes of tariff in other countries.

4. I shall be glad if your Ministers will take this question into their consideration, and if I may be informed of their wishes in the matter.

5. In order that your Ministers may experience no difficulty in maintaining a complete file of the Bulletins, the Board of Trade propose to continue the existing informal arrangement pending your Ministers' decision.

IN reply to despatch No. 343 of the 7th June last,† I have the honour to inform Your Grace that it is understood that the basis of subscription to the International Convention for the Publication of Customs Tariffs has undergone some modification since it was originally fixed under Articles 9 and 10 of the Convention.

(No. 553.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 14th September, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 246 of the 24th August,* on the subject of the possibility of the Irish Free State adhering to the International Convention for the Publication of Customs Tariffs, and to request you to inform your Ministers that, so far as His Majesty's Government is aware, the basis of subscription to the Bureau has not altered since the Convention was established, but that the amount of the subscription has recently been temporarily increased on account of the increased cost of carrying on the Bureau's work. For the present year (1923-24), it is anticipated that a special subscription equal to twice the normal contribution will be asked for from the adhering States, so that the total subscription will be three times the normal subscription as fixed by the Convention. This subscription is, of course, payable in Belgian francs, but it will be realised that the sterling equivalent even of this increased sum is less than the pre-war sterling equivalent of the normal contribution.

2. In addition, a pension fund has been established supported by contributions, payable annually, equal to one-tenth of the annual normal subscription. It is understood that this contribution in respect of pensions is optional, but that most of the adhering countries pay the contribution.

3. With regard to the inquiry contained in the second paragraph of your despatch, I regret that His Majesty's Government has not at present the material on which to base the required estimate. Inquiries, however, are being initiated with a view to obtaining the necessary information from the Belgian Government, and I shall hope to address you further on the subject in due course.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

[Answered by No. 90.]

(No. 623.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 25th October, 1923.

WITH reference to the third paragraph of my despatch No. 553 of the 14th September,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Brussels regarding the possibility of the Irish Free State adhering to the International Convention for the Publication of Customs Tariffs.

2. In view of the fourth paragraph of the Note from the Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs, enclosed in Sir George Grahame's despatch, should your Ministers decide to adhere to the Convention, they will, no doubt, themselves suggest in which Class the Irish Free State should be placed for the purposes of Article IX of the Convention.

* No. 87.

3. As regards the actual sum payable, I understand that the amounts per unit, in Belgian paper francs, of the normal subscription and of the proportion of the initial expenses of the Bureau, calculated on the basis set out in Articles IX, X, and XI of the Convention and the Procès-Verbal relating to the Signature of the Convention and Regulations, of which a copy was enclosed in my despatch No. 343 of the 7th June,* work out at, approximately, 124.2 and 49.5 francs respectively. The former figure multiplied by the number of units established in respect of the various classes will give the normal annual contribution due from the various adhering countries, while the latter figure similarly multiplied will show the proportion of the initial expenses to be borne by a new adherent. The normal annual contribution, thus ascertained, must, as explained in the first paragraph of my despatch No. 553 of the 14th September† and in the seventh paragraph of Monsieur Jaspar's Note, be multiplied by three to give the actual contribution payable at the present time.

4. For convenience of reference I enclose two statements, prepared in the Board of Trade, showing the estimated total amount, in Belgian paper francs, which would apparently be payable in respect of the annual subscription and optional contribution to the Pension Fund for the year 1923-4 and in respect of the proportion of the initial expenses by a new adherent to the Convention, if placed in the second or third class.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure 1 in No. 89.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

Brussels, 18th September, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to approach Your Excellency, under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, with a view to obtaining particulars regarding the amount of the subscription which would be payable by the Irish Free State to the International Convention for the Publication of Customs Tariffs in the event of the adherence of that State to the Convention.

His Majesty's Government presume that the amount of the contribution payable would depend upon the annual volume of trade of the Irish Free State, but so far as His Majesty's Government are aware no estimate of this amount is available. Should it, however, not be possible for the competent authorities to form an estimate of the amount of the subscription in the absence of any estimate of the volume of trade, His Majesty's Government suggest that it may be possible for the Free State authorities to make the required estimate on receiving exact particulars as to the basis upon which the subscription is fixed.

In this connexion I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to inquire of Your Excellency whether the volume of trade taken as the basis under Article 9 of the Convention is expressed in gold or in paper francs, and also what years are taken into account in the case of new adherents to the Convention in estimating the annual average value of the trade. Special importance is attached to this matter as calculations in paper francs, particularly if based on recent trade statistics (which apart from the normal growth of trade since 1890, when the original proportions were fixed, are swollen by the rise in prices) might easily cause a new adherent to be classed in a higher subscription category than that under which it would have been classed, had it entered the Convention in 1890.

His Majesty's Government are in addition anxious to obtain particulars as to the proportion of the original expenses referred to in Article 8 which would fall to be paid by the Irish Free State. It is assumed that, as English is recognized by the Constitution of the Irish Free State as an official language, the Irish Free State would not be entitled to claim any reduction of subscription under Article 10 of the Convention.

I shall be grateful if Your Excellency will be so good as to furnish me in due course with the above-mentioned particulars, which are required by His Majesty's Government for communication to the Government of the Irish Free State.

His Excellency
Monsieur Henri Jaspar,
Minister for Foreign Affairs.

I avail, &c.,
GEORGE GRAHAME.

(Direction P.B. Section B.T. No. 3312.)

MONSIEUR L'AMBASSADEUR,

le 2^e Octobre, 1923.

PAR Son office du 18 septembre, Votre Excellence a bien voulu m'exprimer le désir de recevoir certains renseignements on vue de l'adhésion de l'Etat libre d'Irlande à l'Union Internationale pour la publication des tarifs douaniers.

J'ai l'honneur de faire connaître à Votre Excellence que le chiffre du commerce qui servirait de base à la fixation de la cotisation de l'Irlande devrait être calculé en francs-or. L'estimation du commerce des nouveaux adhérents en francs papier pourrait aboutir, en effet, à des chiffres qui les feraient classer dans une catégorie toute différente de celle où ils l'auraient été si leur adhésion s'était produite avant la guerre.

Le chiffre du commerce à prendre comme base peut être soit celui de la dernière année révolue, soit une moyenne entre les chiffres des années les plus récentes.

J'ajouterai à ce propos que le Bureau International serait tout disposé à abandonner à l'Etat libre d'Irlande le soin d'indiquer lui-même, à l'origine, la catégorie dans laquelle il devrait être rangé, d'après ses propres estimations, si approximatives fussent-elles—sous réserve du changement de classement que le chiffre réel de son commerce rendrait ultérieurement opportun.

Quant à la part de l'Irlande dans les frais d'installation prévus à l'article 8 de la Convention du 5 juillet 1890, elle dépendre, en vertu du 3^e alinéa du dit article, de la classe dans laquelle ce pays aura été rangé.

En ce qui concerne l'application de l'article 10, visant les langues non employées par le Bureau International, je ne puis que me rallier à l'avis exprimé par Votre Excellence dans l'avant-dernier alinéa de sa communication.

Je crois utile de rappeler que par suite de la dépréciation du franc-papier et de l'augmentation du prix de toutes choses, les cotisations des Etats faisant partie de l'Union Internationale ont dû être majorées dans ces dernières années; après avoir été quadruplées pour les exercices 1921-1922 et 1922-1923, elles ont pu n'être que triplées pour l'exercice en cours. Le Bureau Internationale examine actuellement si à ces majorations de versements en francs-papier, il n'y aurait pas lieu de substituer le versement de la cotisation normale en francs-or. Cette solution serait, peut-on dire, absolument conforme à l'esprit de la Convention du 5 juillet 1890, laquelle, en fixant le chiffre du Budget annuel du Bureau International, visait une situation où il y avait parité entre le franc-or et le franc-papier.

Je joins à la présente lettre deux exemplaires du texte de la Convention du 5 juillet 1890, ainsi que d'une traduction anglaise de ce texte.

Je saisis, &c.,

HENRI JASPAR.

A Son Excellence

le Très Honorable Sir George Grahame, Ambassadeur de Sa Majesté Britannique,

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 14th July, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your note of to-day's date in which you state that the Czechoslovak Government, having authority by law, is prepared to bring the Treaty of Commerce signed to-day into force temporarily on the 1st of September, 1923, without prejudice to the conditions relating to ratification contained in Article 11 thereof.

It being undoubtedly in the interest of the development of commercial relations of both States that the Treaty should be brought into operation as soon as possible, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that His Majesty's Government will bring it into force provisionally on the 1st of September, 1923, pending the exchange of ratifications.

(No. 249.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 29th August, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to refer to Your Grace's despatch No. 476 of the 9th instant,* on the subject of a Treaty of Commerce between the Governments of Great Britain and Czechoslovakia, and to state that, since under the second paragraph of Article IX of the Treaty there will, in effect, be mutual most-favoured-nation treatment between the Saorstad and Czechoslovakia, there does not appear to be any necessity for the former to bind itself by giving notice to adopt the stipulations of the Treaty until there has been more time to examine the effect of this and the many other commercial treaties existing or being made between Great Britain and other countries.

* 36225: not printed; it enclosed copies of notes exchanged with the Czechoslovak Foreign Minister on various matters arising in connexion with the Treaty.

2. It is observed, however, from the Note appended to the Treaty, that certain quantities are fixed, representing the amount of goods produced in territories, that appear to include the Saorstat, which may be admitted annually into Czechoslovakia, and, if it be correct that the Saorstat is included, my Ministers would be glad to learn what arrangements are in contemplation for determining the quota of each class of goods allocated to the Saorstat.

I have, &c.,

SIR, Downing Street, 17th September, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 249 of the 29th August,* regarding the recently signed Commercial Treaty with Czechoslovakia.

2. As regards paragraph 2, I enclose a copy of a Declaration, which was signed simultaneously with the Treaty, embodying the arrangement agreed upon with regard to the importation into Czechoslovakia of goods subject to licence. It is intended that the quantities of goods specified in the Schedule to this Declaration (which appeared in the Note on page 77 of the Board of Trade Journal of the 19th July) should relate to the whole of the imports into Czechoslovakia from the whole of the British Empire whether, in the case of goods produced or manufactured outside this country, they are sent via this country or not. It is hoped that the contingents actually prescribed in the Schedule are so high that, so long as the Czechoslovakian licensing system has to be retained, no question need arise as regards the division of the total for any particular class of goods between the several parts of the Empire.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure in No. 93.

DECLARATION.

Ad. Article II.

IN pursuance of Article 2 of the Treaty of Commerce signed this day, the Czechoslovak Government undertake that during the temporary continuance of the existing system of import restriction in Czechoslovakia goods produced and manufactured in the territories of His Britannic Majesty of the classes specified in the annexed Schedule shall be admitted into Czechoslovakia up to amounts not less than the quantities shown therein.

The Czechoslovak Government further undertake that, in the event of other or greater contingents being granted to any third country in respect of any article of interest to the trade of His Britannic Majesty's territories, an adequate contingent shall, at the request of His Britannic Majesty's Representative at Prague, be granted for similar articles produced or manufactured in His Britannic Majesty's territories, it being the intention of the Czechoslovak Government that in the administration of the system of import restrictions, there shall be no discrimination against the trade of His Britannic Majesty's territories.

The Czechoslovak Government also hereby declare their readiness at any time to give sympathetic consideration to any request made by His Britannic Majesty's Representative at Prague for the granting of a suitable contingent in respect of any article not at present included in the Schedule, or for otherwise modifying the Schedule.

* No. 92.

Ad. Article VI.

The Czechoslovak Government undertake in the event of British Companies or Associations applying for licences to carry on any description of business in Czechoslovakia to give in general the same favourable consideration to such applications as to those made on behalf of similar Companies or Associations of any other foreign country.

The above Declaration shall take effect as from the coming into force of the Treaty of Commerce, signed this day, and shall remain in force as long as that Treaty is in operation.

Enclosure 1 in No. 108.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 16th August, 1923.

WITH reference to Monsieur Bros' Note of 6th April,* I have the honour to inform you that the Government of the Union of South Africa have signified their desire that the Agreement between Great Britain and Czechoslovakia relating to Commercial Travellers' Samples signed at London on 31st January last, should be extended to the Union of South Africa, provided it is understood that the amount of duty must be deposited in money, and that the sum paid cannot be refunded until the actual export of the samples, within one year, because no facilities exist for a refund of duty on their being placed in bond. A copy of the Union Government Regulations† relating to the treatment of commercial travellers' samples is enclosed herewith for the information of the Czechoslovak Government.

2. As regards the technical procedure entailed, until the ratifications of the main agreement have been exchanged at Prague, no operative treaty arrangement exists which can be extended to the Union of South Africa and other parts of His Majesty's Dominions who have also been invited to express their wishes in the matter. When that necessary preliminary has been completed, a formal exchange of notes will, if the Czechoslovak Government agree, be sufficient in the view of His Majesty's Government to extend the agreement to any part of the British Empire desiring to participate therein.

3. I have therefore the honour to suggest that, as soon as the ratifications of the agreement have been exchanged at Prague, the participation of the Union of South Africa and such other parts of His Majesty's Dominions as desire to participate in the understanding reached, should be arranged by a formal exchange of notes between the Czechoslovak Legation in London and the Foreign Office.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 4th July, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 44 of the 5th of February,* I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have had under examination the Revised Draft Convention and Regulations of the Universal Electrical Communications Union, and more particularly those Articles of the Draft Convention, namely† the last section of Article 21, and Articles 22 and 24, which relate to the exercise of votes in Conferences, and to accessions to the Convention.

2. His Majesty's Government are of opinion that these three Articles need revision in certain important particulars, and they propose to suggest that the Articles should be replaced by new Articles, of which drafts are enclosed.

3. It is proposed also that the revised Articles shall be accompanied by the enclosed Note, explanatory of the object of the revision, which is, as your Ministers will observe, to ensure that any Government on whose behalf a separate signature has been affixed to the Convention, or an individual notice of accession is given under the Article designated "B," shall be regarded as a Contracting Government and as such entitled to a vote at General Conferences of Delegates.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

* 3963: not printed; it enclosed documents relating to the proposed revised Convention.

† These Articles read as follows:—

Article 21.— With this object, administrative Conferences will take place periodically, each Conference fixing the time and place of the next meeting.

Article 22.—These Conferences shall be composed of delegates representing the Administrations of the contracting countries.

In the deliberations each country shall exercise one vote only.

If a Government accede to the Convention for its colonies, possessions, or protectorates, subsequent Conferences may decide that the whole or part of such colonies, possessions, or protectorates is to be regarded as forming a country for the purposes of the foregoing clause. Nevertheless, the number of votes to be exercised by a Government, including its colonies, possessions, or protectorates, may not exceed six. The following Governments shall each have six votes: The United States, France, the British Empire, Italy, and Japan.

The following are regarded as forming each a single country for the purpose of the present Article:

The Belgian Congo;
The Spanish Colony of the Gulf of Guinea;
The Dutch Indies;
The Colony of Curaçao;
Portuguese West Africa; and
Portuguese East Africa and the Portuguese possessions in Asia.

Article 24.—States which have not taken part in the present Convention will be allowed to adhere to it on their request.

The accession will, in itself, carry with it acceptance of all of the clauses of, and admission to, the last Conference was held, and by that State to all the others.

The accession will, in itself, carry with it acceptance of all of the clauses of, and admission to all the advantages conferred by the present Convention.

The accession to the Convention of the Government of a country having colonies, possessions, or protectorates shall not carry with it the accession of the colonies, possessions, or protectorates of such Government, unless a declaration be made to that effect by such Government. The colonies, possessions, or protectorates as a whole, or each one of them separately, may form the subject of a separate accession or a separate denunciation under the conditions indicated in the present Article and in Article 27.

Enclosure 1 in No. 109.

ARTICLES CONCERNING VOTES AND ACCESSIONS.

"A."—General Conferences of delegates of the Contracting Governments shall take place periodically, each Conference fixing the place and time of the next meeting. In the deliberations each Contracting Government shall be entitled to one vote.

"B."—Any non-signatory Government (whether of an independent State, Dominion, Colony, possession, protectorate, or territory under mandate) which conducts its own telegraph administration, either directly or through the medium of private enterprise, may accede to the present Convention. Such accession will be notified through the diplomatic channel to the Contracting Government in whose territory the last Conference was held, and by that Government to the other Contracting Governments.

The accession will, in itself, carry with it acceptance of all the clauses of, and admission to all the advantages conferred by, the present Convention.

In the event of the accession to the present Convention of the Government of a State having colonies, possessions, protectorates, or territories under mandate, the notice of accession shall state whether or not it applies to such colonies, possessions, protectorates or territories, or any of them.

"C."—For the purposes of the present Convention any Government on whose behalf a separate signature has been affixed to the Convention, or an individual notice of accession is given under Article "B," shall be regarded as a Contracting Government.

[17451]

Enclosure 2 in No. 109.

DRAFT NOTE ON THE BRITISH PROPOSALS REGARDING VOTES AND ACCESSIONS.

The draft prepared at Washington assigned multiple votes to certain specified Governments. This proposal, though it might perhaps be held to represent the telegraphic importance of the Powers concerned, seems logically to involve a general grading of States for purposes of votes, a matter which it would obviously be difficult to arrange satisfactorily and which might involve the Conference at its outset in long and fruitless debate.

The British Government, on further consideration, is inclined to think that the principle of the equality within the Convention of the Contracting Governments as defined in Article "C" should be taken as the basis, and that one vote only should be exercised by each Contracting Government. The existing signatories of the Telegraph and Radio-telegraph Conventions will naturally form the great majority of signatories of the combined Convention, each Government which is separately represented being regarded as a Contracting Government. In the provision made in Article "B" for future accessions it is proposed to restrict the right of accession to Governments which conduct their own telegraph administration either directly or through the medium of private enterprise.

It is thought that this proposal will meet with general assent, its object being to ensure that each territory which for telegraph purposes may be regarded as an administrative unit, and capable, as such, of making a useful and independent contribution to the deliberations of Conferences, and which has a substantial amount of international telegraph traffic, shall be qualified for a vote.

So far as the British Government is concerned, it is suggested that not more than one vote should be claimed in respect of the British non-self-governing Colonies, Protectorates, etc., it being understood that the British Government itself and the Governments of each of the self-governing Dominions and of India, would be entitled, in view of their international telegraphic importance, to sign separately or to accede separately under Article "B."

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Ottawa, 15th August, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Grace's despatch Dominions No. 239 of the 4th July* regarding votes for the Dominion at the next International Telegraph and Radio-telegraph Convention, it appears to my Government that the proposal to eliminate the arbitrary maximum of six votes for any country, including its dominions, colonies, etc., and the substitution therefor of the principle of one vote for each country operating a telegraph system, would seem to be not only an equitable and reasonable arrangement, but one in the interests of the British Empire as a whole, since it would tend to increase its voting power. Such being the case, my Government concur in the Imperial draft, and will be pleased to support it when presented to the next Convention for discussion.

SIR,

Downing Street, 5th November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of the English version of the Revised Draft of a Convention and Regulations* of the Universal Electrical Communications Union.

2. The origin and scope of this document are set out in the Preface on page 3, from which your Ministers will observe that it results from a proposal for the amalgamation of the existing Telegraph and Radio-telegraph Conventions. I enclose a copy of the latter Convention† for convenience of reference.

3. It will be further observed that the present document, so far as the technical wireless provisions are concerned, is a revision, carried out in accordance with the recommendations of an Inter-Allied Technical Committee which met at Paris in 1921, of a draft prepared at Washington in December, 1920, and in this connexion your Ministers may find the enclosed Report* of the Technical Committee of interest.

4. His Majesty's Government have recently had under examination the Draft Convention and Regulations and more particularly those Articles of the Draft Convention, namely,‡ the last section of Article 21, and Articles 22 and 24, which relate to the exercise of votes in Conferences, and to accessions to the Convention.

5. They are of opinion that these Articles require revision in certain important particulars, and they propose to suggest that the Articles should be replaced by new Articles, drafts of which are enclosed.§

6. It is proposed also that the revised Articles shall be accompanied by the enclosed Note,|| explanatory of the object of the revision, which is, as your Ministers will observe, to ensure that any Government on whose behalf a separate signature has been affixed to the Convention, or an individual notice of accession is given under the Article designated "B," shall be regarded as a Contracting Government and as such entitled to a vote at General Conferences of Delegates.

7. It is intended that the Draft Convention and Regulations, together with such modifications as the various Governments concerned may desire to put forward, shall eventually be considered by a World Conference on Electrical Communications.

8. The time and place of meeting of the Conference have not yet been definitely settled, but at present it appears probable that the task of summoning delegates will be undertaken by the French Government, and it is not unlikely that the Conference will be held some time during the first six months of the coming year.

9. As a consequence of the notification regarding the International Telegraph Convention, which, as stated in my despatch No. 636 of the 5th November,¶ I have asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to make in accordance with the request contained in your despatch No. 291 of the 12th October, the French Government, should they finally undertake the summoning of the Conference, will presumably issue to the Irish Free State, as to the Governments of the other Dominions, an invitation to be represented at the proposed World Conference.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, [22nd] [(I.F.S.) 23rd] November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, copies of a Convention* between His Majesty and the King of the Belgians providing that the Extradition Treaties with Belgium of the 29th October, 1901, the 5th March, 1907, and the 3rd March, 1911, shall apply to the Belgian Congo and to certain British Protectorates. The ratifications of this Convention were exchanged on the 15th October.

2. The view of His Majesty's Government has been that extradition between His Majesty's Dominions and the Belgian Congo was already provided for by Article 14 of the Treaty of the 29th October, 1901, but the Belgian Government found difficulty in accepting this view, no legislation having been passed to give effect to the Treaty in the Belgian Congo. Accordingly, as it was necessary in any case to negotiate a Treaty governing extradition between the British Protectorates in question and the Belgian Congo, it was thought desirable to take the opportunity formally to stipulate that the existing Extradition Treaties shall apply to the Belgian Congo.

3. In the circumstances, it is proposed to issue a formal Order in Council under section 2 of the Extradition Act, 1870, on the usual lines. The draft of this Order in Council† is enclosed.

4. The Convention will come into effect ten days after the publication of the Order in Council in the London Gazette. I shall inform you later of the date fixed for publication.

NOTE ON PRESENT PROCEDURE AS REGARDS COMMUNICATION WITH THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE SELF-GOVERNING DOMINIONS ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

(Confidential.)

(1) Imperial Conferences.—A great part of the proceedings of recent Imperial Conferences has consisted of a review of foreign affairs generally, and a discussion of the main lines of policy to be pursued.

While the Conferences have been in session, the Prime Ministers see copies of the more important Foreign Office despatches, etc., such as are circulated to Ministers in this country: these papers include, e.g., reports of conversations with Foreign Ambassadors and general reports from His Majesty's Representatives abroad; the Dominion Prime Ministers also have circulated to them the daily print of Foreign Office telegrams.

During the periods when the Conference is not in session, copies of Foreign Office despatches, etc., are sent weekly to the Dominion Prime Ministers, and periodical telegrams are sent giving information as to current events of special importance (e.g., the Conference at Lausanne, the recent negotiations with Russia, the situation in the Ruhr, etc.). In addition, His Majesty's Government are in close touch with the Dominion Governments as to the lines of policy which it may be proposed to adopt in connexion with such events.

(2) International Conferences.—In connexion with all important International Conferences, it is settled beforehand in consultation whether the Dominions are separately represented or not.

In cases where the Dominions are separately represented, co-operation between the Representatives of His Majesty's Government and the Dominion Representatives is secured by meetings of the delegates who form in effect a "British Empire Delegation," and also by the organization of a joint British Secretariat. Any international instruments resulting from the Conference are in such cases signed separately on behalf of the Dominions.

When the Dominions are not separately represented, the practice is to settle in consultation whether any international instruments resulting from the Conference should be signed separately by representatives of the Dominions, or signed only by those British Representatives who have taken part in the negotiations. (When the Dominions are not separately represented, it is customary to keep the Dominion Governments informed of the progress of the negotiations).

In any case, whether the Dominions have been separately represented or not, and whether the instruments have been signed separately on behalf of the Dominions or not, it is the practice to consult the Dominion Governments before ratification by His Majesty. In cases of International Conventions affecting one Dominion only (e.g., the recent Commercial Conventions between Canada and France and Italy), His Majesty's ratification would only be given at the instance of the Dominion Government concerned.

(3) League of Nations and International Labour Organization.—It is the practice to confer with the Governments of the Dominions which are members of the League as to the policy to be adopted in connexion with important questions which may arise in the periods between the meetings of the League of Nations Assembly, and between the meetings of the International Labour Conference; e.g., amendments to the Covenant.

During meetings of the Assembly and of the International Labour Conference, co-operation is secured by periodical meetings between the Representatives of His Majesty's Government and the various Dominion Delegates.

(4) General questions of International interest, and action of foreign Governments affecting British commercial interests.—His Majesty's Government keep in close touch with the Dominion Governments on such matters; e.g., it is the practice to keep the Dominion Governments informed, in connexion with the question of territorial waters, of any indication on the part of foreign Governments to claim jurisdiction outside the three-mile limit.

Similarly, Dominion Governments have been kept generally informed on questions such as the Portuguese Shipping Law, the Tariff Changes of the United States and Spain, the United States Shipping Laws, etc.

(5) Commercial Treaties, etc.—It is now customary to conclude these so as to apply geographically in the first instance only to the United Kingdom (not, of course, including the Irish Free State) and to the foreign country concerned, but to insert a provision by which any Dominion may, if it wishes, accede to the Treaty. In recent years, Dominion Governments have not usually acceded to Commercial Treaties of this nature.

Wherever possible, His Majesty's Government endeavour to secure the insertion of a provision in such Treaties by which goods produced or manufactured in the Dominions obtain most-favoured-nation treatment in the foreign country concerned, so long as the Dominions accord most-favoured-nation treatment to goods produced or manufactured in that country.

Similarly, Extradition Treaties are now drafted in a form which provides that the Treaty shall not apply to any of the Dominions unless they wish to accede.

As regards Arbitration Agreements, it is the practice, before renewing such agreements with foreign countries, to obtain the prior concurrence of the Dominion Governments.

29TH MARCH. Secret. Following for your Prime Minister from General Smuts:—

Begins: Private and Personal. As Prime Ministers' Conference has now been postponed until October, I desire to place before you my view of the present international situation, of which I take the gravest view. Events march so rapidly that it may be impossible by October to influence or alter the situation which is growing worse daily.

That France is breaking clean away from the principles on which the Entente was founded or could for the future be continued is evident. The recovery of reasonable reparations has been made practically impossible by her Ruhr policy, and she is now more or less openly proceeding to permanent occupation of parts of Germany and to the dismemberment of that country. Even if she fails there is likely to be an economic and political upheaval, which will have disastrous effects on the recovery of Europe, including Great Britain. If she succeeds in breaking up Germany there will be no counter weight to her ambitions on the Continent of Europe and, as in previous centuries, Great Britain will have to prepare for the defence of her very existence against the new menace. The size of the French Army which is recruited largely from Africa, her attitude towards the Washington Naval Agreement, which she will either not ratify or ratify for a limited period only, the development of her Air Force in spite of all financial difficulties, her rapidly growing hostility to the British Empire, all tend to show that France is acting on a far-sighted policy which aims not at reparations, nor even at security in narrow sense, but at military and political leadership which she is preparing to enforce against all comers, including the British Empire. If Germany goes, the British Empire will alone have to face the new France, which will be in command of much larger resources than ever before, and may even be at the head of European combination. That may mean at very early date taxation proposals on a vast scale for British Empire, perhaps beyond our power; and then, when too late, it may be recognized that battle was lost on the Ruhr owing to our inaction and virtual connivance at French designs. People talk of a régime of peace, but everything points in the opposite direction for the immediate future. And we may have immediately to recast the whole basis of our foreign policy, unless we are prepared to sink to a secondary position in the world. We may have to renounce Entente, and actively support Germany with our diplomacy against dismemberment which threatens not only her future, but entire basis of European peace and order. Appeals to the Dominions for financial and other assistance will not be very palatable, especially when it comes to be recognized that the danger could have been avoided by firmer diplomacy at the right time. And I would very strongly urge that in order to avoid resort to a more dangerous weapon later on the diplomatic weapon should be used to the full now. Danger arises just as much from the Turkish policy of France as from her German policy. France is out to conciliate the Mohammedan world at any cost and at any immediate sacrifice, in order to mobilize Mohammedan opinion at the proper time as a weapon against the British Empire. It will be too late to prevent her full use of this weapon if we wait until she has realized her aims in Germany, and has achieved undisputed leadership on the Continent. We should end this pretence of joint action which has tied our hands at Lausanne, and has not tied France or Italy, and we should be free to make whatever arrangements we deem necessary in interests of the British Empire and Europe. France ignores the Entente and we observe it to our undoing. There are even rumours that France is trying to get into touch with Russian Soviet through underground channels. She is evidently acting on more or less thought-out plan, while from sentimental motives of loyalty we are drifting on the wreck of the Entente. To me a revision of our whole foreign policy appears urgently necessary. I had thought that the meeting of the Prime Ministers' Conference in July would provide a suitable opportunity, but as that is now impossible, I would urge you yourself to undertake the task, and in view of the grave national emergency which may involve the future of the Empire, to consult party leaders with a view to formulating a national policy and submitting it for their concurrence to the Dominions. If, in the interests of Europe, and not merely in a selfish spirit we act boldly and resolutely, we may save the situation, and crystallize world opinion in right direction. Our undertaking to pay our foreign debt and the stand which British Government made in the Near Eastern crisis last September have already much impressed America. A great line taken now when we have still the power and position to do so will have far-reaching and beneficial reactions in rallying world opinion to our support and will be in keeping with great decisions taken by British statesmen in the past.

This message is private and personal to you, but you are at liberty to make whatever use of it you deem expedient. Ends.

18TH APRIL. Secret. Following for General Smuts from Prime Minister :

Begins: Private and Personal. Your message of 29th March* came when I was away and not very well; please excuse delay in replying to it.

As you say, the position on the Ruhr is very serious. An economic loss is taking place with no compensations, and the danger is always present of unpleasant incidents, but the British Government have failed to see any course open to us other than that which we have adopted. Just two years ago we, jointly with France, presented an ultimatum to Germany that unless certain terms of payment of reparations were accepted we would occupy the Ruhr. These terms were accepted, but no payments were made, and the French contend that all they are doing is to take the same steps to secure payment which we were willing to take to secure the promise of payment. In January I was certain that whatever we might do the French would occupy the Ruhr, and no action then or since seemed possible for us which would not have made us seem pro-German and anti-French.

As to the dangers of the French action, there seems to be no doubt that the French themselves are disquieted, and Italy and Belgium we know to be most dissatisfied with the present position. Black, therefore, as the outlook is, the best hope seems to be that proposals may be made by Germany which the French will look at more reasonably than would have been the case before the occupation of the Ruhr.

The diplomatic weapon, of which you speak, we are using impartially upon both parties, and this is the best method of ultimately bringing them together. I do not think that more direct pressure is practicable.

I think also that you are wrong in suggesting that French action is based on the desire to take Germany's pre-War position on the Continent. The action of the French resulted from disappointment at the failure to receive reparations, coupled with a sense of insecurity in the future, and I do not believe that they are carrying out any plan which they had thought out.

As regards the negotiations with Turkey, you will probably have noticed the friction which has arisen between the French and the Turks, so that for the moment the danger you speak of in that direction does not exist. In fact, no new policy seems to me possible which would not be to take directly the side of the Germans against the French. I am sure that this would be unpopular in this country, where the feeling is strong that the Germans have not seriously tried to meet the reparations payments. The information we receive is also that in the Dominions as in the United States the feeling is strongly pro-French.

The disadvantage of attempting to discuss these things by cable is, however, considerable, and I feel that it will not be too late to talk them over personally in October. I am writing you more fully. Ends.

7TH JULY. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram 5th July* reporting conversations between Lord Curzon and French and Belgian Ambassadors. I approve of Lord Curzon's solemn warnings to French and Belgian Governments. Looking at developments as a whole in our relations with France since Peace Conference, I feel a crisis is not very far off, and British Government will soon have to choose between maintenance of Entente on the one hand and maintenance of British self-respect and honour and Empire prestige as a first-class power on the other. French answer to British interrogatories, whether in writing or not, is certain to be unsatisfactory, as French are in Ruhr not so much with the object of recovering reparations as of maintaining a strangle-hold on Germany's vital artery until she collapses and all future danger to France disappears by dissolution of Germany.

Whatever the form of their answer, French will be determined to maintain hold. This is the position we shall have to face. However sincere our desire for Allied solidarity in the present world crisis, still we have to face realities and recognize that French policy is driving Europe on rocks, and that a very solemn duty on the part of the British Empire arises in that respect. The time has, therefore, come to explore the possibilities of the new situation with which we may soon be faced. From that point of view I venture to make the following five suggestions:—

(1) Whatever happens we should avoid all recognition or acquiescence in Ruhr occupation. We have, fortunately, dissociated ourselves in advance from this fruitful source of future European troubles.

(2) Should French persist in their unsatisfactory attitude, we should then solemnly renounce Entente in a formal document, giving our reasons and basing them on the highest human grounds. It should be an appeal to the conscience of the world and reaffirm the ideals for which the Allied peoples made great sacrifices in the War. It should isolate France morally and rally public opinion to the side of the British Empire. It also notifies our retirement from Reparation Commission on which our position latterly has been ambiguous. The British Government should obtain concurrence of Dominion Governments, and documents should speak for Empire as a whole.

(3) Having finished with the Entente and recovered our freedom of action the British Government should then proceed to confer with Germany on their latest offer and to accept the offer of an impartial International Commission to consider and fix Germany's capacity to pay. The British Government should get Italy and Japan to join in this step. France should be also invited, and if she declines to join should be left out of Commission. Belgium should be treated in the same way. I consider it most advisable that the Commission should also be empowered to advise on the proper treatment of inter-Allied indebtedness. Such a step would morally immensely strengthen the position of the British Government. The Commission should be as strong as possible, and United States of America should be pressed to appoint a member. On this ground, as well as to prevent France from attempting to wreck the League of Nations, there should be no reference of the matter to the League.

(4) Simultaneously with reply to Germany the British Government should make separate peace with Turkey if Allied peace has not been concluded before. I thoroughly approved Lord Curzon's refusal at Lausanne to consider a separate peace. But objection to it will disappear with the

* 33730/S: not printed; it contained a summary of developments in connexion with foreign affairs.

Entente, and a British peace will have a great effect on Mohammedan world.

(5) The German debt having been determined by the Commission it should then be allocated amongst the late Allies in the proportion agreed upon three years ago. With regard to the portion allocated to the British Empire, I am inclined to favour payment by arrangement with Germany whereby a portion of the English public war debt is transferred to Germany, the English creditors being protected by a British guarantee. If the other Allies should follow a similar course, reparation question will be settled except so far as France and Belgium are concerned. My feeling is that when France sees the world moving on without her she may repent of her isolation, and a successor to Poincaré may be found willing to accept our solution. In any case, if France hardens her heart, no other course will be left but to go on without her, and she may before long be glad to fall into line in order to escape from the, by that time, impossible Ruhr position.

The course I suggest means a determined attempt to end the reparations trouble once and for all so far as we are concerned. It also means the British Empire resumes the leadership which has temporarily passed away from her. It will not mean hostility to France: it need not involve any serious breach with her.

I trust these suggestions will be carefully considered by you and Lord Curzon in the light of much fuller knowledge of the facts which you possess. The crisis, which I fear will soon be upon us, should find us ready and prepared to act with full courage and decision, not only in the interests of the British Empire, but of Europe and civilization which is rapidly crumbling away. Ends.

17TH JULY. Secret. Your telegram of 7th July.* Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: We have read with great interest, and carefully studied, your views on Anglo-French relations.

Statement made in Parliament here 12th July will have shown you that in many respects we are proceeding upon lines of which you will approve, and have taken the lead which you advocate. Reply to German Government is being drafted, and will be communicated as soon as possible to Allied Governments with invitation to subscribe to it. Further action must depend on nature of Allies' reception of this draft. We are fully impressed with necessity for making step forward towards general settlement, and, in event of France and Belgium declining to join in proposed reply to German Government, we contemplate possibility of replying ourselves to Berlin in conjunction with such of our other Allies as may be prepared to join.

In the meanwhile we are keeping you continuously informed by telegram of progress of events. Ends.

4TH AUGUST. Secret. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: I have read your and Lord Curzon's statement to Parliament with much anxiety. Situation if left where it now is will constitute grave blow to prestige of British Empire. We are entering very difficult era in which maintenance of British prestige and position will be absolutely essential. Moreover, break up of Germany, which is clearly French objective, is not improbable, and will add vastly to our dangers and difficulties. I would, therefore, urge you to keep up initiative and consider carefully some such plan as outlined in my message of 7th July.* You are much more likely to succeed by adopting strong line of your own than by continuing futile negotiations with France. Most sincerely I wish you luck, and I think you will get it, too. Ends.

L'Etat libre d'Irlande bénéficie du même régime que l'Angleterre pour ses importations en France.

Après entente entre les ministères intéressés, il a été décidé que le régime du status quo ante serait maintenu en ce qui concerne les relations commerciales avec l'Etat libre d'Irlande qui, depuis le 1er avril dernier, est distinct douanièrement de la Grande-Bretagne et des six comtés du nord de l'île.

En conséquence, les marchandises originaires d'Irlande seront admises, à leur importation en France, aux droits les plus réduits du tarif des douanes.

SIR, Downing Street, 20th January, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Royal Highness's despatch No. 536 of the 12th October, 1922,* on the subject of the extension to the Union of South Africa and to South-West Africa of the Convention between the United Kingdom and France relating to civil procedure.

2. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has observed that, as the Rules of Court of the Union are based on the rules of the English Supreme Court, the present position as between the Union and France, in regard to the obtaining of evidence and the service of writs in civil and commercial cases, is the same as that which existed between England and France before additional facilities were provided by the conclusion of the Convention.

3. New Rules of the Supreme Court have been issued in this country as a result of the Convention; copies of these Rules† are enclosed. As regards paragraph 3 of Ministers' Minute of the 11th October, 1922,‡ it will be seen that it has not been found necessary to repeal or amend the existing Rules of the Supreme Court, which will continue in force for general purposes, but only to add special Rules for the purposes of the Convention with France.

4. In these circumstances I should be glad to learn whether, in view of the further information now laid before them, your Ministers desire that the provisions of the Convention should be made to apply to the Union of South Africa, and, if the answer is in the affirmative, the necessary steps will be taken to that end. In that event, I should be glad to be informed whether the Minister of Justice of the Union should be substituted for the Senior Master of the Supreme Court in England, as the person to whom applications for service, &c., should be addressed.

WITH reference to Sir W. H. Enclosure 1 in No. 141.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 25th January, 1923.

IN pursuance of paragraph (b) of the Final Provisions of the Convention concluded between Great Britain and France on the 2nd February, 1922, respecting Legal Proceedings in Civil and Commercial Matters, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Government of Newfoundland are desirous that the Convention should be extended to that Island.

2. The Registrar of the Supreme Court of Newfoundland will act, in the same way as the Senior Master of the Supreme Court of Judicature in England, as the person to whom applications for the service of process or for the taking of evidence should be addressed.

3. His Majesty's Government are further desirous of notifying to your Government their wish that the facilities provided by the Convention should be extended to Palestine. The official languages of the Courts of Palestine are English, Arabic and Hebrew, and it is accordingly suggested that communications from French Courts should be accompanied by translations in English, except when they issue from a Court in a French colony where the Court employs Arabic, in which case they might be transmitted in that language.

4. The authorities in Palestine to whom applications for the service of process, &c., should be addressed are the Presidents of the District Courts of the four administrative districts or provinces into which Palestine is divided, each district having its own Court. Applications should accordingly be addressed to the President of the Court in the district in which action is to be taken.

5. In requesting that you will be so good as to acknowledge this communication on behalf of your Government, I have the honour to suggest that the exchange of Notes thus constituted should be regarded as placing the matter on formal record, and that the extension of the terms of the Convention to Newfoundland and Palestine should be considered as coming into force one month after the date of your reply.

Enclosure 1 in No. 145.

Société des Nations, League of Nations, Geneva, 6th January, 1923.

WITH reference to the Secretary to the Cabinet's note, dated 27th October, 1922* (Reference No. 38/H/6), and with a view to the forthcoming publication in the Treaty Series of the League of Nations of the accession of Canada, Australia and South Africa to the Declaration concerning the right to a flag of States having no seacoast, signed at Barcelona on 20th April, 1921, the Secretary-General of the League of Nations would be grateful to be informed whether this accession may be regarded as taking effect as from the date of the receipt of the notification or whether it is desired that the accession should be effective from some other date.

The Right Honourable

The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs,

Foreign Office,

London, S.W.1.

[12422]

Enclosure 2 in No. 145.

THE Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, and is directed by the Secretary of State to acknowledge the receipt of his letter of the 6th January, inquiring whether the accession of Canada, Australia and South Africa to the Barcelona declaration of 20th April, 1921, concerning the right to a flag of states having no sea coast, is to be regarded as taking effect as from the date of the receipt of the notification, or as from some other date.

2. It would appear that the date of the receipt of the notification by the League would be the proper one to select, provided that the same date is also that of the League's acknowledgment of the receipt of the notification, and equally of their announcement of the accession to the signatory powers.

3. In the first instance, however, His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn what is the usual practice of the League in such matters, and whether they have any information as to the practice followed by other governments.

Foreign Office, S.W.1.

8th March, 1923.

Enclosure 3 in No. 145.

League of Nations.

THE Secretary-General of the League of Nations presents his compliments to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and has the honour to acknowledge receipt of the letter of the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, dated 8th March, 1923, on the subject of the date on which the accession of Canada, Australia and South Africa to the Barcelona declaration of 20th April, 1921, concerning the right to a flag of States having no sea coast, should be regarded as taking effect.

2. The Secretary-General begs to explain that for administrative reasons it is almost impossible for the notification of such accessions to be acknowledged and to be announced to the signatory powers on the actual date on which the League receives the notification. In the present case, the notification of accession was received by the Secretariat on 31st October, 1922, and the accession was registered under that date. The receipt of the notification was acknowledged by a letter of 4th November, 1922, addressed to the Secretary to the Cabinet, and the accession was announced to the signatory powers and to the Members of the League in general by a circular letter dated 6th November, 1922.

* Enclosure 5 in No. 106 in Dominions No. 87.

3. The Secretariat had understood from the terms of the final paragraph of the Secretary to the Cabinet's letter of 27th October, 1922,* that His Majesty's Government proposed subsequently to communicate a date from which the accession in question should be effective. It would be in accordance with precedent to treat the accession as effective from the first of the dates above mentioned, namely, 31st October, 1922, and the Secretary-General will be grateful to learn whether His Majesty's Government would be in agreement with this course.

4. The date of the entry into force of accessions to international engagements deposited with the Secretariat depends largely on the special provisions of each particular agreement on this point. In cases where the text does not contain any provisions with regard to accessions, this Secretariat has adopted the practice of regarding the date of the receipt of the notification by the Government concerned as the date on which the accession becomes effective unless the Government itself indicates a different date.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Grace herewith, with reference to your despatch Dominions Treaty No. 19 of the 8th May, 1923,† a copy of a Minute from Ministers on the subject of the accession of the Union of South Africa to the declaration concerning the right to a flag of States having no sea coast, and the general question of the date on which accessions should be regarded as taking effect when the Treaty in question contains no special provision for determining the date.

MINUTE No. 458.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Minute No. 70/2, of the 30th May, 1923, on the subject of the right to a flag of States having no sea coast, and the question of the date from which accessions should be regarded as taking effect in cases where the Treaty to which accession is made contains no special provision for the determination of the dates of accession.

* Enclosure 5 in No. 106 in Dominions No. 87.

† No. 145.

Ministers have the honour to concur in the suggestion of His Majesty's Government contained in the Secretary of State's despatch dated 8th May, 1923, viz. in the case of the declaration concerning the right to a flag of States having no sea coast, it would be most convenient to regard the 31st October, 1922, as the date on which the accession became effective. It is noted that, as a general rule, accessions should be regarded as taking effect on the date on which the notification is received by the headquarters Government in all cases where the Treaty to which accession is made contains no special provision for determining the dates of accession. The headquarters Government should then invariably inform the other parties to the Treaty of this date when officially notifying them of the accession.

Ministers would be glad if the Secretary-General of the League of Nations could be informed accordingly.

MY LORD.

British Legation, Havana, 25th November, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to report that registration of Canadian trade-marks is now being refused by the Cuban Government, on the ground that Canada is not a party to the International Convention of 1883, though this was signed by Great Britain. The facts are as set forth in the enclosed memorandum, of which I have to-day handed a copy to the Cuban Secretary for Agriculture, at an interview with him and the Director of the division of his Department concerned with the registration of trade-marks. The memorandum makes the best case possible, but in the absence of definite information it would appear that the Cuban Government are within their rights in refusing registration.

Previous registrations of Canadian trade-marks were granted, the Secretary points out, in error, and he has now requested me to supply an official declaration to the effect that Canada accepts Cuban trade-marks. He produced, as an example of the sort of thing he has in mind, a Decree of the President of the United States.

* Not printed: it confirmed this telegram.

which agreed to grant reciprocal treatment of copyrights to certain countries, among them Cuba and Great Britain, the latter having offered suitable proof that United States publications are protected in those countries. He suggests a declaration in the same form should be made to Cuba by Canada in the present case.

I suggest that the matter should be brought to the attention of the Canadian Government, who could no doubt supply me with a declaration to the required effect, for the necessary action here.

MEMORANDUM.

CANADIAN TRADE-MARKS.

REGISTRATION of the trade-mark "Fishsmith," belonging to Messrs. A. M. Smith of Halifax, has been refused by the trade-mark section of the Department of Agriculture, "por cuanto el Canada, pais de origen de la marca, no forma parte del Convenio de París, de 20 de marzo, de 1883, y, por lo tanto, no tiene derecho a tener la protección de sus marcas en la República de Cuba."

This statement is not strictly correct, as the Dominion of Canada, as part of the British Empire, is amenable to any convention negotiated by Great Britain on behalf of the entire Empire. At the time the Paris Convention was signed in 1883, Canada unquestionably accepted Great Britain's adherence to the Paris Convention as applicable also to Canada.

But, even on the assumption that Canada is not a signatory of this Convention, the Canadian law extends to aliens the same right of registering their trade-marks as Canadians. Section 9 of the Canadian Trade-mark and Design Act, of which a copy is annexed, provides that any proprietor of a trade-mark, without regard to his nationality or residence, may have such mark registered in Canada.

It is assumed that this information was not possessed by the Department of Agriculture at the time of refusing registration of Messrs. Smith's mark, and it is hoped that the present explanation will be sufficient. Nothing more is asked for than reciprocal treatment, namely, that Canadian marks shall be as well treated in Cuba as Cuban marks are in Canada.

This has been the practice up to date. For instance, the Canadian Cement Company of Montreal, and Messrs. H. R. Silver, Limited, of Halifax, have both obtained registration of their marks. Another instance is No. 37 of the United Drug Company, which was deposited in Cuba on 11th October, 1911, under the number 28866. Messrs. H. R. Silver's mark is for codfish, and it would be a hardship to Messrs. A. M. Smith and an obstacle to them in competing for the trade for Cuba if their own mark, which is also for codfish, were to be refused.

SIR,

Downing Street, 20th January, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st January,* enclosing a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Havana with regard to the refusal of the Cuban Government to register Canadian trade-marks.

2. In the first instance, the Secretary of State would be glad if His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires could be asked by telegraph to supply further details as to the application of Messrs. A. M. Smith, and in particular to state what were the precise grounds of their application, and whether they are a company incorporated in Canada, or a firm composed of individual partners.

* No. 151.

3. If the application was merely put forward on the ground of previous registration in Canada, it would appear that no claim could be based on the provisions of the Industrial Property Convention of 1883, since Canada is not a party to the Convention. If, however, Messrs. Smith are claiming the rights accorded to British subjects by Article 2 of the Convention, it is open to His Majesty's Government to contend that the Cuban Government cannot deny them those rights (assuming that they are individual British subjects, and not a company incorporated in Canada) without a breach of their obligations under the Convention, having regard to the Law Officers' opinion of the 13th October, 1899,* that "British subjects, though residing or domiciled in Colonies or possessions which have not adhered, are entitled to the benefits of . . . Article 2 of the Convention." In this connexion I am to invite reference to your letter of the 25th April, 1922,† and previous correspondence on the subject of the position under a Commercial Treaty of British subjects connected with a Dominion which has not adhered to the Treaty.

4. On the other hand, if Messrs. Smith are a company incorporated in Canada, it might not be possible to put forward a claim that they are entitled as such to the rights conferred upon British subjects by Article 2 of the Convention (vide your letter of the 27th May, 1914,‡ and connected correspondence).

5. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Board of Trade.

I have, &c.,
C. T. DAVIS.

Note.—As a result of inquiry of His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires it appeared that Messrs. A. M. Smith were a Company incorporated in Canada and that their application was based on the previous registration of the trade-mark in Canada.

[Answered by No. 156.]

(No. 171.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 14th April, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Havana has reported to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs that registration of the trade-mark "Fishsmith," belonging to Messrs. A. M. Smith of Halifax, Nova Scotia, has been refused by the trade-mark section of the Department of Agriculture of Cuba "por cuanto el Canada, pais de origen de la marca, no forma parte del Convenio de París de 20 de Marzo de 1883, y, por lo tanto, no tiene derecho a tener la protección de sus marcas en la República de Cuba."

2. Representations were made to the Cuban Secretary for Agriculture, when attention was drawn to the provisions of section 9 of the Canadian Trade Mark and Design Act, and it was pointed out that the Canadian Cement Company of Montreal and Messrs. H. R. Silver, Limited, of Halifax, have both obtained registration of their marks, and that another similar instance given was No. 37 of the United Drug Company which was deposited in Cuba on 11th October, 1911, under the number 28866. It was observed that Messrs. H. R. Silver's mark was for codfish, and that it would be a hardship to Messrs. A. M. Smith, and an obstacle to them in competing for the trade for Cuba, if their own mark, which was also for codfish, were to be refused.

3. The Cuban Secretary stated in reply that previous registrations of Canadian trade-marks were granted in error, and he requested His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires to supply an official declaration to the effect that Canada accepts Cuban trade-marks. He produced, as an example of what he had in mind, a Decree of the President of the United States, which agreed to grant reciprocal treatment of copyrights to certain countries, among them Cuba and Great Britain, the latter having offered suitable proof that United States publications are protected in those countries. He suggested that a declaration in the same form should be made to Cuba by Canada in the present case.

* No. 232A in Vol. V of Law Officers' Opinions. † No. 106 in Dominions No. 87. ‡ No. 157 in Dominions No. 51.

4. It would appear that the objection of the Cuban Trade Marks Office to the registration of the mark in question is based upon Article 11 of the Cuban Trade Marks Decree of the 21st of August, 1884, which provides that foreigners residing outside of Spain shall have the right granted to them by the Treaties concluded with their respective nations, and if there is no Treaty, strict reciprocity shall be observed. Further, under Article 31, entry in the Trade Mark Register is to include the diplomatic convention by which reciprocity in the matter has been established. If this is so, the desire of the Cuban Trade Marks Office is to secure, in the absence of any Convention between Canada and Cuba relating to trade marks, an authoritative statement that Canada grants reciprocal privileges to Cuban citizens.

5. I should be glad to learn whether the Canadian Government can furnish such a statement and, if so, I would suggest that it might be communicated to His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Havana direct.

(No. 33.)

MY LORD,

British Legation, Havana, 8th March, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to refer to my despatch No. 174 of the 25th November last† on the subject of the refusal of the Cuban Government to register Canadian trade-marks on the ground that Canada was not a party to the International Convention of 1883. In the despatch under reference, I had the honour to enclose a memorandum with regard to the Registration of the trade-mark "Fishsmith," owned by Messrs. A. M. Smith of Halifax. This trade-mark has now been registered, and notice of such registration appeared in the Official Gazette of the 3rd instant.

In the decree granting the registration the following facts were taken into consideration, viz.:

1. That the agent of Messrs. A. M. Smith had produced a letter from the Registrar of Trade-marks in Ottawa dated 3rd November, 1922, to the effect that although Canada was not in fact a party to the International Convention, registration of trade-marks is granted in Canada to Cuban citizens on exactly the same terms and conditions as to Canadian citizens, and that Section 9 of the law of Trade-Marks and Patterns grants registration to any owner whatsoever of a trade-mark without regard to nationality or residence.

2. That in view of the above certificate the objections presented by the Department of Agriculture, Commerce and Labour had lost their force, and that considerations of courtesy between the Dominion of Canada and the Republic of Cuba now demanded that reciprocal treatment should be accorded to Canada, especially as no third party was harmed by the registering of the trade-mark in dispute.

* 15748: not printed; it expressed concurrence in the proposal to communicate with the Canadian Government as in No. 153. † Enclosure in No. 151.

While the decision given in this case refers only to Messrs. A. M. Smith's trade-mark it does in point of fact create a precedent whereby other claims for registration of Canadian trade-marks can be pressed, if at some future date the Cuban Government again see fit to refuse it.

SIR,

Government House, Ottawa, 8th of May, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that I have recently received a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies touching the refusal by the Trade-Marks Section of the Department of Agriculture of Cuba of the application of Messrs. A. M. Smith of Halifax, Nova Scotia, for the registration of the trade-mark "Fish-smith," for the reasons that Canada—the country of origin of the mark—is not a party to the Convention of Paris, 1883, and has not furnished official evidence that she registers trade-marks of Cubans on reciprocal terms. In this connexion, I have the honour to inform you that Canada does grant reciprocal privileges respecting trade-marks to Cubans, and that our law makes no reference to reciprocity but provides by Section 9 of the Trade-Mark and Design Act that any proprietor of a trade-mark, without regard to his nationality or residence, is entitled to have the same registered in Canada subject to the provisions of the Act. There is nothing in the Act placing foreigners under any restrictions whatever. They have all the rights of Canadians.

Enclosure in No. 157.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 15TH JANUARY, 1923.
P.C. 50.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 21st December, 1922, from the Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce, submitting that by Minute of Council approved on the 9th of March, 1900, authority was given for the reasons therein mentioned for the submission to Her Majesty's Government of a request that Her Majesty be graciously pleased to take such action as might be necessary to declare the adherence of the Dominion to the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property created in Paris in 1883.

The Minister further submits that in due course a copy of said Minute of Council with copies of the Canadian Patent Act and Trade Mark and Design Act were transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Under date the 7th of July, 1900, a reply was received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the despatch transmitting said copies to the effect that before Canada could comply with certain Articles of the Convention therein mentioned some alteration in the existing Canadian law would be required.

The Minister observes that by amendment since made to the Canadian Patent Act and by further amendment of said Act and amendment of the Canadian Trade Mark and Design Act by the passage of bills prepared for introduction at the Session of Parliament about to be held, Canada will now be in a position to comply with all the Articles of said Convention as will appear by copies of said Acts and Bills hereunto annexed.*

The Minister states that in his opinion satisfactory provision has been made in the Dominion for the protection of inventions, trade marks and designs, patented or registered in the United Kingdom or the Isle of Man.

The Minister therefore recommends that authority be given for the submission to His Majesty's Government of a request that His Majesty will be graciously pleased to take such action as may be necessary to declare the adherence of the Dominion to the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property as revised at Washington in 1911, and to pass an Order in Council applying to the Dominion Section 91 of the Patents and Designs Act, 1907, as amended with such variations or additions, if any, as to His Majesty in Council may seem fit.

The Minister further recommends that copies of said Canadian Acts and Bills be forwarded to His Majesty's Government.

The Committee advise that Your Excellency may be moved to transmit a certified copy of this Minute, together with the documents above-mentioned and annexed, to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

SIR,

Ottawa, 11th July, 1923.

WITH reference to my letter of the 18th January last, on the subject of the adherence of Canada to the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property as revised at Washington in 1911, and to a telegraphic despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 19th April, 1923, I have the honour to transmit herewith copies of Chapter 23—An Act to amend the Trade Mark and Design Act—and of Chapter 28—An Act to amend and consolidate the Acts relating to Patents of Invention—of the Statutes of Canada, 1923. The latter Act came into force on the day of its assent, the 13th June last; the former Act by proclamation of the Governor-in-Council, which was published in the Canada Gazette of the 7th instant, will come into force on the first day of September next. I also enclose six copies of the proclamation.

It will be observed that, in accordance with the suggestion of the Board of Trade contained in the telegraphic despatch above mentioned, provision has been made in Section 3 of the Act amending the Trade Mark and Design Act for the registration and protection of "marques collectives" in accordance with Article 7 bis of the Revised Convention.

In making the declaration of Canada's adhesion pursuant to the terms of the Minute of Council, it is desired that the second class be designated as that in which Canada wishes to be placed under Article 13 of the Convention for the purpose of determining the amount of Canada's contribution to the expenses of the International Office. It is understood from this Article that Canada will be advised by the International Office of the amount of her contribution.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to cause the Secretary of State for the Colonies to be informed in the above sense, at the same time transmitting the enclosed documents.

I have, &c.,

JOSEPH POPE,

Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

MY LORD,

Berne, 8th September, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Lordship's despatch No. 203 of the 9th August† regarding the accession of the Government of the Dominion of Canada to the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, I have the honour to transmit herewith copy of the reply of the Swiss Government to the note addressed to them on the 21st ultimo, enclosing a Circular which has been distributed to the Governments of the States who are already members of the Convention.

Ad. No. 32 (752/467/23).

PAR note du 21 août, la Légation de Grande-Bretagne a bien voulu notifier au Département Politique Fédéral l'accession du Canada à la Convention de Paris du 20 mars 1883 pour la protection de la propriété industrielle, révisée à Bruxelles le 14 décembre 1900 et à Washington le 2 juin 1911.

Le Département Politique a l'honneur de faire savoir à la Légation de Grande-Bretagne que cette accession a été portée à la connaissance des Gouvernements des pays membres de l'Union de la propriété industrielle par une note circulaire, dont ci-joint un exemplaire.

A teneur de la notification de la Légation, et conformément à l'article 16 bis de la Convention d'Union précitée, cette adhésion produit ses effets à partir du 1^{er} septembre 1923.

Le Département croit devoir rappeler que seule, non seulement parmi les colonies britanniques, mais encore parmi tous les pays membres de l'Union internationale, l'Australie n'a pas encore adhéré aux Actes de Washington et continue d'être liée par les actes qui étaient en vigueur dans l'Union avant le 1^{er} mai 1913, date à laquelle la révision du 2 juin 1911, a commencé à déployer ses effets. Il serait reconnaissant à la Légation de vouloir bien attirer à nouveau l'attention du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté Britannique sur cette lacune, qui empêche de réaliser l'unité du régime unioniste.

Le Département saisit cette occasion de renouveler à la Légation l'assurance de sa haute considération.

Berne, le 4 septembre 1923.

A la Légation de Grande-Bretagne, Berne.

Berne, le 1^{er} septembre 1923.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

LE 21 août dernier, la Légation de Grande-Bretagne à Berne nous a fait savoir, avec prière donner connaissance aux Gouvernements des pays membres de l'Union pour la protection de la propriété industrielle, que la Colonie du Canada a accédé à la Convention d'Union de Paris du 20 mars 1883 pour la protection de la propriété industrielle, révisée à Bruxelles le 14 décembre 1900 et à Washington le 2 juin 1911.

A teneur de la note de la Légation et conformément à l'article 16 bis de ladite Convention d'Union, cette adhésion produit ses effets à partir du 1^{er} septembre 1923.

En priant Votre Excellence de vouloir bien prendre note de ce qui précède nous saisissons cette occasion pour Vous renouveler, Monsieur le Ministre, l'assurance de notre haute considération.

Au nom du Conseil fédéral suisse :

Le Président de la Confédération,

25TH JUNE. My telegram 15th March,* as explained in circular letter 31st May, from Secretary General League of Nations CL 45, for constitutional reasons French Government have expressed desire that Protocol should be drawn up for amendment to Article 393 Treaty of Versailles similar to those for amendments to Covenant. This Protocol would be signed by French representative. Secretary General proposes that this Protocol, ratification of which would be equivalent to ratification of text actually adopted by International Labour Conference, should be open for signature by other Members of International Labour Organization. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is advised that it would be convenient that ratification of amendment in question by His Majesty the King should be effected by means of signature of this Protocol and its subsequent ratification by His Majesty, and accordingly proposed that it should be signed on behalf of His Majesty's Government at early date. Presumed that your Ministers would desire signature on their behalf also, and in that case should be glad to learn whom they nominate to sign.—DEVONSHIRE.

SIR, Downing Street, 6th December, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of the text of an amendment to Article 393 of the Treaty of Versailles‡ and the corresponding Articles of the other Treaties of Peace, which was adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organization of the League of Nations during its Fourth Session on the 18th October, 1922.

2. Your Ministers will observe that the general effect of the amendment is to increase the total number of members of the Governing Body of the International Labour Office from twenty-four to thirty-two and the number of Government representatives owing their position to election at the General Conference from four to eight.

* No. 171. † No. 176. ‡ No. 178. § Not reprinted; see Treaty Series 1925, No. 6.

3. The amendment was subsequently embodied in a Protocol which has been ratified by His Majesty. This ratification applies to the whole Empire and thus extends to the Irish Free State as well as to the other Dominion Members of the International Labour Organization and to India.

4. In view of the nature of the Protocol and the fact that it embodied an amendment adopted by a General Conference which was held before the Irish Free State became a separate Member of the International Labour Organization, it was not thought that your Ministers would wish to be consulted prior to ratification.

2. My Ministers realize that it is unnecessary to remind Your Grace that they are responsible for acts done in the name of, and on behalf of the Irish Free State, and that a ratification of which they had no previous knowledge, as in the present case, could not include the Free State. This particular matter was not submitted to my Ministers for approval and has not been examined by them, and they trust that in the circumstances His Majesty's Government will, in order to avoid any misapprehension arising, cause it to be made clear that the ratification which has been signified has not been so signified on behalf of the Irish Free State.

2. This note has been under the consideration of His Majesty's Government, and it is proposed at a suitable moment to inform the French Government that His Majesty's Government agree that the consent of all parties is necessary if the proposed Bureau is to be placed under the League, but that in their view no state which is bound by Article 24 of the Covenant can withhold its consent.

3. The view apparently held by the French Government that Article 24 binds only those governments which originally signed the Covenant and not those which subsequently adhered to it appears to be of very doubtful validity, but there does not seem to be any necessity for contesting it, at the present moment, at any rate.

Enclosure 1 in No. 191.

PAR lettre (No. W. 7638/3049/17), en date du 15 septembre dernier,* Son Excellence le principal Secrétaire d'Etat de Sa Majesté pour les Affaires Etrangères a bien voulu faire savoir à l'Ambassadeur de France que le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté avait décidé d'adhérer à la Convention Internationale, portant création d'un Office international des Epizooties.

Le préambule du projet commence par les mots: "Les Gouvernements ayant jugé utile d'organiser l'Office international des Epizooties, rattaché à l'Office international d'Hygiène publique" d'autre part, l'article 17 des statuts annexés au projet d'arrangement vise également ce rattachement.

Or, parmi les pays qui ont refusé de participer à l'Office international des Epizooties il s'en trouve un certain nombre qui font partie de l'Office international d'Hygiène publique. Le Gouvernement français craint qu'il ne soit très difficile, sinon impossible, d'amener tous ces pays à consentir au rattachement envisagé. Il lui est donc apparu qu'il convenait: 1° d'effacer du préambule de l'arrangement les mots "rattaché à l'Office international d'Hygiène publique"; 2° de supprimer l'article 17 des statuts.

Dans ces conditions, il appartiendrait au Comité de l'Office des Epizooties, lorsqu'il sera en fonction, soit de laisser cet office indépendant, soit d'en poursuivre le rattachement à un organisme déjà existant.

Le Comte de Saint-Aulaire a été chargé de demander au Gouvernement britannique s'il approuve les changements proposés. Dans l'affirmative le Gouvernement français serait heureux que des pleins pouvoirs fussent envoyés aussitôt que possible par le Gouvernement britannique à son représentant à Paris en avisant ce dernier de son assentiment aux dites modifications. Il saisit cette occasion pour renouveler à Sa Seigneurie le Marquis Curzon de Kedleston les assurances de sa haute considération.

Enclosure 2 in No. 191.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1., 11th July, 1923.

IN your Note of the 11th ultimo, Your Excellency communicated to me the reasons for which, in the opinion of the French Government, the International Veterinary Bureau, when formed, could not be attached to the International Office of Public Hygiene, and inquired whether His Majesty's Government had any objection to the text of the proposed Convention creating the Bureau being altered accordingly.

2. I now have the honour to inform Your Excellency that His Majesty's Government have no objection to the proposal of the French Government and they concur in the alterations set out in paragraph 3 of your Note.

3. The necessary authority to sign the Convention on behalf of His Majesty's Government will shortly be sent to His Majesty's Ambassador in Paris.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 27th July, 1923.

In the note which Your Excellency was so good as to address to me on the 15th October last,* you stated the view of the French Government on the question of the relationship between the proposed International Veterinary Bureau and the League of Nations.

2. It appears to His Majesty's Government that, since all members of the League are bound by Article 24 of the Covenant, any international bureau constituted by general treaty after the coming into force of the Covenant can only be kept independent of the League by consent of all parties to the Bureau who are members of the League, and that any State giving its consent would be at liberty to attach a condition that it should be free to withdraw from the Bureau at any time if it were not placed under the direction of the League.

3. His Majesty's Government consider it important, as a matter of general principle, that the Veterinary Bureau should, if possible, be made subordinate to the League, and they would suggest that any non-member of the League which participates in the Bureau should be pressed to agree to this course. For their own part, in consideration of Articles 24 and 20 of the Covenant of the League, His Majesty's Government feel obliged to reserve their right to withdraw at any time from the Bureau if it is not placed under the direction of the League.

(No. 80.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 15th February, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to invite Your Excellency's consideration to the question of communications to your Ministers on international affairs.

2. As you are doubtless aware, for some years past, and to an increasing extent since the late European War, the Governments of the Dominions have been consulted on and kept in continuous touch with Imperial questions of foreign policy. At such times as Dominion Ministers have been present at meetings of Imperial or International Conferences, His Majesty's Government have had the advantage of free discussion with them on these questions. At other times, frequent correspondence is exchanged between the British Government and the Governments of the Dominions, and endeavour is made to keep the latter currently acquainted with any change of circumstance or of policy in which they, no less than the parent country, are vitally concerned.

* No. 146 in Dominions No. 87.

† No. 194.

3. When approached by my predecessor on this subject, Mr. Griffith and the members of the Provisional Government intimated that they did not wish to begin the consideration of matters of this nature until such time as their Departmental arrangements for dealing with communications on the subject were more fully advanced.

4. While His Majesty's Government are for the present continuing to act on this understanding, they are ready to arrange for the necessary facilities whenever your Ministers feel themselves free to consider those wider aspects of policy which jointly concern the nations incorporated in the British Commonwealth, and have informed Your Excellency that they desire to do so.

I HAVE the honour to advert to Your Grace's despatch No. 80 of the 15th February* with reference to the question of communications from His Majesty's Government to the Government of the Irish Free State on International Affairs, and to inform you that my Ministers are of opinion that it would be advisable to continue provisionally the understanding arrived at between the late President Griffith and Mr. Winston Churchill, mentioned in paragraph 3 of your despatch, whereby such communications and consultations were deferred until such time as the Irish Government should be in a position to deal adequately with matters of this nature.

2. Mr. Fitzgerald was shown various papers bearing on the matter, and I now transmit, under separate cover, for your secret information and that of the President of the Executive Council and Mr. Fitzgerald, a selection of Foreign Office papers† dealing with various aspects of the present position.

3. Mr. Fitzgerald further asked that copies of certain telegrams to the Dominion Governments on the subject of the Near East situation might be supplied, and copies of these are enclosed.‡ It will be observed that in my official telegram of the 27th October§ reference was made to a proposal that any Treaties negotiated at the Lausanne Conference should be signed separately on behalf of the Dominions. 56064

No. 200.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 21st November, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 201.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 20th November, 1923.

WITH reference to Colonial Office letter of the 4th May, 1922,† I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit herewith, for the information of the Duke of Devonshire, a copy of a letter written from Geneva by Mr. Malkin, Assistant Legal Adviser to this Department, and enclosing a copy of a letter from Dr. Van Hamel of the Secretariat General of the League, regarding the position of the Irish Free State in connexion with the ratification of the Barcelona Convention regarding Freedom of Transit, the Barcelona Convention regarding Navigable Waterways, the additional protocol regarding Navigable Waterways, the Barcelona Declaration recognizing the right to a Flag of States having no Sea Coast, the Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Women and Children, the Protocol establishing the Permanent Court, and the Amendments to the Covenant of the League of Nations.

2. The letter from your Department to the Secretary of the Provisional Government, dated 2nd May, 1922,‡ informed them that international conventions already in force would continue to apply to the Irish Free State, when it was established, unless or until they were modified; and that this position would further apply to international conventions signed prior to the legalization of the articles of agreement with the Irish Free State and then due for formal ratification, such as the International Air Convention concluded in 1919, the treaties concluded at the Washington Conference on Disarmament, at the second Assembly of the League of Nations, and at Barcelona in 1921.

3. It appears further from a memorandum enclosed in an unofficial letter from Mr. Antrobus of your Department to Mr. Malkin of the Foreign Office, dated 25th April, 1922,§ that this arrangement was also considered to cover the Convention relating to the Traffic in Women and Children drawn up at the second Assembly of the League of Nations in 1921.

* No. 198. † 20759: not printed; it enclosed a copy of No. 152 in Dominions No. 87. ‡ No. 152 in Dominions No. 87. § 18973: not printed; it enclosed a memorandum setting out the position and the draft of No. 152 in Dominions No. 87.

4. The protocol establishing the Permanent Court of International Justice was ratified on behalf of the British Empire on 4th August, 1921; and though it is not specifically mentioned in the memorandum enclosed in Mr. Antrobus's letter of 25th April, 1922,* it may, in the Secretary of State's opinion, be considered as coming within the arrangement referred to in the memorandum contained in that letter.

5. All the amendments to the Covenant of the League of Nations (except those to Article 16, which have not yet been signed) were signed on behalf of the British Empire (including Ireland) and Australia, on 17th May, 1922, and separate signatures were affixed on behalf of the other Dominions which were then separate members of the League. Ratifications on behalf of the whole Empire were deposited at various dates between 3rd November, 1922, and 5th July, 1923.

6. It is therefore clear that as regards each of the instruments mentioned in Dr. Van Hamel's letter the Irish Free State is, and was at the time when it became a member of the League, bound by a ratification which had been previously deposited, and that no further ratification on behalf of the Free State is possible or desirable. If His Grace concurs in this view, the Secretary of State will cause a reply to this effect to be returned to Dr. Van Hamel.

7. I am to ask the favour of an early reply, in order that a complete answer may be sent as soon as possible to Monsieur Van Hamel's letter.

I am, &c.,

HERBERT MONTGOMERY.

Enclosure in No. 200.

British Delegation, Hotel Bellevue, Geneva,

19th October, 1923.

MY DEAR MOUNSEY,

THE enclosed letter from Van Hamel, the Director of the Legal Section of the Secretariat, is the result of a discussion I had with him to-day, and is, I think, self-explanatory.

I did not like to give him an answer at once as I could only speak from memory, so I told him that, if he would put his point on paper, I would send it home; they are extremely anxious not to do anything which would annoy either us or the Irish Free State, and would therefore be grateful for some directions.

My recollection is:—

(1) That the Irish Free State is already bound as regards each of the Conventions mentioned by Van Hamel by a ratification deposited on behalf of the whole Empire.

(2) That the position of the Irish Free State was considered in consultation with the Colonial Office before the ratification of each of the Conventions in question was deposited and that the Irish Free State knows that it is already bound and is content to be so bound.

(3) That in these circumstances it would be better for the Secretariat not to send any of the Conventions to the Free State at all.

It is, however, important that no mistake should be made about this, as I have no doubt that the Secretariat will act in accordance with what we may tell them, and I should therefore be much obliged if you would, after consulting the Colonial Office if you think it necessary, send me a reply which I can hand to Van Hamel as a sufficiently official expression of our views.

Van Hamel suggested that, even if the Free State was bound by a ratification already deposited, it might be better that some further form of ratification on its behalf should be deposited; I told him that such a course was out of the question, and I think he is quite willing to drop the idea if he is only given a sufficient lead by us.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. MALKIN.

G. Mounsey, Esq.,

Foreign Office,

Downing Street, London, S.W.1.

* 18973: not printed; it enclosed a memorandum setting out the position and the draft of No. 152 in Dominions No. 87.

MY DEAR MALKIN,

League of Nations, Geneva, 19th October, 1923.

As I have already told you, we are in some difficulties in the Secretariat with regard to the following point:—

It is the practice of the Secretariat to send to newly-admitted Members of the League the texts of the international instruments, ratifications of which are receivable by the Secretariat, in order that the new Members may have their attention called to these instruments and in some cases to the special desirability of ratifying them.

The question which now arises is whether any of these instruments should be sent with this object to the Irish Free State. This raises the question as to how far the Irish Free State may or may not already be covered and bound by signatures and ratifications already given on behalf of, or by, the King.

The documents in question are:

Barcelona Convention re Freedom of Transit.

Barcelona Convention re Navigable Waterways.

Additional Protocol re Navigable Waterways.

Barcelona Declaration recognizing the right of a Flag to States having no Sea-coast.

Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Women and Children.

The Protocol establishing the Permanent Court.

Amendments to the Covenant.

We have examined all the instruments of ratification dealing with these matters, but in deciding which documents, if any, should be presented to the newly elected Member of the League—Ireland—we are anxious to follow a line on which probably both parties have already agreed.

I should be very glad if you could let me have some information on this point at your earliest convenience.

Yours sincerely,

VAN HAMEL.

WITH reference to your letter of the 20th November,* regarding the position of the Irish Free State in connexion with the ratification of certain conventions and protocols and the amendments to the Covenant of the League of Nations, I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that he agrees with the view expressed in the sixth paragraph of the letter.

2. His Grace suggests that the reply to the Secretariat of the League should take the form that the instruments referred to by Dr. Van Hamel, except the amendments to Article 16 of the Covenant, which are still under consideration, were signed for the British Empire (including Ireland) before the admission of the Irish Free State to Membership of the League, and that as the result of His Majesty's Ratification they are, with the exception referred to, binding on the Irish Free State, and that, therefore, no further action either on the part of the League or of the Irish Free State is required.

TELEGRAM.

[Answered by No. 210.]

3RD SEPTEMBER. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Have cabled to our representative at Geneva in the following terms: Although information available either through the Press or through communication(s) received from British Government very incomplete, it appears clear a situation has arisen between two members of the League of Nations, Italy and Greece, which, unless definite action is taken by the League, will result in war. From some Press cables it would appear that actual hostilities have already been commenced by Italy in breach of her obligations under the Covenant of the League of Nations. In view of the position which has arisen it is imperative that the Australian delegation should take all possible steps to ensure that the terms of the Covenant are adhered to and that the dispute which has arisen should be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the Covenant. As Australia's senior delegate you must take the earliest possible steps to advise the Assembly that Australia as a member of the nations of the League adhering to the Covenant is prepared to support the League in ensuring that the provisions of the Covenant are carried into effect. I am advising the British Government as to the views of the Commonwealth, but you will, of course, consult representatives of Britain and other Dominions at Geneva. Ends.

Cannot urge upon you too strongly the necessity for definite action being taken to ensure that the present dispute is handled by the League of Nations, as public opinion has grown up in Australia in favour of the League, and would emphatically resent fullest support not being given to the League particularly by Britain and Dominions where a breach of the Covenant has been committed by any nation. Message ends.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th March, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 15 of the 25th of January,* I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's ratification of the Protocols drawn up at Geneva on the 5th of October, 1921, with regard to amendments to Articles 4, 13, 15 and 26 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, was deposited on the 3rd of February. A copy of the letter from the Secretary-General of the League notifying the deposit, is enclosed.

2. The amendments are as follows:—

Article 4.—The following paragraph is inserted between paragraphs 2 and 3 of the Article: "The Assembly shall fix by a two-thirds majority the rules dealing with the election of the non-permanent Members of the Council, and particularly such regulations as relate to their term of office and the conditions of re-eligibility."

Article 13 as amended reads: "The Members of the League agree that, whenever any dispute shall arise between them which they recognize to be suitable for submission to arbitration or judicial settlement and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy, they will submit the whole subject-matter to arbitration or judicial settlement."

"Disputes as to the interpretation of a Treaty, as to any question of international law, as to the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of any international obligation, or as to the extent and nature of the reparation to be made for any such breach, are declared to be among those which are generally suitable for submission to arbitration or judicial settlement."

"For the consideration of any such dispute, the court to which the case is referred shall be the Permanent Court of International Justice, established in accordance with Article 14, or any tribunal agreed on by the parties to the dispute, or stipulated in any convention existing between them."

"The Members of the League agree that they will carry out in full good faith any award or decision that may be rendered, and that they will not resort to war against a Member of the League which complies therewith. In the event of any failure to carry out such an award or decision, the Council shall propose what steps should be taken to give effect thereto."

Article 15. The first paragraph of Article 15 shall read as follows: "If there should arise between Members of the League any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, which is not submitted to arbitration or judicial settlement in accordance with Article 13, the Members of the League agree that they will submit the matters to the Council. Any party to the dispute may effect such submission by giving notice of the existence of the dispute to the Secretary-General, who will make all necessary arrangements for a full investigation and consideration thereof."

* No. 217.

(b) A paragraph reading as follows shall be added after the first paragraph of Article 26: "If the required number of ratifications shall not have been obtained within twenty-two months after the vote of the Assembly, the proposed amendment shall remain without effect."

(c) The second paragraph of the present Article 26 shall be replaced by the two following paragraphs: "The Secretary-General shall inform the Members of the taking effect of an amendment."

(No. 87.)

SIR, Downing Street, 26th July, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 43, of the 9th March,* I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's ratification of the Protocol drawn up at Geneva on the 5th October, 1921, embodying an amendment of Article 12 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, was deposited on the 5th July.

2. The Article as amended, now reads as follows:—"The Members of the League agree that, if there should arise between them any dispute likely to lead to a rupture, they will submit the matter either to arbitration or judicial settlement or to inquiry by the Council, and they agree in no case to resort to war, until three months after the award by the arbitrators or the judicial decision, or the report by the Council."

In any case, under this Article, the award of the arbitrators or the judicial decision shall be made within a reasonable time, and the report of the Council shall be made within six months after the submission of the dispute."

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

(2) Proposed Amendment of Article 10.

Note.—Article 10 of the Covenant of the League of Nations reads as follows:—

"The Members of the League agree to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all Members of the League. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

In 1921 Canada proposed that this Article should be deleted. The Assembly of 1921 decided to adjourn the discussion of the question until the next year. At the Assembly of 1922, the Canadian Delegates proposed that the Article should not be deleted but should be amended by adding the words "taking into account the political and geographical circumstances of each State," and also adding the following paragraph:—

"The opinion given by the Council in such cases shall be regarded as a matter of the highest importance and shall be taken into consideration by all Members of the League, which shall use their utmost endeavours to conform to the conclusions of the Council, but no Member shall be under the obligation to engage in any act of war without the consent of its Parliament, Legislature or other representative body."

The Assembly of 1922 again decided to adjourn a decision on the proposal, and in a letter of the 22nd February, 1923, the Secretary-General of the League asked the various Members for their observations on the matter. The following correspondence with the Dominions then took place.

18TH MAY. His Majesty's Government are examining questions raised by letter from Secretary-General, League of Nations, 22nd February,* as to proposed amendment of Article 10 of Covenant; but, in view of important issues involved, they would prefer to postpone definite reply pending consultation with Dominion Governments. Suggested that most convenient course would be that matter should be discussed in London with representatives of Dominions during the summer before opening of Assembly. Do your Ministers concur in suggestion and, if so, whom would they nominate to attend discussion. Similar telegram sent to other Dominions.—DEVONSHIRE.

Note.—At the Assembly of 1923, the First Committee proposed the adoption of the following interpretative resolution:—

"The Assembly, desirous of defining the scope of the obligations contained in Article 10 of the Covenant so far as regards the points raised by the Delegation of Canada, adopts the following resolution:—

It is in conformity with the spirit of Article 10 that, in the event of the Council considering it to be its duty to recommend the application of military measures in consequence of an aggression or danger or threat of aggression, the Council shall be bound to take account, more particularly, of the geographical situation and of the special conditions of each State.

It is for the constitutional authorities of each Member to decide, in reference to the obligation of preserving the independence and the integrity of the territory of Members, in what degree the Member is bound to assure the execution of this obligation by employment of its military forces.

The recommendation made by the Council shall be regarded as being of the highest importance and shall be taken into consideration by all the Members of the League with the desire to execute their engagements in good faith."

When the Resolution came before the Assembly, 29 States voted in favour of and one against the Resolution, while 13 abstained from voting. The President declared that, as unanimity had not been obtained, he was unable to declare the Resolution adopted, but that he would not declare the motion rejected, and accordingly he declared it not adopted. It was decided that the result of the voting should be communicated to the Council.

Would your Ministers agree to signature and ratification of these protocols on their behalf, and, if so, whom do they nominate to sign? Early decision desirable, as it is possible that when second amendment to Article 26, dealing with amendments to Covenant, comes into force, it may be regarded as having retrospective effect, in which case amendments now in question would lapse unless brought into force by 4th August next. [MY LORD,] [SIR,] further consideration to the question of the ratification of the Protocols embodying the amendments to Article 16 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, passed by the Second Assembly.

2. The division of the amendments to Article 16 into four separate Protocols appears to be unfortunate owing to the confusion which would arise in the event of the Protocols, as might easily happen, not entering into force simultaneously. It might in such an event be almost impossible to decide what were the precise contractual relations under the Article at any given moment between any two given members of the League. His Majesty's Government, therefore, consider that it would be desirable to incorporate all the amendments to Article 16 into one ratification in order that, so far as the British Empire is concerned, the arrangement may be made as simple as is possible in the circumstances.

3. As a result of the recent negotiations with the French Government regarding the text of the first part of Article 16, it will be necessary to propose a new amendment at the next Assembly. It would seem desirable to take the opportunity at the same time to obtain the elimination of the words "in such case" in the present second paragraph of the Article, which will eventually become paragraph 5. The necessity for the omission of these words in the event of the adoption of the second, third, and fourth amendments seems not to have been properly considered by the Second Assembly.

[To Australia only: In this connexion, I would invite reference to your telegram of the 6th September, 1922,* and to my telegram of the 15th May.†]

4. For the reasons already indicated, His Majesty's Government consider that it will be best to defer ratification of any of the amendments until after the next Assembly, which will, it may be hoped, adopt the new amendment referred to in the preceding paragraph. There could then be a single ratification by His Majesty covering all the changes in the Article. It is realized that the delay may involve difficulties owing to the time limit proposed in the amendment to Article 26 of the Covenant, which may enter into force before the amendments to Article 16 have been ratified, but His Majesty's Government consider it preferable in the circumstances to risk this contingency.

SIR, Downing Street, 20th August, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a memorandum§ circulated by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs regarding the proposed amendment of the first paragraph of Article 16 of the Covenant of the League of Nations. His Majesty's Government are prepared to recommend the adoption of the text contained in Annex 1 to the memorandum, and the Dominion Members of the League have been invited to consider it, with a view to its being supported, if possible, by their Delegates as well as by the Delegates from this country at the forthcoming meeting of the Assembly.

2. I also enclose a copy of the Report of the Inter-Departmental Committee mentioned in the enclosed memorandum, which was appointed in 1922 to consider the amendments to Article 16 of the Covenant adopted by the Second Assembly in 1921. It is intended that the protocols embodying the second, third and fourth of these amendments (which are quoted in paragraph 2 (2), (3) and (4) of the Committee's Report) should be ratified by His Majesty after signature on behalf of this country and of the Dominion Members of the League and India.

* No. 226. † No. 231. ‡ No. 232. § Not printed: see Note§ to No. 232. || See enclosure in No. 177 in Dominions No. 87.

3. It will be necessary to propose at the forthcoming Assembly that, in the event of the amendments referred to in the previous paragraph coming into effect, the words "in such case" in the present second paragraph of Article 16 (which will eventually become the fifth paragraph) should be eliminated. The necessity for the omission of these words in the event of the amendments in question being finally adopted seems not to have been properly considered by the Second Assembly.

4. Should the amendments referred to in paragraphs 1 and 3 be adopted at the Fourth Assembly it is contemplated that there should be one ratification by His Majesty covering (a) these two amendments (b) the three amendments referred to in paragraph 2 adopted by the Second Assembly.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

Note.—The proposals referred to in No. 232 and paragraph 3 of No. 231 were put forward by the Delegates of His Majesty's Government at the Assembly of the League of Nations (see League of Nations paper A.26.1923.V of the 10th August, 1923). The Assembly decided to defer discussion of the proposals until the Fifth Assembly (see League of Nations paper A.86.1923.V of the 19th September and A.92.1923 of the 22nd September, 1923). (4) Reduction of Armaments.—Proposed Treaty of Mutual Guarantee.

Note.—The Third Assembly of the League of Nations in September, 1922, adopted the following resolutions:—

"(1) No scheme for the reduction of armaments, within the meaning of Article 8 of the Covenant, can be fully successful unless it is general.

(2) In the present state of the world, many Governments would be unable to accept the responsibility for a serious reduction of armaments unless they received in exchange a satisfactory guarantee for the safety of their countries.

(3) Such a guarantee can be found in a defensive agreement which should be open to all countries, binding them to provide immediate and effective assistance in accordance with a pre-arranged plan in the event of one of them being attacked, provided that the obligation to render assistance to a country attacked, shall be limited in principle to those countries situated in the same part of the globe. In cases, however, where, for historical, geographical or other reasons, a country is in special danger of attack, detailed arrangements should be made for its defence in accordance with the above-mentioned plan.

(4) As a general reduction of armaments is the object of the preceding resolutions, and the Treaty of Mutual Guarantee the means of achieving that object, previous consent to this reduction is therefore the first condition of the Treaty.

This reduction could be carried out either by means of a general Treaty, which is the most desirable plan, or by means of partial Treaties designed to be extended and open to all countries.

In the former case, the Treaty will carry with it a general reduction of armaments. In the latter case, the reduction should be proportionate to the guarantees afforded by the Treaty.

The Council of the League, after having taken the advice of the Temporary Mixed Commission, which will examine how each of these two systems could be carried out, will further formulate the plan on which the Governments will be invited to express their views and to give an independent decision for the machinery, at the same time political and military, necessary to bring them clearly into effect."

These proposals were referred by the Council of the League to the various members, and a draft Treaty prepared by Lord Robert Cecil was considered by the Permanent Advisory Commission to the League in April, 1923, when the following telegrams were addressed to the Dominions.

Geneva, 3rd November, 1923.

In my Circular Letter No. 56, of 26th May, 1923, I had the honour to forward the text of a Draft Protocol dealing with arbitration clauses in commercial contracts and to inform you that, in accordance with the Council's decision dated 18th April, 1923, a proposal would be laid before the Fourth Assembly to the effect that the Protocol in question should be open for signature by all States desiring to adhere to it.

On 24th September, 1923, the Assembly adopted the following resolution:—

"The Assembly:

"Realizing the desirability and urgency of assuring by an international agreement a more general recognition of the validity of the arbitration agreement, whether referring to present or future differences, which is designed to regulate, by means of arbitration, differences that may arise in connexion with contracts, and specially with commercial contracts, concluded between persons subject to the jurisdiction of different States;

"Recognizing the great importance which commercial circles attach to the prompt settlement of this question;

"Considering that the text of the attached Protocol submitted by the Second Committee differs from that which was communicated to the Members of the League by Circular Letter No. 56 of 26th May, 1923, only as regards a few details of drafting, which do not involve any modifications of substance:

"Decides to open the attached Protocol immediately for signature by the States, expressing the desire that the greatest possible number of States may adhere to it as soon as possible."

In accordance with the decision of the Assembly, I now have the honour to hand you a certified true copy of the Protocol concerning Arbitration Clauses, which was opened at Geneva for signature by all the States on 24th September, 1923.*

I do not think it necessary to emphasize the importance attached by the Fourth Assembly to participation by the greatest possible number of States in this international agreement.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

Downing Street, [7th] [6th] December, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of the Convention† drawn up at the International Conference on Customs and other similar formalities, held at Geneva during October and November, 1923, together with the Protocol to the Convention and the Final Act of the Conference.

† C.D.1, 96 (1) 1923: not reprinted. (See Treaty Series 1925, No. 16, for text.)

2. It will be seen from Article 29 that any State signing the Convention may, at the moment of ratification, declare that its acceptance does not include any or all of its colonies, overseas possessions, etc., and I should be glad to learn whether your Ministers would wish a declaration in this sense to be made in respect of [Newfoundland,] [Southern Rhodesia,] at the time of deposit of His Majesty's ratification. In this connexion, I would invite attention to paragraph 6 of the Final Act of the Conference.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions Treaty No. 58 of the 16th November, 1922,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] for the information of your Ministers, copies of further Notes exchanged between the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the United States Embassy, regarding the preamble of the proposed Treaties with the United States affecting certain ex-German territories in Central Africa now administered by His Majesty's Government under Mandates on behalf of the League of Nations.

Enclosure 1 in No. 248.

(No. 639.)

MY LORD,

London, 24th March, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Lordship's note of 30th September, 1922, regarding the British Mandates for the administration of certain former German territories in tropical Africa and the proposed Treaties relative thereto, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that my Government, animated by the desire of reaching an early agreement with the British Government, and in view of the assurance contained in paragraph 5 of your note, that the British Government has not the slightest intention to discriminate against United States nationals or institutions, by subjecting their operations to restrictions not equally applicable to British nationals and institutions, is disposed to accept the wording proposed by the British Government for Article 8 of the Mandate for East Africa, and Article 7 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons which is substantially similar to paragraph 1 of Article 2 of the Treaty between the United States and Japan, regarding the former German Islands north of the Equator, without making this acceptance subject to the insertion in the Treaties of an additional article.

It is understood, however, that such acquiescence in the proposals of the British Government with regard to African Mandates in no way affects the position heretofore taken by the Government of the United States with regard to American missionary and educational institutions in territories which may come under "A" Mandates.

* No. 191 in Dominions No. 87.

My Government regrets that, with regard to the preamble of the African Treaties, it is unable to concur in the proposal set forth in paragraph 7 of Your Lordship's note. However, the Government of the United States, having in mind the position taken in paragraph 5 of the British note of 2nd October, 1922, as to the preamble for the Treaty relating to the Palestine Mandate and the desirability of making the Treaties with Great Britain and the Treaties with France as to African territories identical in form and substance, is confident that the British Government will not find it impossible to adopt the text proposed in a memorandum to the British Ambassador of 8th July, 1922,* which text is substantially the same as that used in the French Treaties which have been recently signed.

I have the honour to state further that my Government is willing to proceed immediately to the signature of these proposed Conventions, the full texts of which are contained in the drafts transmitted herewith.

Enclosure 2 in No. 248.

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W.1, 26th November, 1923.

It was with much gratification that His Majesty's Government learnt from Mr. Harvey's note of the 24th March last, that the United States Government were now in agreement with them as to the substantive portion of the proposed Anglo-American Treaties affecting the former German territories in Central Africa now administered by His Majesty's Government under Mandate on behalf of the League of Nations.

2. The delay which has arisen in replying to that note has been caused by the difficulties found to exist in the text of the preamble suggested by the United States Government for the Treaties in question; His Majesty's Government regret that they have not been able, after careful consideration, to overcome their objection to certain passages in this text.

3. In the first place, reference is made in the suggested preamble to benefits accruing to the United States under Article 119 of the Treaty of Versailles and confirmed by the Treaty between the United States and Germany signed on 25th August, 1921. His Majesty's Government cannot admit that any benefits have accrued to the United States under a Treaty which the latter have not ratified, or that, in the case of the territories now under Mandate, Germany retained after the entry into force of the Treaty of Versailles any rights over or in them which she could subsequently transfer to the United States. As was stated in Mr. Harvey's memorandum of the 24th August, 1921,* the renunciation made by Germany under Article 119 of the Treaty of Versailles was indivisible, and no part of the sovereignty over the territories affected remained to Germany thereafter.

4. Paragraph 4 of the suggested preamble states that Japan agreed, and implies that the United States did not agree, that His Britannic Majesty should exercise the Mandates now in question. His Majesty's Government are unable to set their signature to a text containing either statement or implication. As is well known, the allocation of the Mandates was made unanimously at a meeting of the Supreme Council at Versailles on 7th May, 1919, at which President Wilson, but no Japanese representative, was present. Japan had no part in the allocation: and though Mr. Wilson has repudiated any participation in the decision relating to the island of Yap, I am not aware that it has hitherto been claimed that he did not agree to the distribution of the other Mandates.

5. His Majesty's Government have no desire to enter into controversy on these matters; it would in their view be of no advantage to do so. It was with the object of avoiding argument that they proposed the simple form of preamble set forth at the end of my note of the 30th September, 1922.† They entertain the hope that after further consideration, the United States Government will be able to accept either that text or some other which does not raise the difficulties which I have ventured to point out.

MY LORD DUKE, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 7th April, 1923.

WITH reference to your predecessor's Confidential despatch, dated 18th August, 1922,* covering a copy of correspondence with the United States Ambassador in London on the subject of "C" Mandates, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform Your Grace that the Commonwealth Government is desirous of deferring an expression of its views on the suggestions made in the Ambassador's note, dated 26th July, 1922,† until there has been an opportunity for the Governments of the Empire, viz., His Majesty's Government, the Commonwealth, New Zealand, and South African Governments, to consider in consultation the requests of the Government of the United States which affect all of them. My Prime Minister adds that the Imperial Conference will provide a suitable opportunity for such a discussion.

No. 250.

EXTRACT FROM CONCLUSIONS OF A MEETING OF A COMMITTEE OF THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE, HELD AT THE COLONIAL OFFICE ON THE 23RD OCTOBER, 1923.

THE Committee considered the following requests made by the United States Government in their Memoranda of the 24th August, 1921,‡ and the 26th July, 1922,† as set out in Paper E. 76.

(1) Article 5 of the "C" Mandates should be changed so as to grant to United States Missionaries equal treatment with that guaranteed by the Mandates to Missionaries who are nationals of States members of the League.

(2) The United States Government desired a guarantee of most-favoured-nation treatment in all "C" Mandated Territories.

(3) There should be a provision prohibiting monopolistic concessions by the Mandatory, or monopolising of natural resources by the Mandatory itself.

(4) Modification of the Mandates should be subject to the assent of the United States.

(5) Pending the conclusion of a definite agreement as to "C" Mandates, the United States Government asked that they might receive duplicates of the Reports submitted to the League of Nations on the administration of "C" Mandated Territories.

As regards (2), it was pointed out that, apart from their representations as to "C" Mandated Territories generally, the United States Government had made special representations, based on Article III of the Treaty of the 2nd December, 1899, between the United States, Germany and Great Britain relating to Samoa, to the effect that the British preferential tariff in Western Samoa should be extended to United States goods.

It was agreed that no reply need be sent to the United States Government on the general question raised unless, and until, that Government brought the matter forward again. The Committee, whilst determining that there should be further consultation as to the exact terms of the reply, arrived at the following conclusions as to the general nature of the reply which might be returned, should the United States Government raise the matter again and press for an answer.

* No. 196 in Dominions No. 87.

† Enclosure 1 in No. 195 in Dominions No. 87.

‡ Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

As regards (1) the Committee saw no objection to an assurance being given to the United States Government that their Missionaries would be granted the treatment desired.

As regards (2), it was pointed out that what the United States Government really desired was national treatment.

As regards all the "C" Mandated Territories, the position was that, under Article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, and under the Mandate itself, the Mandatory has absolute right to treat them as an integral part of its Territory, subject only to certain specified rights in favour of the native inhabitants; and therefore the claim of the United States Government to receive national treatment as regards all the "C" Mandated Territories was inconsistent with both the Covenant and the Mandate.

As regards the Mandated Territory of South West Africa in particular, it was explained that in this respect it was in a special position. South-West Africa is treated, for Customs purposes, as part of the Union of South Africa, and consequently, if preference were granted to United States goods imported into that Territory, those goods would, in effect, have preference in all parts of the Union of South Africa, a position which the Government of the Union was not prepared to accept.

It was therefore agreed that it was impossible to grant the request of the United States Government for national treatment in "C" Mandated Territories generally.

As regards (3), the Committee considered that an assurance might possibly be given as regards monopolies on similar lines to the reply of His Majesty's Government in the case of "B" Mandated Territories.*

In the event of the United States Government raising any question as to Nauru in this connexion, it would be sufficient to explain to them that the position with respect to the Phosphate resources of the Island was merely that the three Governments concerned (i.e., His Majesty's Government and the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand) had acquired by direct purchase through voluntary sale on the part of the owners, and not through the Mandate, exclusive rights granted before the War by the German Government to a private company.

As regards (4), the matter should be reserved for further consideration.

As regards (5), the Committee saw no objection to the request being granted.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 29th October, 1923.)

THE Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs presents his compliments to the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies and, by direction of the Secretary of State, transmits herewith copy of a note from the United States Ambassador on the subject of the United States Government and Mandates.

Foreign Office,

27th October, 1923.

Enclosure in No. 251.

(No. 1071.)

MY LORD,

London, 25th October, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to refer to previous communications on the subject of Mandates.

The matter of the so-called "A" Mandates has, of course, been in abeyance pending the settlement of the Near Eastern question.

As to the "B" Mandates, Conventions were signed between the United States and France on 13th February, 1923, in regard to those parts of Togoland and the Cameroons that are under French Mandate, and between the United States and Belgium on 18th April, 1923, in regard to the Territory of Ruanda and Urundi. In relation to the British "B" Mandates covering portions of Togoland and the Cameroons, I am awaiting a reply to my communication of 24th March, 1923.* I had the honour in that communication to inform Your Lordship that my Government, animated by the desire to reach an early agreement with the British Government, and in view of Your Lordship's assurances that the British Government did not have the slightest intention to discriminate against United States nationals or institutions by subjecting their operations to restrictions not equally applicable to British nationals and institutions, was disposed to accept the wording proposed by the British Government in Article 8 of the Mandate for East Africa and Article 7 of the Mandates for Togoland and the Cameroons which are substantially similar to paragraph 1 of Article 2 of the Treaty between the United States and Japan regarding the former German islands north of the Equator, without making this acceptance subject to the insertion in the Treaties of an additional article. I stated that it was to be understood, however, that this acquiescence in the proposals of the British Government with regard to African Mandates would in no way affect the position heretofore taken by the Government of the United States with respect to American Missionary and educational institutions in Territories which might come under "A" Mandates.

The only point of difference between the two Governments with respect to the "B" Mandates appears to be in relation to the recitals of the preamble of the proposed Treaty. It may again be pointed out that the preamble as proposed by my Government is substantially the same as that used in the French and Belgian Conventions with respect to "B" Mandates and in the Treaty with Japan with respect to the former German islands in the Pacific north of the Equator. I again express the hope that this wording which has been found acceptable by these three Governments will be approved by the British Government especially as it is not understood that there is any difference in the attitude or policy of the British Government which would require a difference in statement.

I desire at this time to refer particularly to the "C" Mandates covering the former German Possessions in the Pacific Ocean south of the Equator and the Territory which formerly constituted German South-west Africa. As you have been advised, a Treaty was concluded between the United States and Japan in relation to North Pacific islands for which His Majesty the Emperor of Japan is the Mandatory. This Treaty, signed on 11th February, 1922, became effective on 13th July, 1922. The general subject of the relation of the United States to Mandated Territories was considered in the communication which I made to Your Lordship under instructions from my Government on 24th August, 1921.† In this communication I referred to the position already taken by my Government, that the right to dispose of the overseas possessions of Germany was acquired only through the victory of the Allied and Associated Powers and that there could be no valid or effective disposition of these Territories without the assent of the United States as one of the participants in that victory. It was assumed in this view and in the light of the fundamental principles recognized by the British Government as applicable to the administration of Mandated Territories that there would be no disposition to discriminate against the United States or to refuse to safeguard equality of commercial opportunity. In the same communication the following proposals were made with regard to the "C" Mandates except as to the Island of Yap:

"(a) Article 5 should be changed so as to embrace nationals of the United States and to avoid ambiguity as to educational and charitable activities of Missionaries. It would be preferable to have the same provision as in Article 8 of the British 'B' Mandate for German East Africa.

"(b) All 'C' Mandates treat Mandated Territory for administration and legislation as an integral portion of the Territory of the Mandatory. This, unless qualified, would permit discrimination. It is desired that the Mandatories respectively should guarantee to the United States most-favoured-nation treatment in all 'C' Mandate Territories, reserving, however, the present special Treaty rights of the United States as to German Samoa under Article 3 of the Treaty concluded at Washington, 2nd December, 1899. The Government of the United States has already protested‡ against the discriminatory tariff imposed by New Zealand in violation of this Treaty, in which connexion reference is made to the note of the Foreign Office, dated 9th January, 1921.

* Enclosure 1 in No. 248.

† Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

‡ See No. 163 in Dominions No. 81.

"(c) There should be provision similar to that proposed in the other forms of Mandates prohibiting monopolistic concessions by the Mandatory or the monopolizing of natural resources by the Mandatory itself.

"(d) As in other cases modification of Mandate will be subject to assent of the United States."

In your communication of 22nd December, 1921,* Your Lordship stated that His Majesty's Government had never desired to deprive the United States of the fruits of victory to which it had contributed and, as they were quite willing to meet the wishes of the United States as regards the British Mandates, it did not seem necessary to enter into a detailed examination of the general considerations contained in the American note. And in Your Lordship's communication of 29th December, 1921,† it was stated that His Majesty's Government emphatically disclaimed any intention on their part to discriminate against United States nationals and companies or to refuse them full equality of commercial opportunity. These notes, however, so far as the particular provisions of the Mandates were concerned, dealt with "A" and "B" Mandates, and did not take up the specific proposals that had been made by my Government as to the "C" Mandates.

On 26th July, 1922, I addressed a further communication‡ to Lord Balfour inviting attention more specifically to certain matters relating to the administration of the regions in question in which the point of view of the Government of the United States was further defined. It was observed that, in view of the cordial assurances which had been given in the prior communications of His Majesty's Government, it had been assumed by my Government that there would be no disposition to deny to the United States as to the several Mandated Territories any guarantees which might be appropriate for the safeguarding of the present or prospective American interests in these Territories and in particular that no action would be taken prior to the assent of the United States to the Mandates which would be discriminatory or otherwise contrary to the spirit of the expected guarantees. It was stated, however, that certain circumstances and action had been brought to the attention of my Government which appeared to justify an immediate inquiry.

Reference was then made to the following particular circumstances and action:

(1) I referred to the statement in my communication of 24th August, 1921,§ that the Government of the United States protested against the discriminatory tariff imposed by New Zealand in violation of the Treaty concluded in Washington, 2nd September, 1899; that subsequently further representations had been made on the same point and that I had been informed that the matter was still under discussion with the New Zealand Government. In the meantime it appeared that there had been no suspension or repeal of the discriminatory duties. It was pointed out that, although the Treaty rights of the United States were in this instance controlling, my Government believed that, apart from these rights, there should be, prior to the assent of the United States to the Mandate, no discrimination of any kind in the Mandated Territory against the citizens or commerce of the United States.

(2) Reference was also made to similar action which appeared to have been taken with respect to former German South-west Africa. It was understood that an Act to amend the tariffs of the Union of South Africa, published in the South African Official Gazette of 30th May, 1921, and reported to have gone into force 7th June, 1921, contemplated that this Mandated Territory should be regarded for customs and excise purposes as a part of the Union which, it was understood, accorded certain tariff preferences and privileges to other parts of the British Empire. It was stated that the result of this legislation would be discrimination against the United States and it was added that, if it was the purpose of the Union of South Africa to put legislation of this character in force, my Government felt that it must require for its goods imported into South-west Africa any preferences and privileges accorded to any other similar goods.

(3) Further reference was made to the fact that the Governor-General of the Australian Commonwealth, on 22nd February, 1922, had proclaimed certain amendments to the regulations under the Treaty of Peace (Germany) Act, 1919-1920, providing for the sale of enemy property, apparently applicable to such property in the Mandate Territory of New Guinea. The amendment to the regulations contained certain provisions the effect of which was to discriminate against American nationals and companies who might desire to participate in the purchase of the property concerned.

* Enclosure in No. 186 in Dominions No. 87.

† Enclosure 2 in No. 187 in Dominions No. 87.

‡ Enclosure 1 in No. 195 in Dominions No. 87.

§ Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

(4) It was further stated that, on 22nd November, 1921, an official statement had been made in the Australian Parliament regarding oil deposits in Mandate New Guinea, indicating, if the statement had been correctly transmitted to my Government, that it was at that time intended to reserve all such deposits for the exclusive use of the authorities administering the Mandate, and the feeling was expressed in the Australian Parliament that, under Class "C" Mandates, such as that of New Guinea, the Mandatory might impose whatever restrictions it pleased upon both men and goods. I pointed out that statements of this tenor were less disturbing if it were assumed, as my Government had been inclined to assume, that the views of the Government of the United States respecting Mandates and the acceptance in general of these views by His Majesty's Government had not at that time been made known to the officials of the Commonwealth. I called attention to the fact that my Government had not been made aware of any subsequent correction of these statements or of further amendments of a more reassuring nature and American interests were left in uncertainty regarding the possibility of participating in certain branches of activity in New Guinea.

(5) There was also reference to the provisions in the Treaty between the United States and Japan for the furnishing to my Government of a duplicate of the Annual Report of the Mandatory on the administration of the Mandated Territories.

In conclusion, I expressed the hope that His Majesty's Government would find it possible to convey to my Government the desired assurances on the points listed with respect to the "C" Mandates and embodied in the Memorandum of 24th August, 1921,* and that, until an appropriate Treaty should be concluded relating to these Mandated Territories, there would be no action of a monopolistic character or discriminating against American nationals or companies or otherwise prejudicial to American rights and interests.

The reply of His Majesty's Government, under date of 12th August, 1922,† stated that the desiderata of the United States Government would receive the most careful consideration in consultation with the Governments of the Dominions concerned and that their views would be presented in due course.

In view of the desirability of an early agreement upon these questions, I trust that it may be helpful to present the views of the United States Government in two draft forms‡ of Conventions proposed to be concluded between His Majesty's Government and the Government of the United States for the purpose of settling definitely the relation of my Government to the regions in question.

The first draft form is that which it is proposed shall be followed in the Conventions concerning the Territory formerly the German Protectorate of South-West Africa, the island of Nauru and the former German island possessions in the Pacific Ocean south of the Equator other than the island of Nauru and former German island of Samoa. The second draft Convention relates to former German Samoa.

With respect to the first draft form, it will be observed:

(1) The preamble is in the same form substantially as the preamble in the Treaty between the United States and Japan relating to the Mandated islands in the Pacific Ocean north of the Equator, and the preambles in the Treaties which have been signed recently between the United States and France and Belgium relating to the "B" Mandate Territories in Africa.

(2) Articles 1, 2, 3, 4, 9 and 10 are substantially the same as Articles 1 and 2 of the Treaty between the United States and Japan above mentioned, with the exception of sub-division 3 of Article 2 of that Treaty, which relates to existing Treaties.

(3) As there are no applicable existing Treaties as there were in the case of Japan, Articles 5, 6, and 7 would appear to be appropriate.

(4) Article 8 contains provisions substantially corresponding to those embraced in the British "B" Mandate for portions of Togoland and the Cameroons.

(5) Article 11 relates mainly to applicable existing extradition Conventions between the United States and Great Britain.

The second draft form of Convention, save for Article 7, is identical with the first draft form. The proposed Article 7 has been inserted to preserve to the United States the special rights accorded to the United States in the Convention signed in Washington, 2nd December, 1899, with respect to the Samoan islands.

* Enclosure 1 in No. 159 in Dominions No. 81.

† Enclosure 2 in No. 195 in Dominions No. 87.

‡ Not printed.

In proposing these Conventions my Government has proceeded upon the assumption that there is no difference in principle between the Government of the United States and the British Government as to the appropriate administration of Mandate Territories, and my Government has had in mind the repeated disclaimers by Your Lordship of any intention on the part of His Majesty's Government to deprive the United States of any of the rights and privileges to which it is entitled by the common victory over Germany, or to discriminate against United States nationals and companies. In view of these cordial assurances, the Government of the United States is confident that His Majesty's Government will have no disposition to withhold from the United States such guarantees with respect to "C" Mandates as may be appropriate in order to safeguard American rights and interests in the territories and islands in question.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 6th November, 1923.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 5th November, 1923.

ON the 27th ultimo your department was furnished with an advanced copy of a note* from the United States Ambassador reiterating the claims of the Government of the United States in the matter of the treatment of United States nationals and goods in the British "C" Mandated Territories, and enclosing the draft of two Conventions purporting to regulate the position of the United States in accordance with those claims.

2. In the light of the conclusions reached at the recent meeting with the Dominion Prime Ministers at the Colonial Office, it seems useless to examine these drafts clause by clause with the Dominion Ministers in the hope that, after being amended in every respect necessary to safeguard the vital interests of the Dominions, they would still be satisfactory to the United States Government. The demands of that Government are so sharply in conflict with the spirit and terms of the "C" Mandates, and would involve so extensive a curtailment of the liberty of action enjoyed by the Mandatories in the Territories in question, that the better course might well be to refrain from any attempt to adapt the drafts, and to reply to the United States Government in general terms explaining why their demands cannot be met in full.

3. I am accordingly directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to enclose, for the consideration of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the draft† of a reply to the United States Chargé d'Affaires embodying the above suggestion and ending with an offer which, whilst entailing no real sacrifice on the part of the Dominions, may to some extent palliate the general effect of the note.

4. If the Duke of Devonshire concurs in these views and in the terms of the draft reply, Lord Curzon will be glad if His Grace will take an early opportunity of submitting it for the approval of the Dominion Prime Ministers.

I am, &c.,

(Circulated to Members of the Imperial Conference Committee as Paper E (M) 2.)

His Majesty's Government have had an opportunity of conferring with the Dominion Prime Ministers now in London in the matter of the wishes of the Government of the United States of America in regard to the treatment of United States nationals and goods in the Territory administered under the British "C" Mandates.

2. In my notes of the 22nd and 29th of December, 1921,* dealing with Palestine and with the Territories in Africa administered under "B" Mandates, I had the honour to assure the late United States Ambassador that His Majesty's Government had never desired to deprive the United States of the fruits of a victory to which they had so generously contributed, and were willing to meet the wishes of the United States as regards the treatment of their nationals in those Territories, subject to the obligations imposed upon them by their existing Treaty engagements. In this spirit His Majesty's Government entered upon the negotiation of Treaties to regulate the position of the United States in the Territories in question, and have agreed, as you are aware, upon draft clauses of one such Treaty in terms satisfactory to your Government.

3. The contents of Mr. Harvey's several notes, the last of which was dated the 25th of October,† dealing with the Territories administered under "C" Mandates, have been carefully examined with the Dominion Prime Ministers with the object of determining how far it is possible to adopt, in these Territories, a procedure similar to that followed in the case of the Territories referred to in the preceding paragraph. This examination has led both His Majesty's Government and the Dominion Prime Ministers reluctantly to the conclusion that it will not be possible to treat the "C" Mandated Territories on the same footing as those administered under "A" and "B" Mandates for the following reasons.

4. The terms of the different types of Mandate vary fundamentally and this variation has its basis in the terms of the Treaty of Versailles. It is true that the United States have not ratified that Treaty, but that does not alter the fact that, as between Germany and those Powers which have ratified it, those provisions are binding. Under Article 119, of the Treaty, Germany renounces "in favour of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers all her rights and titles over her oversea Possessions." Under Article 22, those Possessions situated in South-west Africa and the Southern Pacific were assigned to the Mandatory with provision for their administration "under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its Territory." This provision was incorporated in the terms of the "C" Mandates which, as your Government are aware, have been approved and confirmed by the Council of the League of Nations.

5. The Government of the United States will remember that the plenipotentiaries representing the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa, did not press the question of the annexation of these particular Territories at the earnest request of the United States Government or President at the time, but only on the express understanding that in return for accepting, instead, Mandates over these Territories, they would be free to administer them as integral parts of the Mandatory Dominions. It is impossible now to admit any departure from this express understanding.

6. Apart from these considerations, the Governments of the Dominions would be unable, for reasons of a practical and physical nature, to comply in full with some of the claims advanced by the United States Government. With the object, nevertheless, of testifying to their friendly sentiments towards the United States, they are willing that an assurance should be given embodied, if desired, in the form of a binding engagement, that so long as the terms of the Mandates remain unaltered, United States nationals and goods will be treated in all respects on a footing equal to that enjoyed by the nationals and goods of any State member of the League of Nations, with the exception of those within the British Empire, subject only to the proviso that this shall not involve the violation of any existing Treaty engagements towards third parties.

7. I shall have the honour to address you separately in due course in regard to the Treaty rights claimed by the United States Government in Samoa.

DEAR [LANE,] [GARRAN,] [THOMSON,]

WITH reference to the draft reply to the United States about "C" Mandates (see Paper E (M) 2),* could you let me know [General Smuts'] [Mr. Bruce's] [Mr. Massey's] views on the draft, as it would seem advisable, if at all possible, that the reply should be agreed before the Prime Ministers concerned leave this country.

Savoy Hotel, 16th November, 1923.

United States and "C" Mandates:

MY DEAR HARDING,

YOU spoke to me about "C" Mandates and in your letter of the 8th November† you say that it would seem advisable, if at all possible, that a reply should be sent to the American Government before the Prime Minister leaves. General Smuts is in full sympathy with this and asks me to say on his behalf that he thinks an answer may be sent that—in so far as the Union Government are concerned—the Union Government on the whole are sympathetic with the view of the United States and that while there are certain administrative difficulties to be overcome, they would be prepared to act in the same way as His Majesty's Government have acted in regard to "B" Mandates.

You will recollect that South-west Africa is in the Union Customs Convention and is administered entirely as a portion of the Union. This would cause some difficulty in administration if the concessions given in "B" Mandates to the American Government were allowed, but General Smuts is prepared to do his utmost to overcome this and so to remove any cause of soreness of the United States Government.

I hope this reply will enable you to proceed.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

E. F. C. LANE.

DEAR LANE,

Downing Street, 26th November, 1923.

I AM sorry to trouble you during your holiday, but we are rather puzzled how to proceed as regards the reply to the United States as to "C" Mandates.

I enclose a complete file of the correspondence for reference. We are not quite certain whether we are to assume from your letter of the 16th November* that General Smuts does not agree with the draft reply to the United States Government (see Paper E (M) 2).† Mr. Bruce has concurred in the draft reply, while Mr. Massey has not expressed any opinion at present, as he wishes to have the opportunity of considering the whole matter with his Cabinet on his return to New Zealand.

We should be very grateful for any suggestions as to how we should now proceed. You will appreciate that a somewhat embarrassing situation might be created if in the course of the next few months the Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments had concurred in the draft Note, while a reply in a different sense was to be sent on behalf of the Union of South Africa.

Perhaps we might talk this over when I see you early in December? There is no immediate urgency now as presumably, in view of Mr. Massey's attitude, the Foreign Office will have to tell the United States Embassy that they cannot give a considered answer just yet.

Yours sincerely,

E. J. HARDING.

(2) Position of Mandated Territories in relation to Treaties.

43972 AND 42147

No. 260.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Extract.)

SIR, Downing Street, 30th August, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 23rd August* regarding the Report of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the work of its recent session.†

2. It is noted from page 3 of the Report that the Commission accepts the view set out in the letter from the Colonial Office of the 9th February, 1922,‡ that General Commercial Treaties do not extend to Mandated Territories unless special arrangements are made to that end. It will, however, be remembered that in Commercial Treaties recently negotiated provision has been made for the accession of Mandated Territories and that it is proposed to make similar provision in subsequent Treaties. Steps are also being taken to insert in Extradition Treaties, when negotiated, a provision under which they may be made applicable to Mandated Territories.

3. The mere extension of a General Commercial Treaty between this country and a foreign Power to a Mandated Territory would not, however, have the effect, in the absence of a special arrangement, of entitling the native inhabitants of a Mandated Territory to enjoy the personal privileges conferred by the Treaty on British subjects generally. The position in this respect is the same as that which obtains in the case of Protectorates. It will be remembered that, where an Extradition Treaty is applicable to Protectorates and Mandated Territories, special arrangements are made for the assimilation of the position of native inhabitants of Protectorates and Mandated Territories to that of British subjects under the Treaty.

5. The Permanent Mandates Commission is apparently under the impression that Commercial Treaties between this country and foreign Powers apply to all British Colonies and Protectorates. This is, of course, not the case.

I am, &c.,
C. T. DAVIS.

* Nos. 42002 and 42147: not printed; they enclosed papers dealing with the Third Session of the Commission.

‡ No. 202 in Dominions No. 87.

† The relevant extract from the Report was as follows:—

(3) Application of special International Conventions to Mandated Territories.—"B" mandates contain a provision in accordance with which "the Mandatory shall apply to the territory (under mandate) any general international conventions applicable to its contiguous territory." This provision is included in all the "B" mandates, though with a different wording in the case of the British mandate for East Africa. As the "B" mandates contain no reference to special treaties, the Permanent Mandates Commission, after considering the question, is of the opinion that the special international conventions entered into by a State do not apply de jure to territories in regard to which the State in question has been entrusted with a mandate, even when these conventions are applicable to contiguous territories placed under the sovereignty of the same State.

This leads, as the Commission has been forced to recognize, to a situation prejudicial to the inhabitants of the mandated territories and to the economic development of these territories. The inhabitants, for example, may not claim the benefits of any treaties which have laid down the legal

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 3rd December, 1923.)

(No. 341.)

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne,

MY LORD DUKE,

20th October, 1923.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Acting Prime Minister, to inform Your Grace that the Commonwealth Government observes that the Permanent Mandates Commission, in its Report* on the work of its Third Session, has recommended to the Council of the League of Nations that the members of the League should consider the possibility of extending to "C" mandated territories the advantages which are conferred upon contiguous colonies and protectorates of the Mandatory State by special treaties entered into by that State with any other member of the League of Nations; and further that the Commission requests Mandatory Powers to inform it which general International Conventions applying to their contiguous territories have been extended to the mandated territories.

The Commonwealth Government would be glad to learn the views of His Majesty's Government respecting the action which should be taken in regard to this recommendation and inquiry, so far as Nauru is concerned.

My Acting Prime Minister informs me that, in so far as the Territory of New Guinea is concerned, the Commonwealth Government has not as yet taken steps towards applying any International Convention.

I have, &c.,
FORSTER,

status of nationals of the mandatory State (traités d'établissement) within the territory of other States. Accordingly they are liable to have their right of free movement questioned and also their right to carry on trade and to own property, although these rights are recognized and guaranteed by treaty to the inhabitants of the contiguous colonies and protectorates of the mandatory State. This being so, the Commission has questioned whether further measures might not be taken to give the fullest practical effect to the principle laid down in Article 127 of Section I of Part IV of the Treaty of Versailles, which states that "the native inhabitants of the former German overseas possessions shall be entitled to the diplomatic protection of the Governments exercising authority over those territories." Moreover, the Mandates Commission has learnt that the benefits of the most-favoured-nation clause have been refused in the case of goods coming from a territory under a "B" mandate, while products of the same kind coming from contiguous protectorates of the mandatory State enjoy the advantage of this clause on being imported into the same country of destination.

The Commission is of opinion that the intentions of the authors of the Covenant would probably be fully met if measures were taken to improve the disadvantageous position in which this state of affairs has placed the inhabitants of mandated territories in regard to the protection of their persons and property and the disposal of the products of their soil and their industries. The Commission accordingly deems it desirable to propose the following recommendation, which might be adopted by all the Members of the League of Nations:

"That the Members of the League of Nations should forthwith consider the possibility of extending to the territories under 'B' mandates the advantages which are conferred upon the contiguous colonies and protectorates of the mandatory State by special treaties and conventions entered into by that State with any other Member of the League of Nations, on the understanding that reciprocity will only be recognized if it does not in any way infringe the principles of economic equality."

The same question arises in connexion with "C" mandates, with a few slight modifications, due to differences inherent in the two types of mandate. A Power entrusted with a "C" mandate drew the attention of the Commission to the fact that a State with which it had entered into relations under a special treaty did not regard itself as being bound to apply that treaty to the territory over which the former exercises its mandate. The argument on which this view is based—if the Commission is rightly informed—is that the mandated territory, although administered as an integral part of the territory of the Mandatory, constitutes a distinct entity, from the international point of view, and that, accordingly, international treaties signed by the mandatory State do not apply de jure to territory under "C" mandates.

If this view is correct—and the Commission accepts it—it would appear desirable, on grounds which apply equally to "C" and "B" mandates, that the recommendation set out above should be forwarded to the seven Members of the League of Nations on behalf of territories under "C" mandates, with a modification to the effect that, as regards the latter, reciprocity could be applied in any case without thereby infringing the terms of the mandate.

IN reply to your letter of the 13th of April,§ regarding the representations of the United States Government on the subject of the establishment of a preferential tariff in Western Samoa, I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to invite reference to the letter from this Department of the 7th of February,|| enclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor-General of New Zealand dated the 2nd of November, 1922,¶ in which the New Zealand Government suggested that a reply to the representations of the United States Government on the general question of discriminatory treatment in territories administered under "C" Mandates should be deferred pending discussion by the Imperial Conference. The New Zealand Government may therefore wish that further consideration of the present question should be similarly deferred, and unless the matter is again raised by the United States Government, the Secretary of State would prefer not to send any reminding despatch.

Note.—The representations of the United States Government on this subject (see correspondence in Dominions Nos. 75 and 87) were considered by the Committee of the Imperial Conference of 1923, which dealt with the representations of the United States Government as to the treatment of United States nationals and goods in C Mandated Territories generally. At its meeting on the 23rd October, the Committee adopted the following conclusions:—

"It was agreed that the special representations of the United States Government as to Western Samoa might be considered separately from the representations on the general question of commercial treatment. It was explained that His Majesty's Government had been advised that under the Treaty of 1899 the United States Government are apparently bound to give British shipping in the parts of Samoa under United States administration treatment as favourable as that accorded to United States shipping: this treatment is not in fact accorded, and it was understood that the Prime Minister of New Zealand was prepared to agree to an answer being sent to the United States Government to the effect that the New Zealand Government would be willing to consider the request of the United States Government for national treatment for their commerce in Western Samoa if that Government was willing to give British shipping national treatment in that part of Samoa under United States administration."

DEAR THOMSON,

30th November, 1923.

You will remember my mentioning to you that, in view of the conclusions of the meeting of the Imperial Conference Committee on the United States and C Mandates on the 23rd October (see the paper marked E (M) first meeting) the Foreign Office would probably be wishing shortly to send a note to the United States Government on the particular question which the latter had raised as to their Treaty rights in Western Samoa.

This expectation has been fulfilled, and the Foreign Office have prepared the draft of a note to the United States Chargé d'Affaires, of which I enclose a copy. We shall be much obliged if you will let us know whether Mr. Massey concurs in its terms.

We understand that the Foreign Office would like to be in a position to send a note to the United States Government on this subject at an early date, more especially as a reply to their representations as to the position of United States nationals and goods in C Mandated Territories generally seems likely to be delayed for some time.

Yours sincerely,

E. J. HARDING.

F. D. Thomson, Esq., C.M.G.

United States Chargé d'Affaires.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government have discussed with the Government of New Zealand the question dealt with in previous correspondence ending with Mr. Harvey's note No. 1071 of the 25th October,* with regard to the rights claimed by the United States in Western Samoa under Article 3 of the Convention concluded at Washington on the 2nd December, 1899, between the United Kingdom, Germany and the United States.

2. You will observe that it is provided in the same Article of that Convention that each of the three signatory Powers shall continue to enjoy in respect of their commerce and commercial vessels in all the islands of the Samoan group privileges and conditions equal to those enjoyed by the sovereign Power in all ports which may be open to the commerce of either of them. It will be remembered that in 1911 the United States authorities had exercised some discrimination against British ships trading between Pago Pago and Leone in Tutuila. On that occasion, inquiries were made of your Government, who stated that Leone was not a port of entry; but in the course of the correspondence which ensued the United States Government admitted that British ships were entitled to the same treatment as United States and German ships in this respect (see note from State Department to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington 5th February, 1912, etc.). In the same year also a complaint was made by a British firm that bills of health were being issued gratis by the United States Consul at Apia to United States vessels trading between Apia and Pago Pago, while a charge was made for similar bills of health issued to British vessels trading on the same route. This complaint being brought to the notice of the United States Government, it was decided by the State Department in 1913 that the exaction of fees from British vessels, while United States vessels were exempt, was contrary to Article 3 of the Convention of 1899, and instructions were accordingly given for the collection of such fees to be discontinued (see note from State Department to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, 15th October, 1913). The United States Government were thus, in 1913, of opinion that the Convention prevented preference in this respect being given to United States ships trading with American Samoa.

* Enclosure in No. 251.

3. The Government of New Zealand have also called my attention to the fact that, owing to the operation of the United States coast-wise laws, British ships trading from New Zealand to San Francisco are no longer able to call at Honolulu and to carry goods and passengers between that port and San Francisco. Consequently, British ships can no longer call at Honolulu except those on the Vancouver mail service. It is, therefore, a matter of considerable importance to the Government of New Zealand that British ships trading between New Zealand and the United States should be able to call at Tutuila and, if necessary, to carry goods and passengers between that port and the United States under the same conditions as United States ships.

4. In the circumstances the Government of New Zealand would be willing to consider the request of the United States Government for national treatment for their commerce and commercial vessels in Western Samoa provided the United States Government on their part are willing to give a specific assurance of their understanding that Article 3 of the Convention of 1899 ensures to British commerce and commercial vessels national treatment in that part of Samoa under United States administration.

Prime Minister's Office, Hotel Cecil, W.C.,

4th December, 1923.

DEAR HARDING,

ON my return from Ireland to-day I have found your letter of the 30th ultimo, enclosing copy of draft note which the Foreign Office have prepared for transmission to the United States Chargé d'Affaires.

Mr. Massey generally approves of the draft, with the exception that in paragraph 4 he would much prefer that the reference to the New Zealand Government should be less definite than the present wording of the draft indicates. Accordingly, he suggests that paragraph 4 should read as follows:—

"In the circumstances it is probable that the Government of New Zealand would be prepared to consider the request of the United States Government . . . etc., etc."

Before the note is actually despatched, Mr. Massey would be glad to hear that the Foreign Office has agreed to make this alteration.

Yours sincerely,

E. J. Harding, Esq., C.M.G.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 12th December, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 275.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 12th December, 1923.

IN reply to your letter of the 6th instant,* I am directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to state that he agrees to all the amendments in the draft note to the United States Chargé d'Affaires respecting treaty rights in Samoa except that proposed by Mr. Massey in paragraph 4.

2. New Zealand is under the same obligation to give national treatment to United States commerce and ships in Western Samoa as the United States are to give similar treatment to British ships, et cetera, at Tutuila. It is, therefore, impossible for His Majesty's Government to claim such treatment in the one case and to use words which imply that it may not be conceded in the other. If, therefore, as is understood semi-officially from your department, Mr. Massey feels unable to commit his Government to the acceptance of the note with paragraph 4 as originally drafted, it is proposed to defer despatch of the note until Mr. Massey has returned to New Zealand and can explain the matter to his colleagues, unless the United States Government press for an answer.

3. In the meantime it will not be possible for His Majesty's Government to claim national treatment for British ships at Tutuila.

I am, &c.,

G. R. WARNER.

COLONIAL OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

SIR,

Downing Street, 20th December, 1923.

WITH reference to your letter of the 12th December,* I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to transmit to you, for the information of the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, a copy of further correspondence with the Secretary of the New Zealand Delegation to the Imperial Conference, regarding the proposed note to the United States Government on the subject of rights arising under the Convention of the 2nd December, 1899, relating to Samoa. The terms of the letter to Mr. Thomson of the 14th December were settled after semi-official discussion with the Foreign Office.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

[60393]

Enclosure 1 in No. 275.

DEAR THOMSON,

14th December, 1923.

AS I mentioned to you at our discussion on the 12th December, we communicated to the Foreign Office Mr. Massey's suggestion referred to in your letter of the 4th December that the last paragraph of the draft note to the United States Chargé d'Affaires, as to the rights claimed by the United States Government in Western Samoa under the Convention of 1899, should be modified so as to read "In the circumstances it is probable that the Government of New Zealand would be prepared . . ."

The Foreign Office thought that this wording would make the terms of the note somewhat too indefinite, and we have accordingly put to them the alternative suggestion which was discussed with you and, we understand, would be acceptable to Mr. Massey, viz., that the draft note as sent to you in my note of 30th November should be modified as follows:—

(1) In paragraph 1, for "His Majesty's Government have discussed with the Government of New Zealand" read "His Majesty's Government have discussed with the Prime Minister of New Zealand";

(2) In paragraph 3, for "The Government of New Zealand have also called my attention" read "My attention has also been called";

(3) In paragraph 4, for "In the circumstances the Government of New Zealand would be willing" read "In the circumstances the Prime Minister of New Zealand thought that the New Zealand Government would be willing."

We find, however, that, in view of the difficulty which Mr. Massey feels in agreeing to the adoption of the wording of paragraph 4 of the original draft enclosed in my letter of the 30th November before there has been an opportunity of consulting the New Zealand Cabinet, the Foreign Office think that it would be best not to send any note to the United States Government on the subject until it is possible to intimate definitely the decision of the New Zealand Government on the United States claim.

In the circumstances, perhaps it would be best if we could tell the Foreign Office that Mr. Massey will arrange for a telegram to be sent to the Secretary of State as soon as the draft note has been considered by the New Zealand Cabinet on his return.

Yours sincerely,

E. J. HARDING.

15th December, 1923.

DEAR HARDING,

I AM in receipt of your letter of the 14th instant in regard to the draft note to the United States Government as to the rights claimed by the latter in Western Samoa under the Convention of 1899.

* No. 274.

The Prime Minister notes that the Foreign Office is of opinion that it would be best not to send any note to the United States Government until it is possible to indicate definitely the decision of the New Zealand Government, and in these circumstances Mr. Massey will submit the whole matter for the consideration of his Government on his return to the Dominion, when a telegraphic reply will be forwarded.

Yours sincerely,

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 24th January, 1923.)

THE Governor-General of New Zealand presents his compliments to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and begs to enclose, for transmission to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations, a letter dated 27th November, from the Prime Minister of the Dominion, containing an explanation in connexion with the opinion* submitted in May, 1920, by Sir John Salmond (the then Solicitor-General of the New Zealand Government) on the question of the nationality of inhabitants of Western Samoa.

Government House,
Wellington,
18th December, 1922.

Enclosure in No. 276.

SIR,

27th November, 1922.

I HAVE to acknowledge receipt of the letter of the President of the Council of the League of Nations, dated 20th September last, forwarding the following documents:—

- (i) The Report of the Permanent Mandates Commission with Annexes;
- (ii) The Report presented by the Italian Representative, the conclusions of which were unanimously adopted by the Council at its meeting on 4th September, 1922;
- (iii) An extract from the Minutes of the meeting of the Council on the above date.

The New Zealand Government will be pleased to carefully consider and to carry out as far as possible such of the recommendations adopted by the Council as have application to the Mandated territory of Western Samoa.

I desire to refer to the report of the discussion which took place when the Permanent Mandates Commission was considering the question of the national status of inhabitants of "B" and "C" Mandated territories. This will be found in League of Nations Paper A. 36/1922, VI (C. 548 M. 330/1922, VI), Minutes of the Second Session held in Geneva, 1st to 11th August, 1922, pages 65-68. During this discussion Mr. Ormsby-Gore, the British representative on the Permanent Mandates Commission quoted from an opinion furnished on 11th May, 1920, by Sir John Salmond, the then Solicitor-General to the New Zealand Government, on the question of the nationality of inhabitants of Western Samoa. In connexion with this opinion of Sir John Salmond, the Minutes of the Second Session (page 68) contain the following record:—

"The Commission placed it on record that it did not understand the reference in Sir John Salmond's opinion, dated 11th May, 1920, to the right conferred upon the Samoans by the Peace Treaty to become incorporated within the British Empire."

* Enclosure 1 in No. 227 in Dominions No. 87.

I would point out that this opinion was given by Sir John Salmond some very considerable time before the actual Mandate for Western Samoa was adopted by the Council of the League of Nations as communicated to the Government of New Zealand as Mandatory. It is true that neither the Peace Treaty, as finally signed, nor the Mandate for Western Samoa, as issued by the Council of the League, confers any right on the inhabitants of Western Samoa to at any time take steps to become incorporated within the British Empire as part of the Dominion of New Zealand, if they so desire. But it must be remembered that when the question of the disposal of ex-German Samoa was considered by the Supreme Council of the Allied and Associated Powers at Paris in May, 1919, just one year before Sir John Salmond gave the opinion referred to, the draft Mandate, which was then provisionally agreed to as the basis of New Zealand's Administration of Western Samoa, contained the following article:—

"Article 6.—If at any time the native inhabitants of the Islands express a desire to be united with New Zealand, and if the Council of the League of Nations considers this desire on their part to be conscious and well-founded and calculated to promote their interests, the Allied and Associated Governments agree that effect shall be given to it by the Council of the League, and the islands shall thereupon be incorporated in New Zealand for all purposes, and the administration under this Convention shall be regarded as at an end; provided that all the undertaking set out in Article 3, including the prohibition against the establishment of military and naval bases or fortifications, shall be maintained and shall continue to operate in the islands after such incorporation."

This draft Mandate was communicated to me, as the Prime Minister and Plenipotentiary of the Dominion of New Zealand, at the Peace Conference, and was also published in the press of the Dominion. This was the authority for the reference in Sir John Salmond's opinion of 11th May, 1920, to which the Permanent Mandates Commission has drawn attention.

I deem it only right to Sir John Salmond that I should make this explanation to the Council of the League of Nations, and request that it be placed on record with the resolution of the Commission of 8th August, 1922, as previously quoted.

I have, &c.,

W. F. MASSEY,
Prime Minister.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 20th March, 1923.)

(Confidential (2).)

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town,
2nd March, 1923.

MY LORD DUKE,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Grace press extracts† regarding the national status of residents in South-West Africa and the future government of that country.

2. The question of national status was referred to a Commission in 1921 and a copy of the report submitted was forwarded with my despatch No. 228 of the 21st April, 1921.‡ The Commission drew attention to the natural reluctance of a considerable proportion of the older population (Germans) to fulfil the indispensable condition of exercising full political rights by becoming British subjects. They considered proposals that the Germans should acquire citizenship by application, or, alternatively, that they should all be naturalized by Statute, leaving it to the individual to renounce such naturalization by express declaration. The Commission favoured the latter course.

3. In December last the Advisory Council of the territory adopted resolutions favouring the establishment of some form of representative government and, with that end in view, the passage of a law conferring citizenship upon all who did not make a statutory declaration declining that status. They considered that the great majority of the Germans would acquiesce in the application of such a law. Finally, the Council expressed the view that the territory should not become a fifth province of the Union at present.

* No. 277.

‡ 22985: not printed; it enclosed a copy of the report of the Commission.

4. The citizenship resolutions have been the subject of discussion at recent public meetings in Windhuk. At the first meeting the German residents voted solidly against the Council's proposal and suggested the creation of South-West Africa citizenship. The Germans held that it should be within the capacity of General Smuts, who took a large share in the creation of the League of Nations, to design some form of national status which would meet the needs of residents in mandated territory who are disinclined to accept the national status of subjects of the Power holding the mandate.

5. On the following night the Administrator held a public meeting, attended by all classes of white residents of Windhuk, for the purpose of explaining various proposals, notably those relating to the commando system and those made by the Advisory Council in respect of national status. It appears that the opposition to the latter was so strong that the Administrator thought it better not to put the issue to a vote.

6. At a subsequent meeting a few days later the British subjects of the district—under the leadership of men bearing Dutch names—adopted resolutions asking the Union Government to legislate in such a way that they may through their votes take part in the administration of the territory, and to apply to the territory the naturalization laws of the Union with modifications to enable residents in South-West Africa to acquire Union citizenship forthwith. A motion advocating the citizenship proposals of the Commission and Advisory Council was lost—only some six persons out of 500 present voting in its favour.

7. In my despatch Confidential of the 6th September* I expressed the conviction that the Germans in South-West Africa would not respond to an invitation to embrace British citizenship voluntarily and that an attempt to forcibly proclaim them British subjects would be met with a display of hostility. But I am still of the opinion that the latter method would be accepted with resignation and even with secret satisfaction, always provided that unqualified compulsion is exercised. Unfortunately the Administration has endeavoured to steer a middle course and has offended the amour propre of the Germans by consulting them on a question, the discussion of which must be extremely distasteful to them. I am convinced that the future welfare of the Germans and the prosperity of the territory depend upon the establishment of a measure of representative government and that this ambition can only be realized by the adoption of a common nationality which, for obvious reasons, must be British. At the present moment His Majesty's subjects are in the majority in the territory and there are plenty of precedents in Europe to justify the compulsory enrolment of minorities as subjects of a foreign nation.

8. In conclusion, I wish again to emphasize my opinion that nothing short of absolute compulsion will solve the national status problem in South-West Africa, and I think the Union authorities are ill-advised to consult the Germans on the question or to encourage them to hope that any alternative will ever be considered.

I have, &c.,

ARTHUR FREDERICK,
Governor-General.

Your telegram 23rd February.† As regards "B" Mandated Territories view of His Majesty's Government has been that native inhabitants although entitled to protection of Mandatory Power are not thereby invested with nationality of that Power. Similar view I gather was held by Salmond, see first part of his Opinion 11th May, 1920.‡ It is not quite clear whether your Ministers now take view that these persons have status other than that of protected persons, and we should be grateful for fuller information. We appreciate difficulty caused by use of expression "granted a national status wholly distinct from that of nationals of Mandatory Power" in first resolution of Permanent Mandates Commission in print C.546/1922, VI, 19th August, 1922, and think that position would be better expressed by general proposition to the effect that it is desirable that native inhabitants who receive protection of Mandatory Power should in each case be designated by some form of descriptive title which will identify them as such, e.g., in case of territory mandated to New Zealand designation might be protected persons, natives of Western Samoa. Meanwhile, we are not communicating with Government of Commonwealth of Australia and Government of Union of South Africa, but copies of telegraphic correspondence are being sent to British Representative on Council.—DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure 1 in No. 288.

NOTES OF A PRIVATE MEETING OF THE COUNCIL.

(Held at 10 a.m. on 21st April, 1923.)

Status of the Inhabitants of B and C Mandated Territories.

THE President presented a series of draft resolutions proposed by the drafting committee appointed by the Council at a previous meeting, together with the text of a declaration of the representative of South Africa.

He proposed that the declaration should first be discussed, as it involved a question of principle.

M. Jean Gout explained that the text of the draft resolutions had been unanimously adopted by the drafting committee.

The Marquis Theodoli, Chairman of the Mandates Commission, said that the text of the resolutions had been unanimously adopted, but that he had found it necessary to abstain from voting on the declaration of the representative of South Africa. This declaration was not consistent with the considered opinion formed by the Mandates Commission during the two years in which it had studied the problem of status.

Sir Edgar Walton said that the South African Government had endeavoured for two years to carry out the principles defined and recommended by the Mandates Commission, but had found that no practical solution could be found upon these lines. The South African Government, therefore, asked the Council not to raise any objection to the method which it proposes to adopt.

The President suggested that the members of the Council should vote upon the declaration individually.

M. Jean Gout inquired whether a vote in the affirmative implied that the Council approved the plan of the South African Government.

M. Salandra thought that an affirmative vote certainly implied approval.

M. Hymans agreed. The proposal to approve the declaration put certain members of the Council in an embarrassing position. The Mandates Commission had discussed the question over a long period, and had taken a different view. He would hesitate without further discussion and examination of the question to approve the declaration by an affirmative vote.

M. Hanotaux said that there were two questions before the Council. Did the declaration embody a policy which was contrary to Article 22 of the Covenant? Secondly, could the Council, as a body responsible for the welfare of the inhabitants of the mandated territories approve the plan of the South African Government?

The declaration of the representative of South Africa introduced a new factor, namely, the position of European colonists in mandated territories. This factor had not been present in the minds of those who had drafted Article 22.

M. Adatci said that the Japanese member of the Mandates Commission contended that the case of South Africa could not be considered as an isolated case. He thought the Council should hear the views of the Mandates Commission before coming to a decision.

M. Hymans supported this proposal. He had not yet had an opportunity of consulting the Belgian member of the Commission.

The Marquis Theodoli said that the views of the Commission were contained in reports which had been at the disposal of the Council for some time. The Mandates Commission was anxious that a solution of this problem should be found without infringing in any way the principle of the mandate. The method recommended by the Mandates Commission was the nationalization of the inhabitants of the territory individually.

The President said that at the conference held in London two years ago the attitude of the British Government had not been sympathetic to the request of South Africa. Two years, however, had intervened, and no satisfactory practical solution had been found upon the lines recommended by the Mandates Commission. He had not been prepared to support the South African point of view on reaching Geneva, but on hearing that the South African proposals concerned only the German population in South West Africa, and on realizing the serious difficulties of the South African Government, he had changed his opinion. The Council should recognize the facts, and endeavour to assist General Smuts, who had stated that South Africa could not discharge her duties as a mandatory by applying the principles hitherto approved. If the Council did not approve the declaration of the representative of South Africa, General Smuts would either have to abandon his responsibilities, or proceed without the authority of the Council. This would be painful for General Smuts, and disastrous for the principle of the mandate. He did not think the Council could refuse to endorse the declaration without making some alternative constructive proposal.

The Council might perhaps refer the question to a committee of jurists, which would be invited to state whether the declaration conflicted with the Covenant. Or the members of the Council might vote upon the declaration individually.

M. Salandra pointed out that the Mandates Commission had taken a general view of the question, whereas the Council was now concerned with the particular case. It was necessary to distinguish clearly between the natives and the Germans in South West Africa, and to limit the terms of any resolution adopted to cover only the populations of German origin.

M. Hymans said that this question had never been discussed by the Council. He had looked into the reports and found it difficult to ascertain precisely the views of the Commission. He suggested that the question should be postponed to the next session.

M. Adatci said he felt the force of the observations of the President, but he could only approve the declaration with some reserve, as he had not had an opportunity of consulting his Government.

M. Uden said he could not then and there approve the declaration. He would find it necessary to abstain.

M. Guani said he could only approve the declaration with the reserve that it did not conflict with the principles of Article 22.

Sir Edgar Walton said that he would be very sorry if the Council were unable to reach a decision during the present session. The South African Parliament would rise in June, and, as General Smuts would be leaving for Europe immediately afterwards, a whole year would be lost if a decision were not taken immediately.

M. Salandra, M. Hanatoux, and M. Quinones de Leon presented the following text:—

Le Conseil de la Société des Nations, vu le cas special et le fait qu'il ne s'agit que des habitants d'origine allemande prend note de la déclaration de la représentant de l'Afrique du sud, et ne voit aucun inconvénient aux mesures proposées.

The President proposed that the discussion should be postponed until the last meeting of the present session, when an endeavour would be made to reach a decision.

The proposal of the President was adopted.

Enclosure 2 in No. 288.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

NATIONAL STATUS OF THE INHABITANTS OF B AND C MANDATED TERRITORIES.

Resolutions adopted by the Council, 23rd April, 1923.

THE Council of the League of Nations,

Having considered the report of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the national status of the inhabitants of territories under "B" and "C" mandates, In accordance with the principles laid down in Article 22 of the Covenant.

Resolve as follows:—

- (1) The status of the native inhabitants of a mandated territory is distinct from that of the nationals of the Mandatory Power and cannot be identified therewith by any process having general application.
- (2) The native inhabitants of a mandated territory are not invested with the nationality of the Mandatory Power by reason of the Protection extended to them.
- (3) It is not inconsistent with (1) and (2) above that individual inhabitants of the territory should voluntarily obtain naturalisation from the Mandatory Power, in accordance with arrangements which it is open to such Power to make with this object under its own law.
- (4) It is desirable that native inhabitants who receive the protection of the Mandatory Power should in each case be designated by some form of descriptive title which will specify their status under the Mandate.

Enclosure 3 in No. 288.

SOCIÉTÉ DES NATIONS.

Communiqué aux Membres du Conseil.

C.340(1), 1923, VI.

Genève, le 21 avril, 1923.

RESOLUTION RELATING TO CERTAIN INHABITANTS OF SOUTH WEST AFRICA, ADOPTED BY THE COUNCIL, 23RD APRIL, 1923.

THE Council of the League of Nations, taking into consideration the special case presented to it and the fact that only the inhabitants of South West Africa alluded to in Article 122 of the Treaty of Versailles are concerned, takes note of the declaration made by the Representative of South Africa, and sees no objection to the proposed action.

Enclosure 4 in No. 288.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

(Communicated to the Members of the Council.)

Declaration of the Representative of South Africa.

THE Representative of South Africa ventures to bring before the Council the special practical conditions which present themselves on South West Africa.

The Government of South Africa has not utilized the right conferred upon it by Article 122 of the Treaty of Versailles and has not repatriated the German nationals resident in the territory entrusted to it under the mandatory regime.

The South African Government is anxious to enable the persons in question to take part in the public life of the territory, and is convinced that this object can only be obtained in practice by conferring on them the status of British subjects, each individual having, however, the free and unfettered right to decline to accept such status. 290

The South African Government considers that the proposed action would be in no way adverse to the interests of the indigenous population which, in accordance with Article 22 of the Covenant, it is the special duty of the Council to safeguard.

The South African Government, which exercises in the territory the authority derived from the approval of its mandate by the Council, is accordingly desirous of conferring British nationality on the inhabitants of South West Africa possessing German nationality, provided that:

- (a) Every such inhabitant shall have the right to decline British nationality by a declaration made in such conditions as may be prescribed:
- (b) Any person exercising this right shall nevertheless be entitled to remain in the territory and shall not be disturbed or molested on any pretext whatsoever in consequence of the exercise of such right.

The South African Government would be glad to be informed whether the Council sees any objection to the proposed action.

Note.—Further correspondence relating to the naturalization of inhabitants of "B" and "C" Mandated Territories is printed in Dominions No. 91 (Imperial Conference).

Norwegian Legation,

MY LORD MARQUESS,

London, 16th January 1923

By a Note of 24th February, 1922‡ (No. 33/1922), I had the honour to inform Your Lordship that the Norwegian Government were desirous of opening negotiations with a view to concluding a temporary agreement as to the commercial relations between Norway and the Commonwealth of Australia, and that I therefore should feel grateful if you would kindly advise me of the British Government's opinion with regard to the most suitable way of procedure in this matter.

The Legation have since ventured to write to the Foreign Office on 20th April and 17th July, 1922, and on 20th December, 1922, M. Birkeland had the honour to write to Your Lordship on this matter.

I have, however, not yet received any definite reply as to the way of procedure His Britannic Majesty's Government deem suitable, and I have now been instructed by my Government to state that under the circumstances they take it that the British Government have no objection to Norway opening direct negotiations, through the Norwegian Consul-General at Melbourne, with the Australian authorities with a view to concluding a commercial treaty.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 19th January, 1923.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch No. [493] [356] of the 10th of October, 1922,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Representative at Tehran, relative to the withdrawal of the Canadian and Commonwealth Governments from the Anglo-Persian Agreement of the 21st of March, 1920. A translation of the Persian Government's Note of the 27th of September is enclosed. Copies of the other notes forwarded by His Majesty's Representative were enclosed in my predecessor's despatches No. [248] [190] of the 13th of May, and No. [493] [356] of the 10th of October.‡

2. As indicated in my predecessor's despatch, Dominions No. 236 of the 14th of June, 1921,§ His Majesty's Government do not regard the Persian Government's interpretation of Article 3 of the Agreement as well-founded, but hold that the wording of the Agreement is such as to give any of His Majesty's Oversea Dominions the right to free itself from all Treaty obligations with Persia in regard to the treatment of Persian subjects, goods and vessels, merely by giving notice to that effect. His Majesty's Government will, however, be glad to receive the observations of your Ministers as to the reply which should be returned to the Persian Government.

3. The circumstances in which the Anglo-Persian Agreement of the 9th August, 1919 (copies of which were enclosed in Viscount Milner's despatch, Dominions No. 673 of the 22nd August, 1919||), was denounced by the Persian Government, were dealt with by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in a speech¶ in the House of Lords on the 26th July, 1921, a copy of which is enclosed. The denunciation was actually made by the Persian Prime Minister in a public proclamation issued by him on the 26th February, 1921.

(No. 682.)

MY LORD,

British Legation, Tehran, 22nd November, 1922.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Lordship, herewith, correspondence with the Persian Government ensuing from your despatches, Nos. 315 of the 2nd November, 1921, and 372 of 28th December, 1921, concerning the withdrawal of the Canadian Government and the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia from the Agreement of 21st March, 1920, modifying the Commercial Convention between the United Kingdom and Persia of 9th February, 1903. Your Lordship will observe that the Persian Government asks for an explanation of the action of these Governments, pending which it reserves its acquiescence therein.

On receipt of the Note of 27th September, I directed the Acting Counsellor of the Legation to explain the matter orally to the Head of the First Section at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, pointing out that the Governments in question were merely exercising a right expressly laid down in the Agreement, and that all that was required was that the Persian Government should take act of the notification made to it. In reply to this representation, Muntakhab ul Mulk explained that the Persian Government interpreted the relevant passage of the 1920 Agreement as meaning that the Dominion and Commonwealth Governments were entitled to withdraw from the Agreement if Persia withdrew most-favoured-nation treatment from them, which she had not done (i.e., that the initiative lay with Persia). Mr. Monson explained that this was not at all the intention of the words "on condition of," but Muntakhab-ul-Mulk did not appear to be convinced, declaring that the Ministry for Foreign Affairs had acted in consultation with the Director-General of Customs, who agreed with their view.

Mr. Monson accordingly interviewed Monsieur Molitor on the subject, and found that, although he did not indeed take the obviously incorrect view attributed to him by Muntakhab-ul-Mulk, he also was indisposed simply to acquiesce in the action notified. He said that the question had been referred to him, and had for a long time puzzled him, because he could not imagine why Canada and Australia had taken this step. Finally it occurred to him that there might possibly be some misunderstanding, viz., that these Governments, having no doubt been informed by His Majesty's Government of Persia's denunciation of the Anglo-Persian Agreement of 1919, had thought it proper to make a formal notification of the cessation of their obligations under the Commercial Agreement of 1920, which was a consequence of the 1919 Agreement, and the only one which might practically affect them. This suggestion seemed rather far fetched, but the fact is that Monsieur Molitor, being unable to understand why the Governments in question wish to withdraw, clings to the belief that there is some mistake and can think of no other explanation. He had accordingly advised the Ministry for Foreign Affairs to ask for one.

Mr. Monson was unable to induce Monsieur Molitor frankly to admit that the texts of the Agreements of 1903 and 1920 give the Dominion and Commonwealth Governments the right to withdraw without stating their reasons for doing so. Monsieur Molitor pointed out that Article 2 of the 1903 Agreement was obviously intended as a precaution in favour of Persia, enabling her to retaliate if the Colonies ceased to grant her most-favoured-nation treatment, and if Canada and Australia had now simply stated that this was their intention, then the matter would have been quite plain. Mr. Monson replied that they had naturally followed the text of the later Agreement, and that it seemed to amount to the same thing. Monsieur Molitor grudgingly assented, but still clung to the belief that there is a misunderstanding, and therefore maintained his suggestion that an explanation should be asked for. He remarked that the matter was of little practical importance at present, as there was no trade with these Dominions, but that it would be difficult, without some explanation of the reasons for the step, to induce the Persian Government to acquiesce in it, because, being puzzled, they are suspicious.

I have the honour, therefore, to inquire of Your Lordship whether the Canadian and Australian Governments are disposed to offer any further explanation of their withdrawal, in order to ease the mind of the Persian Government.

I have, &c.,

PERCY LORAINE.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

IN answer to Your Excellency's reply dated 5th August, I have the honour to state that in repeating the last passage of my note of 2nd August, No. 9157, I feel confident that Your Excellency will admit that the Persian Government is justified to ascertain the reasons for which Canada and Australia have announced their withdrawal from the Customs Agreement of 1920, so that it may be able to pass distinctly its opinion on this question, which is not free of ambiguity.

9. Article 9. If the objection of the Polish Government to the retention of the second paragraph of this Article is likely to jeopardise the Treaty as a whole, the Board would not offer any strong objection to its omission. It might, however, be pointed out to the Polish Government that a similar paragraph exists in many Treaties of Commerce and Navigation between His Majesty's Government and foreign countries, and that, therefore, there appears to be no special reason why the Polish Government should object to the provision. At the same time the Board recognize that there is some force in the Polish contention, and there should probably be no real difficulty in the adherence to the Treaty of other parts of the Empire.

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd April, 1923.

WITH reference to your letter of the 30th September, 1922,‡ I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that he has received a copy of the letter from the Board of Trade to the Foreign Office of the 13th February§ regarding the proposed Anglo-Polish Commercial Treaty.

* 47080: not printed; it expressed concurrence in the proposal in paragraph 2 of No. 261 in Dominions No. 87. † Extract only printed here. ‡ 48665: not printed; it enclosed a copy of a despatch to His Majesty's Minister at Warsaw forwarding a copy of the letter referred to under *. § See enclosure in No. 313.

2. As regards Article 9 of the draft Treaty, the Secretary of State agrees that it should be pointed out to the Polish Government that the provision to which they take exception occurs in many other Treaties, but that, if insistence on the inclusion of this provision should jeopardize the Treaty as a whole, it should be abandoned. With regard to the concluding words of paragraph 9 of the letter from the Board of Trade, it is, of course, not possible to give an assurance to the Polish Government that any particular part of the Empire will adhere to the Treaty.

5. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Board of Trade.

provision by which, irrespective of accession to the Treaty, goods produced or manufactured in the Dominions and Colonies are granted most-favoured-nation treatment, subject to reciprocity. The draft Treaty prepared by His Majesty's Government included a stipulation to this effect, but the Polish Government raised difficulties as to its terms, and, as insistence on its insertion seemed likely to delay the completion of the negotiations, it was thought best not to press the point.

Enclosure in No. 317.

SIR W. MAX MULLER to THE MARQUESS CURZON OF KEDLESTON.

(Received 3rd December.)

(No. 524.)

MY LORD,

Warsaw, 26th November, 1923.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 161 of to-day's date, I have the honour to transmit herewith the text† of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation signed by myself on behalf of His Majesty's Government, and on behalf of the Polish Government by M. Roman Dmowski, Minister for Foreign Affairs, and M. Szydlowski, Minister of Commerce, together with a copy of the full powers issued to these Ministers.

I have further the honour to enclose either in original or in copy the six notes exchanged between M. Dmowski and myself together with our respective acknowledgments‡ placing on record certain interpretations or reservations with regard to the following matters dealt with in the treaty:—

1. An assurance on the part of His Majesty's Government against the imposition on Polish goods of differential duties, under the powers conferred on them by Part II of the "Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921."

* No. 316.

† Not printed; see Treaty Series 1924, No. 26.

‡ Acknowledgments not printed.

2. The promise of His Majesty's Government to sign a separate agreement or agreements for the recognition of shipping documents relating to passenger certificates, tonnage measurement certificates, and similar documents.
3. The right of British subjects or British companies to acquire real property in Poland.
4. The right of British companies in Poland to employ British staffs.
5. The application of the treaty to the territory of the Free City of Danzig.
6. A reservation regarding the grant of transit facilities to and from any country adjacent to Poland in the event of the frontier between Poland and that country being closed.

In discussing the question of the transit facilities to be reciprocally granted by the two Governments, the Polish negotiators raised the question of the passage through Poland of British passengers and goods in transit to, through or from Lithuania, as they feared that in accepting Article 5 of the Treaty without any reservation they would find themselves compelled to agree to differential treatment as between Polish and British goods on this frontier. This they very naturally refused to accept, and they expressed their intention of making a corresponding reservation in regard to the transit facilities granted by Article 5 until such time as Poland should have signed an agreement with Lithuania establishing normal traffic across the Polish-Lithuanian frontier for Polish goods and passengers. As the point of view of the Polish Government appeared to me reasonable and in accordance with the spirit of the stipulations of Article 5 as to transit being confined to routes in use convenient for international traffic, I agreed to accept and acknowledge the note on this subject mentioned under No. 6.

In accordance with the wishes of the Board of Trade, as conveyed in their letter enclosed in your Lordship's despatch No. 613 of the 2nd November, I addressed a private letter to M. Dmowski, in which I expressed the hope that the Polish Government would agree that the Treaty should be brought into force as a provisional measure without awaiting formal ratification either from the moment of signature or within a brief period of that date. In his reply M. Dmowski expresses his regret that the Treaty as a whole cannot be enforced before ratification, as such a measure would not be in accordance with the Polish Constitution. He promised, however, to make inquiries whether separate articles of the treaty cannot be brought into force provisionally, on the basis of reciprocity, by the issue of temporary regulations for this purpose, and to inform me of the result of his inquiries at the earliest possible moment.

Copies of these letters are also enclosed.

At the request of the Polish Government the following verbal alterations were made in the text of the treaty:—

Article 5, § 6.—After the words "transit of arms," insertion of the word "munitions."

Article 10, § 1.—After the words "fifteen days after," insertion of the words "the exchange of instruments of."

Article 10, last §.—Altered to "Done in duplicate, each in English and Polish, both authentic, at Warsaw," etc.

The draft of the British consular certificate of origin, transmitted with your Lordship's despatch No. 524 of the 15th September, 1923, together with a Polish translation, is attached to the text of the treaty (Annex 2).^{} A form of certificate to be introduced by the Polish authorities for the import of goods into Poland, together with an English translation, is also attached (Annex 1).^{}

I desire to draw your Lordship's special attention to the great assistance afforded to me by Mr. Kimens, commercial secretary to His Majesty's Legation, throughout the protracted and difficult negotiations for the conclusion of the commercial treaty. His intimate acquaintance with the Polish character, and also with the Polish language, has proved invaluable, and I am glad to be able to have this opportunity of expressing officially my grateful appreciation of the service which he has rendered to me in connexion with the conclusion of this Treaty.

I have, &c.,

W. G. MAX MULLER.

Sub-enclosure 4.

SIR W. MAX MULLER to M. DMOWSKI,

(No. 240.)

M. LE MINISTRE,

Varsovie, le 26 novembre, 1923.

J'AI l'honneur de porter à la connaissance de votre Excellence que j'ai référé à mon Gouvernement le désir du Gouvernement polonais d'insérer dans le Traité de Commerce et de Navigation entre le Royaume-Uni et la Pologne une clause garantissant la Pologne contre l'imposition de droits de douane pour cause de la dépréciation du change en vertu de la loi "Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921."

Le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique présume que le Gouvernement polonais a en vue les pouvoirs qui lui ont été donnés en vertu de la Partie II de la loi "Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921," de fixer, pour cause de la dépréciation du change, des droits de douane sur les marchandises de tout genre ou catégorie (à l'exception de comestibles et boissons) produites dans un pays autre que le Royaume-Uni parce qu'elles sont vendues ou offertes dans le Royaume-Uni à des prix qui, par suite de la dépréciation vis-à-vis de la livre sterling de la valeur du change dans le pays dans lequel les marchandises peuvent être produites, sont inférieurs aux prix auxquels les mêmes marchandises peuvent être produites avec profit dans le Royaume-Uni (section II (1) (b) de la loi).

En rapport avec le ci-dessus, je dois attirer l'attention de votre Excellence sur le paragraphe (b), section II (3), qui stipule qu'aucune disposition ne peut être prise conformément à la Partie II de la loi qui serait en contradiction avec les stipulations de tout traité, convention ou accord en vigueur. En vertu de cette clause, le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique en cas de la conclusion du traité avec la Pologne serait, d'après l'article 2 de ce traité, privé du droit de publier tout ordre pour le prélèvement, pour cause de l'état du change polonais, de droits de douane sur les marchandises polonaises de tout genre ou catégorie qui ne sont pas imposés sur l'importation dans le Royaume-Uni des mêmes marchandises de n'importe quel autre pays étranger. En ce qui concerne les stipulations sur le change déprécié de la Partie II de la loi "Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921," le Gouvernement polonais peut être assuré qu'aussi longtemps que le traité anglo-polonais reste en vigueur aucun droit de douane différentiel ne sera imposé sur les marchandises polonaises.

Finalement, je dois porter à la connaissance de votre Excellence qu'à l'époque de l'étude de la loi "Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921," la même question fut soulevée par le Gouvernement italien, et que le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique lui a donné une assurance au même sens basée sur l'article 2 du Traité de Commerce anglo-italien de l'année 1883.

EN me référant à l'article 4 du Traité de Commerce et de Navigation entre le Royaume-Uni et la Pologne, signé aujourd'hui, j'ai l'honneur de porter à la connaissance de votre Excellence que le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique est prêt à signer séparément un accord ou des accords pour la reconnaissance réciproque des documents de navigation se rapportant aux certificats de voyageurs, des lettres de jauge et d'autres documents analogues.

Je tiens à observer que l'administration dans le Royaume-Uni des règlements à ce sujet est soumise à la législation anglaise et que le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique a le pouvoir de reconnaître les certificats étrangers seulement dans le cas où les règlements du pays étranger en question, ainsi que l'administration de ces règlements, sont plus ou moins conformes aux règlements et à l'administration du Royaume-Uni.

Sans doute, le Gouvernement polonais désire maintenir sur mer le même niveau que celui maintenu par la Grande-Bretagne, et dès que les autorités polonaises et les experts techniques du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique seront d'accord sur les différents points qui s'y rapportent, le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique, de son côté, sera prêt à faire tout ce qui est dans son pouvoir pour faciliter et accélérer la conclusion d'un accord ou des accords avec le Gouvernement polonais concernant les différents points en question.

SIR W. MAX MULLER to M. DMOWSKI.

DEAR M. DMOWSKI,

Warsaw, 21st November, 1923.

My Government, who attach the greatest importance to a speedy settlement of the commercial relations between our two countries, have instructed me to endeavour to arrange that the commercial treaty, which I hope that we may be able to sign before my departure next Tuesday, should come into force as a provisional measure from the moment of signature without awaiting formal ratification.

Without this, considerable further delay is inevitable, as the new Parliament is not likely to assemble at Westminster before the middle of January, and it is likely to be well into February before it settles down to routine duties.

I may add that, in the case of treaties recently concluded by my Government with Spain and Czechoslovakia, it was arranged that the treaties should come into force immediately. I venture, therefore, to hope that the Polish Government may be able to take a similar course in regard to our commercial treaty so as to bring it into force as a provisional measure, either from the moment of signature or within a brief period, say, a fortnight, from that date.

Yours sincerely,

W. G. MAX MULLER.

Sub-enclosure 17.

M. DMOWSKI to SIR W. MAX MULLER.

MY DEAR SIR WILLIAM,

Warsaw, 24th November, 1923.

I BEG to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 21st instant regarding the coming into force of the commercial treaty between our two countries.

I am afraid that the Treaty as a whole cannot be enforced before ratification, since a measure taken to that effect would be unconstitutional in Poland.

I am, however, making inquiries as to whether separate articles of the treaty could not come into force provisionally, on the basis of reciprocity, by the issue of temporary regulations for this purpose by the Minister concerned.

I will inform you as to whether such an arrangement could be carried out, or not, as soon as I receive the required information from my colleagues. The Polish Government is anxious not to cause any delay in the development of commercial relations between our two countries, and is therefore ready to agree in this case to an exceptional measure, if only the latter does not clash with the laws laid down by our Constitution.

Yours sincerely,

R. DMOWSKI.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th May, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 163 of the 24th March,* I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have given their most careful consideration to the question of the manner in which effect may be given to the desire of the Free State Government that the Irish Free State should be admitted to the Universal Postal Union.

* 18318: not printed; it intimated that the question raised in No. 318 was receiving the consideration of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the Postmaster-General.

2. The present position of the Irish Free State in regard to membership of the Union is not entirely free from doubt. On the one hand, the ratification of the Madrid Convention by the Postmaster-General in 1921 of course included the territory now forming the Irish Free State; on the other, Article 29 of the Convention includes as members of the Union, in addition to Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, and the Union of South Africa, "the other Dominions, and the whole of the British Colonies and Protectorates." It is, however, not clear whether Article 29 would automatically include any Dominion constituted at a date subsequent to the ratification of the Convention.

3. As under Article 26 accessions to the Convention have to be notified diplomatically to the Swiss Government, the question appears to be whether, in the first instance, the accession of the Irish Free State will be accepted by that Government in its capacity as headquarters government. It is in any case very desirable that the status of the Irish Free State as a separate postal administration should be notified as early as possible to the Postal Union.

4. The question of membership of the Union, however, is entirely distinct from the further question whether a member of the Union can be considered as a single administration under Article 29 of the Postal Union Convention and can in that capacity exercise a vote at Postal Union Congresses and contribute as an independent member to the expenses of the International Bureau. There was a very strong feeling on the part of certain delegations at the Congress of Madrid against the grant of votes to Dominions and Dependencies; and it is clear that if an attempt were made to obtain a modification of Article 29 of the Madrid Convention and of Article XXXVII of the Detailed Regulations there would be no prospect of obtaining the unanimous vote by which alone Article 29 could be modified. Apart from this difficulty the procedure laid down in Article 28 of the Convention for obtaining a vote requires considerably over a year before a decision can be reached; and as the next Congress of the Union is due to take place next year there is clearly little to be gained by taking any preliminary steps before the Congress.

5. A further advantage to be gained by reserving this question for the Congress is that the decisions of a Congress are taken by a simple majority irrespective of the character of the proposals.

6. In all the circumstances, therefore, His Majesty's Government have thought it best formally to notify the adhesion of the Irish Free State to the Postal Union to the Government of the Swiss Confederation under Article 26 of the Madrid Convention and at the same time to advise that Government that it is proposed to raise at the Congress of Stockholm the question of obtaining a separate vote in the affairs of the Union for the Irish Free State; and that in the meantime it is presumed that for the purposes of contributing to the expenses of the Union the Free State cannot be placed in a definite category under Article XXXVII of the Detailed Regulations of the Madrid Convention, but will continue provisionally to be classified among the British Dominions, Colonies, and Protectorates specified in paragraph 5 of that Article.

7. I enclose, for your Ministers' information, a copy of a despatch to His Majesty's Minister at Berne instructing him to address a formal intimation to the Swiss Government on the lines of the preceding paragraph.

8. In conclusion, in view of the terms of the undertaking given to the late Provisional Government of Ireland in the letter from the Colonial Office of the 2nd May, 1922,* that, as regards Conventions already in force which apply to the Irish Free State, His Majesty's Government would at the instance of the Free State Government, take the necessary steps with a view to placing the Irish Free State in the same position as the other self-governing Dominions, His Majesty's Government will be glad to learn whether your Ministers would desire the British Delegation formally to propose at the next Congress that the Irish Free State be admitted as an independent member of the Union with a separate vote or whether they would prefer to request another self-governing Dominion to take this step with the support, if necessary, of the British Delegation.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 5th May, 1923.

I HAVE to inform you that the Government of the Irish Free State, now one of His Majesty's self-governing Dominions, and constituting a distinct postal administration, have expressed their desire to secure recognition of the Irish Free State as a member of the Universal Postal Union, and to accede to (1) the Universal Postal Convention and (2) the Agreement relating to the exchange of insured letters and boxes, as signed at Madrid on 30th November, 1920, with the proviso, in the case of (1), that the Irish Free State does not desire to be a party to the arrangement specified in Article 11 relating to the withdrawal of correspondence from the post, &c. For this purpose the Irish Free State wish to be included in the list of Dominions specified in Article 1 of the Final Protocol to the Principal Convention.

2. The sums adopted by the Post Office of the Irish Free State as the equivalents of the postage rates laid down by Article 6 of the Principal Convention are:—

Convention rate in gold centimes.	Irish Free State equivalent Pence.
25	1½
30	1½
10	½
5	¼

3. I shall accordingly be glad if you will address a formal intimation to the Swiss Government to this effect. In making this communication you should add that it is proposed to raise at the next meeting of the Postal Union Congress at Stockholm the question of obtaining a separate vote in the affairs of the Union for the Irish Free State, and that in the meantime it is presumed that the Free State cannot be placed in a definite category for the purpose of contributing to the expenses of the Postal Union.

4. For your information I transmit to you a copy of the despatch from the Governor-General of the Irish Free State regarding the wishes of his Government in the matter.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Grace herewith, with reference to your despatch, No. 337, of the 7th December, 1922,† copy of a Minute from Ministers on the subject of the suggested extension to the Union of South Africa of the agreement of the 31st December, 1920, between the British and German Governments respecting Article 297 of the Treaty of Versailles.

MINUTE No. 162.

WITH reference to His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Minute No. 62/2668 dated the 29th December, 1922, Ministers have the honour to state that, in view of the legislation issued in the Union in execution of the Treaty of Versailles, they are of opinion that no practical advantage would be derived by extending the agreement of the 31st December, 1920, between the British and German Governments respecting Article 297 to the Union of South Africa.

Under Union legislation the assets of German nationals are returned in the form of certificates of credit, but there is nothing to prevent a German from re-purchasing his own property in specie. In the case of liquidated firms or businesses the original books and documents are returned to the former German owners on payment of any charges or expenses incurred in connexion therewith.

The Union custodian is in close touch with the German Consul-General, and arrangements have been made by virtue of which accounts such as are referred to in Article 13 of the agreement under review will be supplied to the Consul.—J. C. SMUTS.

ARISING out of the presentation to British Representative at Moscow of two notes of unprecedented insolence in reply to a request that the lives of Roman Catholic ecclesiastics might be spared, the Cabinet has been considering the question of relations with the Russian Soviet Government with particular reference to the continuance of anti-British propaganda by Soviet representatives, especially in India, Persia and Afghanistan, and the treatment of British subjects and British vessels by the Soviet Government. Cabinet has approved presentation to Soviet Government of a Memorandum setting out these grounds of complaint and making the following requests:—

(1) That the Soviet Government will repudiate and apologise for instances of anti-British propaganda, evidence for which is set out in full and is irrefutable, and that they will disown and recall the officials responsible.

(2) That the Soviet Government will admit liability and will undertake to pay compensation in the case of three British trawlers seized off the Murmansk coast and in the cases of two British subjects whose claims have already been thoroughly discussed with the Russians, viz., C. F. Davison, who was murdered in 1920, and Mrs. Stan Harding. These two are put forward as test cases without prejudice to similar claims for personal injuries, treatment of which is stated to be for future discussion.

(3) That the Soviet Government will withdraw unequivocally offensive communications sent to British Representative.

Hodgson is instructed in a covering despatch when presenting Memorandum to inform the Soviet Government that unless they undertake to comply with requests within ten days His Majesty's Government will recognize that Soviet Government do not wish the existing relations between the Governments to be maintained, and that they will consider themselves in accordance with paragraph 3 of Article XIII Trade Agreement (Cmd. 1207) free from obligations of Agreement as from the termination of that period. In these circumstances the Russian and British Missions would have to leave London and Moscow as soon as practicable.

In communicating the above to your Ministers please explain that it is very important that the utmost secrecy on whole subject should be maintained for the time being, as it is impossible to foresee what action, as a result of presentation of Memorandum, the Soviet Government may take in relation to the British Representative at Moscow, and it may consequently be necessary for His Majesty's Government to take special action in relation to Russian Soviet representative in London.

The intention is that the Note should be presented about 10th May and published in this country immediately thereafter. Hodgson has been instructed in the event of his departure becoming imminent to warn all British subjects within reach that it will be entirely at their own risk if they remain.—DEVONSHIRE.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 13th March, 1923.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch No. 364 of the 24th of July last,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a Note from the Russian Trade Delegation regarding the proposal of the Soviet Government to send a Mission to Canada. I should be glad to learn what reply your Ministers would wish to be returned to this Note. In this connexion I enclose a copy of a telegram from His Majesty's Representative at Moscow reporting that the Soviet Concessions Committee has passed a resolution in favour of refusing the Canadian Pacific Railway Company the right to do shipping business in Russia and of closing the Company's offices in the territory of the Republic.

2. Copies of correspondence between the Foreign Office and the Russian Trade Delegation relative to the proposed Soviet Mission to Canada are enclosed for convenience of reference. This correspondence was communicated to the High Commissioner for Canada at the time; and the Foreign Office Note of the 6th December was founded on information received by the High Commissioner from Ottawa.

3. In the meantime, the Russian Trade Delegation has been informed that the refusal of the Government of Canada to accept the proposed Mission was due to objections to the personnel of the staff and not to any objection of principle against the reception of a Mission. This information also was founded on a message received by the High Commissioner from Ottawa.

Enclosure 1 in No. 328.

M. KLISHKO, Assistant Official Agent of the Russian Soviet Government in Great Britain, presents his compliments to the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, and, with reference to the Foreign Office communication of the 6th December, 1922, reference N.10604/567/38, begs to state that he is instructed by the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs to call his attention to the following facts:—

On the 3rd of July, 1922, Mr. Esmond Ovey, acting upon instructions from the Earl of Balfour, informed Mr. Berzin of the desire of the Government of the Dominion of Canada "that the provisions of the agreement between the Government of the United Kingdom and the Russian Soviet Government for the resumption of trade and commerce between the two countries which was signed in London on the 16th of March, 1921, should apply also to Canada," and proposed "that the provisions of that agreement shall be held to apply to the Dominion of Canada and to govern the relations between Canada and Russia."

The Note further requested that, should the Russian Government agree to this proposal, a Note in confirmation should cause the arrangements to be regarded "as being completed and having full effect as from the date of the present exchange of Notes."

M. Berzin's reply of the same date containing the Russian Government's assent to the above proposal made the arrangements duly "complete and having full effect" from that day's date, i.e., from the 3rd of July, 1922.

The above-mentioned Notes show clearly that all the three Governments concerned have agreed that the relations between Russia and Canada were from that date to be regulated by all the provisions of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement. In accordance with this, the Canadian Government has appointed Mr. Leonlyn Dana Wilgress to the post of Canadian Trade Representative in Russia, and the British Agent in Russia, under the instructions of His Majesty's Government, informed the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs to that effect in his aide-mémoire No. 239 of the 7th August, inquiring whether this appointment was acceptable to the Russian Government. The Russian Government regarded this appointment as coming under Article 5, paragraph 1, of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement, and, having no objection to Mr. Wilgress's candidature, accepted him as the Canadian Official Agent, of which fact the British Agent was informed by the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs in its aide-mémoire No. 3A/422 of the 23rd August, 1922.

The Russian Government likewise has appointed, as its Official Agents to Canada, Mr. Peter Voykoff and Mr. Gregory Weinstein, with Mr. Samuel Kahan and Mr. Maxim Divilkovsky included in their staff; and Mr. Berzin requested the British Foreign Office to inquire whether the above persons were acceptable to the Canadian Government.

More than two months have elapsed from the date of the above request, and, with the exception of a single letter from the British Foreign Office regarding a technical misunderstanding (cleared up at the time) as to the proposed staff of the Mission, no official intimation from the Canadian Government regarding the acceptability of the members of the Mission has been forthcoming. At last, on the 6th of December, the Foreign Office informs Mr. Berzin "that the Government of Canada has now replied refusing permission to Mr. Peter Voykoff, Mr. Gregory Weinstein and Mr. Samuel Kahan to visit that country."

It must be noted in this connexion that the British Government, as well as the Government of Canada, were fully aware of the purpose of the above-mentioned persons going to Canada. It could in no way be regarded as a mere visit to that country, and it is surprising that the British Foreign Office in its Note of the 6th of December should refer to it as to an intended visit, permission for which could be refused in the ordinary way. The Russian Government wished to send Mr. Peter Voykoff, Mr. Gregory Weinstein, Mr. Samuel Kahan and Mr. Divilkovsky, as seen from Mr. Berzin's Note of the 21st of September, in the capacity of members of the Official Mission to Canada, and the reply of the Canadian Government refusing to admit them can be regarded only as a refusal to admit to Canada Russian Official Agents as such, which amounts to a refusal to carry out one of the provisions of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement.

In view of the fact that the Russian Government is up till now not aware of the Canadian Government's ever having expressed its desire to rescind the arrangement of July 3rd, 1922, the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs would be glad if the Foreign Office would be kind enough to inquire of the Canadian Government whether it intends to carry out the provisions of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement, including Article 5, paragraph I, and to admit to Canada Russian Official Agents with their staff.

It is also to be noted that there was no intention on the part of the Russian Government to include in the Official Mission Madame Kollontai, Mr. Nuorteva and Professor Tulaikov, mentioned in Mr. Gregory's letter of the 6th December, 1922.

22ND FEBRUARY. No. 15 (R). Concession Committee has passed resolution in favour of refusing Canadian Pacific lessee right to do shipping business in Russia and closing Company's offices in territory of Republic. Pretext is that Canadian Government shirks fulfilment of its agreement with Soviet Government.

I have asked for explanation of allegation and have pointed out that as Company's representative was working legally in Russia before adhesion of Canada to Trade Agreement, charge, even if it could be sustained, would be no justification for proposed action.

M. BERZIN, Assistant Official Agent of the Russian Soviet Government in Great Britain, presents his compliments to the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, and begs to state that in connexion with the Trade Agreement concluded the 3rd July, 1922, between his Government and Canada, his Government wishes to send a Mission to Canada under the Chairmanship of Mr. Peter Voikov. The Mission consists of:

Grigori Weinstein (Member),
Samuel Kahan (Secretary), and Maxim Divilkovsky (Member of the Staff).

Mr. Kahan will be accompanied by his wife and seven-year-old son.

WITH reference to your letter No. J.B./12435 of the 22nd instant, I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to inform you that, as a result of Monsieur Klishko's recent verbal enquiry, the competent department of His Majesty's Government was requested to ascertain whether the Government of Canada would be willing to admit Monsieur Nuorteva, Madame Kollontai and Monsieur Tulaikov as members of the trade mission which the Soviet Government proposes to send to that country.

2. Pending the receipt of a reply to this enquiry no guarantee can be given that Monsieur Tulaikov will be admitted to Canada nor can the facilities asked for in your letter under reference be granted.

3. No intimation has reached this department that Monsieur Tulaikov has ever received permission to visit this country, and I am to enquire whether he has in fact received such permission and by whom was it granted.

4. I am further to point out that in your letter, No. J.B./12415 of the 21st instant, the proposed mission is stated to consist of Monsieur Voikov, Grigori Weinstein, Samuel Kahan and Maxim Divilkovsky. This information would appear to conflict with that supplied by Monsieur Klishko, and it is not understood what the exact composition of the mission is now intended to be.

5. I am, therefore, to request that the requisite information on this point may be communicated to this department at an early date for transmission to the Canadian authorities.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 30th July, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 121 of the 13th of March,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a memorandum from the Russian Trade Delegation regarding the refusal of the Canadian Government to accept the proposed Soviet Government mission to Canada. This memorandum was not communicated to you immediately on its receipt, as it was thought that action on it must depend on the outcome of the general correspondence with the Soviet Government as to relations with Russia.

* No. 10460: not printed; it enclosed copy of No. 328.

2. It is observed from the telegram from the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs to the High Commissioner of the 15th of March,* that Canada would be prepared to admit any persons forming the Russian Trade Delegation who might be approved by His Majesty's Government. So far as Messrs. Peter Lazarevich Voikov and Gregory Weinstein, of the proposed trade mission, are concerned, it has been ascertained that the Secretary of State for Home Affairs would not be prepared to agree to the grant of visâs for the purpose of their entering Great Britain. Messrs. Samuel Kahan and Maxim Divilkovski would, however, on present information, probably be allowed to enter Great Britain if they applied for permission. In order to prevent any undue delay in the settlement of this question, the Russian Trade Delegation is being informed that the appointment of Messrs. Voikov and Weinstein will not in any case be acceptable to the Government of Canada, while as regards that of Messrs. Kahan and Divilkovski definite information is still awaited. The Russian Trade Delegation will thus be able to advise the Soviet Government to proceed with the selection of some other persons to fill the places of Messrs. Voikov and Weinstein. A copy of the note to the Delegation is enclosed.

3. I should be glad to be informed whether the Canadian Government would be prepared formally to withdraw their objection to the admission to Canada of Messrs. Kahan and Divilkovski, in order that the Russian Trade Delegation may be informed of their definite decision on this point. The names of persons ultimately selected by the Soviet Government to replace Messrs. Voikov and Weinstein will be submitted to the Government of Canada in due course.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure 1 in No. 330.

MONSIEUR Berzin, Assistant Official Agent of the Russian Soviet Government in Great Britain, presents his compliments to the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, and begs to refer to the Foreign Office communication of the 15th February, reference N.1042/80/38, dealing with the question of the admission of the Soviet Mission to Canada.

The Russian Government notes with pleasure that no difference on the interpretation of the various clauses of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement exists between the two Governments.

The Russian Government is also pleased to note that the Government of Canada does not object on principle to the admission of a Soviet Mission as such, but the objection is due to the personnel of the staff appointed by the Russian Government. At the same time, the Russian Government cannot help expressing surprise that the refusal has been extended to the complete staff of the Mission appointed, and it would like to know the reason for this refusal, as this information will serve as a guide in the appointment of the staff of the new Mission.

Monsieur Berzin would deem it a great favour if this matter could be dealt with with as little delay as possible, as, in view of the uncertain position which has resulted from the refusal of the Canadian Government to admit the Soviet Mission to Canada, a number of trade negotiations have of necessity been suspended with Canada and Russia.

Russian Trade Delegation,

Enclosure 2 in No. 330.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 25th July, 1923.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to state, in reply to an inquiry made by you whilst calling at this department on the 27th of June, and with reference to Foreign Office letter of the 15th of February, that the refusal of the Government of Canada to accept the proposed Soviet Mission to that country was due to objections to the personnel of the staff, and not to any objection in principle against the reception of the mission.

2. There is no prospect that the Government of Canada would be willing to accept Mr. Peter Lazarevich Voikov or Mr. Gregory Weinstein. Definite information is still awaited whether they would have any objection to the appointment of Mr. Samuel Kahan or Mr. Maxim Divilkovski. I am, therefore, to suggest that, if your Government is still desirous of proceeding with the despatch of a mission to Canada, the names of any persons whom it may be desired to appoint in place of Mr. Voikov and Mr. Weinstein should be communicated in due course to His Majesty's Government for submission to the Government of Canada.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 27th January, 1923.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 25th January, 1923.

WITH reference to Colonial Office letter of 15th November last,† I am directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to transmit, for the observations of the Duke of Devonshire, a copy of a letter‡ which is being addressed to the Board of Trade, enclosing a new revised draft of the proposed Anglo-Siamese Commercial Treaty.§

* No. 330. † No. 274 in Dominions No. 87. ‡ Not printed. § Articles 4, 9 and 10, printed here.

2. The observations of the Duke of Devonshire, conveyed in Colonial Office letter under reference, have been borne in mind in preparing this new draft, and, with regard to the proposal that Siamese immigration into Australia should be specifically provided against, the Secretary of State concurs in the opinion that an endeavour should be made to induce the Commonwealth Government to withdraw their suggestion.

DRAFT TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED KINGDOM AND SIAM.

Article 4.

Articles exported from Siam shall from the time of production to the date of shipment pay one impost only, whether this be levied as an inland or transit duty or paid on exportation. Goods or produce which pay any description of tax in the interior shall be exempted from any further payment of duty on exportation.

The tariff of export and inland duties appended to the treaty of 15th April, 1855, is hereby repealed.

The export duty on rice shall not exceed 25 cents per picul, and no export duty shall be levied on timber or minerals of any kind. It is understood that if export duties are levied on any other commodity, no other or higher duties shall be levied on the exportation of any such commodity to any part of the territories of His Britannic Majesty, including territories under the protection of His Britannic Majesty and territories in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty than those paid on the like article exported to any other foreign country.

Article 9.

The provisions of Articles 1 and 2 shall not be made applicable to British subjects unless and until rates of duty at least as high are applied to subjects of all other countries. Any concession in the matter of rates of duty which Siam may accord to articles the produce or manufacture of any other country shall simultaneously and unconditionally, without request and without compensation, be extended to articles the produce or manufacture of any part of His Britannic Majesty's territories as defined in Article 4.

Article 10.

The stipulations of the present Treaty and of the other Treaties, agreements and exchanges of notes, enumerated in the schedule, which apply to British subjects, shall be deemed to apply, as regards commercial matters, to natives of any of His Britannic Majesty's Protectorates and Protected States or of any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty.

No. 335.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR.

(No. 20.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 19th October, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, a list of Commercial Treaties with foreign Powers which impose obligations on Southern Rhodesia. The list distinguishes between Treaties which became applicable to Southern Rhodesia on its annexation, and those which were already applicable to Southern Rhodesia as a British Protectorate.

2. There are also a certain number of Commercial Treaties, e.g., those with Portugal (12th August, 1914), and Serbia (17th February, 1907), under which, while they impose no obligations upon Southern Rhodesia, goods produced or manufactured in Southern Rhodesia are entitled, on importation into the country concerned, to enjoy most-favoured-nation treatment provided that Southern Rhodesia accords similar treatment to goods produced or manufactured in the country in question. The Treaty with Serbia is now binding on the Serb-Croat-Slovene State under Article XII of the Treaty between the Principal Allied and Associated Powers, and the Serb-Croat-Slovene State of the 10th September, 1919 (Treaty Series 1919, No. 17).

3. I would also invite reference to the position in relation to Spain. A Commercial Treaty with Spain was signed on the 31st October, 1922, but has not yet been ratified, though it has been brought into force as a modus vivendi pending ratification. The Treaty does not apply to Southern Rhodesia as the necessary notice of adhesion has not been given under Article 24, nor does it provide for the grant, subject to reciprocity, of most-favoured-nation treatment in Spain to goods produced or manufactured in non-adhering Dominions and Colonies, but the Spanish Government have agreed to grant to goods produced or manufactured in any of the non-adhering Dominions and Colonies the rates of duty specified in the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff, provided that a guarantee is given that Spanish goods imported into the territory in question will receive most-favoured-nation treatment. This arrangement has been accepted on behalf of Southern Rhodesia. I enclose copies of Notes‡ exchanged on the subject.

(2) Position in relation to Extradition Treaties.

54025

No. 336.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR.

(No. 76.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request you to lay before your Ministers the following observations with regard to the position of Southern Rhodesia in relation to extradition arrangements with foreign Powers.

2. On the incorporation of Southern Rhodesia in His Majesty's Dominions, all existing Extradition Treaties which apply to His Majesty's Dominions generally and all existing Orders in Council under Section 2 of the Extradition Act, 1870, giving effect to such Treaties, became applicable to Southern Rhodesia. The text of such Treaties and Orders in Council is contained in the volumes of Statutory Rules and Orders which, it is presumed, are in the possession of your Government.

3. I enclose copies of an Order in Council* issued on the 30th July, applying the Extradition Acts, 1870 to 1906, in the case of certain foreign countries in respect of offences specified in the White Slave Traffic Convention of the 4th May, 1910. His Majesty acceded to this Convention in respect of Southern Rhodesia on the 4th November, 1921, but Southern Rhodesia was not included among the territories to which the Order in Council of the 30th July applied, since, at that date, it was a Protectorate and not part of His Majesty's Dominions. Steps will now be taken for the issue of an Order in Council on similar lines applying to Southern Rhodesia.†

4. As regards future procedure, it would seem most convenient that, unless your Ministers see any objection, steps should be taken to repeal the present extradition legislation of Southern Rhodesia (Ordinance No. 2 of 1905, and amending legislation), while preserving its effect as regards any extradition arrangements with foreign States in respect of which it has been applied by notices made thereunder, and which have not been dealt with in existing Orders in Council under Section 2 of the Extradition Act, 1870, and to replace it by a short enactment ancillary to the Extradition Acts, 1870 to 1906. An example of such an enactment is to be found in the Extradition Act, 1903, of the Parliament of the Commonwealth of Australia, a copy of which is enclosed. Steps would then be taken to incorporate this enactment in the Extradition Act, 1870, by the issue of an Order in Council under Section 18 of that Act.

(e) See Article I.

* S.R.O. 1923, No. 971.

† See S.R.O. 1923, No. 1593.

5. In the meanwhile, it would appear that any extradition questions which may arise between Southern Rhodesia and foreign countries, with which there exist extradition arrangements applying to Southern Rhodesia, can be dealt with under the legislation at present in force, since I am advised that there is no repugnancy between the provisions of this legislation and those of the Extradition Acts, 1870 to 1906, and accordingly it remains in force until repealed. (Annexation Order in Council, Article 4).

6. I am addressing a separate despatch* to you on the subject of the recent Convention providing that the existing Extradition Treaties with Belgium shall apply to the Belgian Congo and to certain British Protectorates. No special action is required in order to give effect to this Convention in Southern Rhodesia, since Southern Rhodesia will be covered by the Order in Council which is to be issued under Section 2 of the Extradition Act, 1870, in respect of the Convention.

(No. 79.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, copies of a Parliamentary Paper (Cmd. 1612) containing the text of Draft Conventions and Recommendations adopted by the International Labour Conference at its session of October-November, 1921.

2. Two of the draft Conventions contained in this Paper, viz., those relating to Workmen's Compensation in Agriculture (pages 20-23) and the Rights of Association and Combination of Agricultural Workers (pages 17-19) were ratified in respect of Great Britain by Orders of the Lords of the Council dated the 11th July, and action under Article 421 of the Treaty of Versailles is being taken in regard to these two Conventions.

* No. 113.

† No. 336.

‡ No. 337.

3. Article 421 of the Treaty has, of course, now no application to Southern Rhodesia, but it nevertheless devolves upon His Majesty's Government, in accordance with Article 405, to bring such Conventions to the notice of the Government of Southern Rhodesia, as the authority within whose competence the matter lies.

4. The Draft Conventions and Recommendations adopted at the previous sessions of the Conference were contained in the Parliamentary Papers Cmd. 627 and Cmd. 1174. The following five Conventions were ratified in respect of the United Kingdom by Orders of the Lords of the Council dated the 5th July, 1921:—

(1) Draft Convention concerning Unemployment (pages 12-14 of Cmd. 627).

(2) Draft Convention concerning Employment of Women during the Night (pages 22-25 of Cmd. 627).

(3) Draft Convention fixing the Minimum Age for admission of Children to Industrial Employment (pages 30-33 of Cmd. 627).

(4) Draft Convention concerning Night Work of Young Persons employed in Industry (pages 34-37 of Cmd. 627).

(5) Draft Convention fixing the Minimum Age for admission of Children to Employment at Sea (pages 7-10 of Cmd. 1174).

The question of the application of these Conventions to Southern Rhodesia under Article 421 of the Treaty was considered at the time, and it was decided that no action was necessary as the Conventions were inapplicable to Southern Rhodesia. In this connexion, I would invite reference to the Administrator's despatch to the High Commissioner for South Africa, No. 401 of the 28th October, 1921.*

SIR,

Madrid, 22nd November, 1922.

I HAVE received Note No. 336 of the 1st instant,† in which Sir Esmé Howard, replying to mine of the 31st October last,‡ concerning the tariff treatment which is to apply in Spain to products from British India and the British Dominions and Colonies, requested that the said treatment should be that of the Second Column of the Spanish Tariff, applicable for an indefinite period and terminating six months after denunciation by either of the Parties interested; thus modifying the proposal which I had formulated in my Note aforementioned to the effect that the Second Column rates should be applied to the said countries only during the term of six months, which I considered sufficient for the purpose of giving these territories time to adhere, if they so wished, to the recent Treaty of Hispano-British Commerce.

His Majesty's Government, who have been notified of the said petition, have authorized me to formulate a new proposal to the British Government granting the benefits of the rates of duty in the Second Column of the Spanish Tariff to the products of the territories referred to for a period of six months, which can be prolonged indefinitely, with the option on both sides of denouncing the said régime with one month's notice, it being clearly understood that this concession is in exchange for treatment by the countries referred to identical with that given to most-favoured nations.

Enclosure 2 in No. 341.

(No. 373/908.163.)

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

British Embassy, Madrid, 16th December, 1922.

IN his Note No. 285 of the 22nd ultimo, Señor Fernandez Prida was good enough to propose that the duties of the Second Column of the Spanish Tariff should be applied to the products of the British Dominions and Colonies and of British India, pending their accession to the recently signed Commercial Treaty between Spain and the United Kingdom, for a period of six months, which arrangement would be automatically prolonged until one month after its denunciation by either party: this treatment to be conceded in return for most-favoured-nation treatment to be granted to goods the products of Spain by the particular parts of His Majesty's Dominions and Colonies in question.

His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to whom I did not fail to communicate a translation of Señor Fernandez Prida's Note, desires me to draw Your Excellency's attention to the difficult situation in which would be placed these parts of His Majesty's Dominions, and particularly the more distant ones, in the event of denunciation of such an agreement as that described above, since the delay of one month would leave no time for the necessary negotiations for replacing it either by a temporary or by a permanent agreement. I am therefore to suggest, and I venture to hope that I may enlist Your Excellency's support for this proposal with your colleagues of Hacienda and Fomento, that a notice of six months should be required from either party in order to terminate the temporary arrangement specified above.

In the event, however, that the Government of His Catholic Majesty find themselves unable to agree to so long notice being provided for, I am instructed to urge that the delay between the denunciation and the termination of the arrangement should be at least three months.

I should be obliged if Your Excellency would be so kind as to furnish me with an answer to the above proposals as soon as possible in order that I may communicate it to my Government.

I avail myself, etc.,

CHARLES WINGFIELD.

TRANSLATION OF COMMUNICATION DATED 26TH DECEMBER, 1922, FROM THE MINISTRY OF STATE, MADRID, TO MR. CHARLES WINGFIELD, CHARGE D'AFFAIRES OF GREAT BRITAIN, MADRID.

(No. 311.)

SIR,

YOUR note of the 13th instant* contained a request made in virtue of the provisions of the second paragraph of Article 5 of the Hispano-British Treaty of Commerce and Navigation of the 31st October last, to the effect that item No. 1331 of the Spanish Tariff, which reads: "Other fish, salted, smoked, or cured, except that in tins," should be added to Schedule A, Part II of the Treaty, and that the duty of 18 pesetas, conceded under the terms of the Agreement between Spain and Norway of the 7th October of this year to merchandise of this latter country, be granted to similar goods the produce or manufacture of the territories of His Britannic Majesty to which the Hispano-British Treaty applies.

In reply to your note, I have the honour to inform you that in accordance with the desire therein expressed the said item has been included in Schedule A, second Section, of the said Hispano-British Treaty, and at the same time I have requested my colleague the Minister of Hacienda to instruct the Customs Houses in this sense.

At the request of His Britannic Majesty's Embassy and in virtue of the provisions established in paragraph 2 of Article 5 of the Hispano-British Treaty of Commerce of the 31st October of the current year, it has been resolved to include in Schedule A, Section II, of the same, item No. 1331 of the Tariff now in force: "Other fish, salted, smoked or cured, except that in tins," such goods, whenever the produce or manufacture of the territories of His Britannic Majesty to which the Hispano-British Treaty applies, being granted the duty of 18 pesetas per 100 kilograms, as conceded in the Commercial Agreement signed between Spain and Norway on the 7th October of the present year to similar goods of this latter country.

This is made public so that it may be generally known and with reference to the numbers of the Gaceta de Madrid corresponding to the 8th October, and 4th November of this year, in which were published the Treaty and the Agreement referred to.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 351.]

(No. 68.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 12th February, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of the Treaty* of Commerce and Navigation between the United Kingdom and Spain, signed on the 31st October, and of the Protocol signed on the same date, bringing the Treaty into operation on the 6th November, as a modus vivendi, pending ratification of the Treaty.

2. The Spanish Government have been informed that for the purposes of this Treaty the Irish Free State should be deemed to be included among "His Britannic Majesty's territories outside the United Kingdom," and consequently under Article 24 the stipulations of the Treaty are not at present applicable to the Irish Free State.

3. Your Ministers will observe that under that Article notice may be given of the desire of the Government of any British territory outside the United Kingdom that the stipulations of the Treaty should be applied to it. The Spanish Government has agreed that, for the present, goods produced or manufactured in any such territory, in respect of which notice has not been given under Article 24, shall, on importation into Spain, be subject to the rates of import duty specified in the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff,† of which I enclose a copy, on condition of the grant by such territory of most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish goods. The precise intentions of the Spanish Government in this matter are not clear, and inquiry is being made on the subject, but it is understood that they propose that the arrangement shall hold good for a period of six months from the coming into force of the Treaty, i.e., until the 5th May, 1923, and that thereafter there should be for an indefinite period an obligation on the part of the Spanish Government to grant Second Column rates, and on the part of the government of the territory concerned to grant most-favoured-nation treatment, subject to one month's notice of termination on either side.

An endeavour is being made to induce the Spanish Government to agree to a longer period than one month for notification of termination of the arrangement.

4. Your Ministers will also observe that under Article 6 of the Treaty His Majesty's Government is bound not to levy any import duty upon certain articles produced in Spain, and, further, not to increase in future the duties leviable on wine and brandy or raisins, the effect of which will be that, if the stipulations of the Treaty are made applicable to the Irish Free State, it will be impossible for your Government (except by giving six months' notice of withdrawal from the Treaty) to increase at any future date, while the Treaty remains in force, the duties now levied on any wines, brandies or raisins, and further will render it necessary not to levy customs duties upon any goods falling under Schedule B. of the Treaty, in view of the fact that the existence of most-favoured-nation clauses in treaties with other Powers which are applicable to the Irish Free State would prevent any discrimination in favour of Spanish produce.

5. His Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid has been instructed to inform the Spanish Government that the Irish Free State does at present in fact accord most-favoured-nation treatment to imports from Spain. Consequently, for the time being, Free State goods on importation into Spain will be entitled to receive the benefit, referred to above, of the rates of import duty specified in the Second Column of the Spanish Tariff. They will not, however, receive the benefit of the special rates of duty specified in Schedule A to the Treaty, unless the Irish Free State accedes to the Treaty and thereby accepts, inter alia, the obligation to accord to Spanish goods the special privileges referred to in Article 6, which, in turn, would involve according like privileges to similar imports from any country enjoying most-favoured-nation treatment in the Irish Free State.

* Not printed here: see Treaty Series 1924, No. 21, for the text.

† Not printed here.

6. I shall be glad to learn whether your Ministers, after taking into consideration the effect of the provisions of Article 6 as indicated in paragraph 4 above, desire that notice should be given on their behalf by His Majesty's Government to the Spanish Government of their wish to accede to the Treaty.

7. If they do not desire that such notification should be given on their behalf, I shall be glad to be informed whether they will accept the proposal outlined in paragraph 3, whereby Free State goods would be subject to the rates of duty specified in the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff, and Spanish goods imported into the Free State would receive most-favoured-nation treatment, subject to notice of termination of the arrangement on either side.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Madrid, 19th February, 1923.

REFERRING to Mr. Wingfield's Note of the 16th December last,† and previous correspondence concerning the Customs Tariff treatment to be applied by Spain to the produce of India and British Dominions and Colonies until such times as these countries adhere to the Commercial Treaty signed between Spain and the United Kingdom on the 31st October, 1922, and referring also to Your Excellency's Notes of the 10th and 23rd January, and of the 8th instant, I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government, in their desire to meet the wishes of the Government of His Britannic Majesty, agree to extend to six months the term that must elapse between the denunciation and the date of termination of the Agreement which both Governments have arrived at, and in virtue of which the products of India and of the British Colonies and Dominions will be dutiable in Spain, until such time as they adhere to the above-mentioned Treaty, at the rates of the Second Column of the Customs Tariff, in exchange for the concession by these countries of most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish products.

This treatment, which His Majesty's Government (who, as Your Excellency will remember, had been requested by the Government of His Britannic Majesty to indicate the treatment they intended to apply to the countries in question, mentioned by name, that is, India and British Colonies and Dominions) conceded exclusively to those countries, cannot be considered as extending to the Protectorates and Mandated Territories of Great Britain, contrary to what the British Government, evidently under a misapprehension, has assumed, judging by Your Excellency's Note No. 28, of the 23rd January last, and notwithstanding the absence of any reference whatever by His Majesty's Government which could lead the British Government to see this question in any other light. I have, therefore, to inform Your Excellency that the said treatment is not applicable either to the Protectorates or the Mandated Territories of Great Britain, and only as an exception, and in view of the special nature of the case, does His Majesty's Government agree to concede it also, on the same terms, to the products of the Free State of Ireland, seeing that this State grants most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish products.

I have the honour to communicate the foregoing to Your Excellency, and to request you to be so good as to put it before your Government.

YOUR EXCELLENCY.

Madrid, 24th March, 1923.

IN view of the desire expressed by Your Excellency on behalf of His Britannic Majesty's Government to the effect that the Government of His Majesty should grant the products of the Protectorates and the British Mandated Territories the same tariff treatment as that conceded to the Dominions and the Colonies of the United Kingdom, in exchange for most-favoured-nation treatment of Spanish products on their importation into these countries, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that, after submitting the proposal to His Majesty's Government, they have decided to accede to the request in question.

It is therefore understood that the products of the Protectorates and British Mandated Territories mentioned below shall enjoy, on their importation into Spain, the benefits of the Second Column rates of duty in the Tariff for a period of six months counting from the date on which the Anglo-Spanish Treaty of Commerce of the 31st October, 1922 (an arrangement which will continue to remain in force for six months after its denunciation by either of the High Contracting Parties) came into force, in exchange for the most-favoured-nation treatment to be conceded to Spanish products in the territories referred to.

The countries to which reference is made are the following:—

Protectorates.—British Bechuanaland; Federated Malay States—Perak, Selangor, Negri-Sembilan; Unfederated Malay States—Johore, Kedah, Perlis, Kelantan, and Trengganu; Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Somaliland, Southern Rhodesia, Swaziland.

Mandated Territories.—Cameroons (British Sphere), Iraq, Nauru, New Guinea, Palestine, Western Samoa, South West Africa, Territory of Tanganyika, Togoland (British Sphere).

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd May, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 104 of the 21st April,* regarding the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty of the 31st October, 1922, and to request you to inform your Ministers that the position is as follows.

2. In the absence of special arrangements to the contrary, goods produced or manufactured in any of the self-governing Dominions to which the stipulations of the Treaty have not been made applicable under Article 24 (as will be the position of the Irish Free State), are liable to be charged, on importation into Spain, the rates of duty specified in the First Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff, a copy of which was enclosed in my despatch No. 68 of the 12th February.† In view of the fact that the Dominions at present accord most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish goods, the Spanish Government agreed, as a special concession, to grant to goods produced or manufactured in the Dominions the rates of duty specified in the Second Column of the Spanish Tariff, for a period of six months from the coming into force of the Treaty, i.e., until the 5th May, 1923. After that date, however, they are only prepared to grant Second Column rates (instead of First Column rates) to goods produced or manufactured in any of the Dominions to which the stipulations of the Treaty have not been made applicable, if the Government of the Dominion concerned is prepared to give an undertaking that it will continue to grant to Spanish goods imported into the Dominion treatment as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country. If such an undertaking is given, the arrangement will continue in force for an indefinite period, subject to six months' notice of termination on either side; i.e., it will be open to the Irish Free State Government, if such an undertaking is given on its behalf, to cease to grant most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish goods by giving six months' notice to that effect, and it will be open to the Spanish Government, by giving a similar notice, to cease to grant Second Column rates to goods produced or manufactured in the Irish Free State.

3. I should be glad to learn, at your Ministers' early convenience, whether they desire such an undertaking to be given to the Spanish Government on their behalf, in order that goods, the produce or manufacture of the Irish Free State, imported into Spain after the 5th May, may be dealt with in accordance with the Second Column of the Spanish Tariff, instead of the First Column.

17TH MAY. Your telegram of 17th April,* commercial relations between Spain and Canada. Spanish Government desire Canada to adhere to the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty. In some respects that Treaty, while well adapted to British trade, is not suited to Canadian conditions. Canadian Ministers, Fielding and Lapointe, discussed the whole subject fully with the Spanish Ambassador, London, setting forth Canadian Government's views and suggesting that negotiations be entered into with the view to making special treaty. After the return of the Ministers to Canada they received further communication from the Spanish Ambassador, but it merely reiterated the former expression of desire that Canada adhere to the Anglo-Spanish Treaty. Canadian Ministers again pointed out the difficulty of doing this and suggested that further negotiations be continued with the Spanish Consul-General in Canada or any other authorized representative of the Spanish Government. To this request no reply has been received. Canadian trade with Spain is not extensive, but such as there is is largely favourable to Spain. Canadian Government earnestly desirous of making friendly arrangement so that they extend to Spain the benefit of most-favoured-nation. Refusal of Spanish Government to consider Canadian request for further negotiations would make the products of Spain imported into Canada subject to Canadian general tariff, which situation Canadian Government are earnestly anxious to avoid. Canadian Government will be pleased to have Your Grace convey the substance of this communication to the Spanish Government either through Spanish Ambassador in London or through British Ambassador at Madrid or through both channels, as in Your Grace's judgment may be deemed best.—BYNG.

MY LORD DUKE, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 16th May, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Grace's cablegram of 17th April,* respecting the position of the Dominions in regard to the Anglo-Spanish Commercial Treaty, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to refer to my despatch dated 17th March, 1923, No. 93,† on the subject of the revision of the Spanish Customs Tariff.

My Prime Minister advises that the Commonwealth Government is not prepared to concede to Spanish products the guarantee of most-favoured-nation treatment which would be necessary in order to obtain the benefit of the Second Column rates of the Spanish Tariff for goods the produce of Australia.

My Prime Minister further advises that the Commonwealth Government does not propose to consider questions relating to Commercial Treaties with countries outside the British Empire until after the Empire Economic Conference has taken place, when proposals by foreign countries for commercial agreements will be considered in the light of the results of the Conference.

WITH reference to Sir Esmé Howard's Note No. 147 of 28th May,† regarding the acceptance by the Dominion of New Zealand of the arrangement whereby the benefits of the Second Column rates of duty in the Spanish Tariff were granted for a period of six months in exchange for most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish imports, I am now directed by His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to inform Your Excellency that the New Zealand Government do not desire that the stipulations of the Treaty should be made applicable in respect of New Zealand or of Western Samoa, nor do they desire that the proposals of His Catholic Majesty's Government outlined above which have been accepted in respect of New Zealand should be accepted on behalf of Western Samoa. Your Excellency will note that Western Samoa was included in the list of Mandated Territories submitted to Your Excellency in Sir Esmé Howard's Note No. 28 of 23rd January last, as granting most-favoured-nation treatment to Spanish goods, and to which territory in consequence His Majesty's Government presume the benefits of the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff are being accorded.

In view, however, of the non-acceptance of this arrangement on behalf of Western Samoa, I should be grateful if Your Excellency would be so good as to delete this Mandated Territory from the list of those given on page 2 of the above-mentioned Note.

3. I have accordingly to inquire whether His Majesty's Minister at Madrid may be instructed to inform the Spanish Government that the treatment which the Government of the Irish Free State concede to Spanish products will be the same as the Free State may have conceded, or may in the future concede, to those of any other country.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 408 of the 3rd of September,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a translation of a statement published in the Eco de las Aduanas of 7th September, regarding the application of the Second Column rates of the Spanish Tariff to goods from Canada.

2. In forwarding this translation, His Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid has reported that he has received no reply to his Note of the 28th of May to the Spanish Government, of which a copy was forwarded in my despatch No. 288 of the 20th of June,† and adds that the reply quoted in the statement, although only of a semi-official character, is, so far as he is aware, the first publication regarding the position of Canada, and it may now, he thinks, be taken for granted that Canadian goods, on importation into Spain, will be subject to First Column rates of duty.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure in No. 366.

(Translation from El Eco de las Aduanas, September 7th, 1923.)

Query.—The last number of El Eco de las Aduanas reproduces a notice of the Commercial Section of the Ministry of State, published in the Madrid Gazette of the 14th instant, to the effect that the Governments of Spain and Great Britain have agreed to apply the duties of the Second Column to goods from the Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates and Mandated Territories of Great Britain enumerated in the said notice. Canada is not included in the said enumeration.

We should be glad if you would kindly inform us, through the Query Column of the Eco de las Aduanas whether it is correct to assume that the duties of the Second Column are applicable also to goods from Canada as a consequence of the Agreement between His Majesty's Government and that of Great Britain of the 1st of March, 1923, published in the Gazette of the 7th March and rectified in the Gazette of the 9th March, in virtue of which the duties of the Second Column of the Tariff are applied to all the Dominions, this arrangement to remain in force for a first period of six months, and to continue until six months after the denunciation of the arrangement.

Reply.—We take it that the Dominion of Canada is not entitled to the Second Column of the Tariff, in view of the fact that it is not included in the Agreement referred to by our consultant.

My LORD, Downing Street, 4th October, 1923.

WITH reference to my telegram of the 2nd of October,|| I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid regarding the probable abandonment of negotiations for a commercial treaty between the United States of America and Spain, and the prospective advantages to Canadian firms.

Enclosure in No. 368.

(No. 528. 18.97.)

My LORD, British Embassy, San Sebastian, 20th September, 1923.

ACCORDING to a statement by a member of the staff of the American Embassy, the United States will in all probability break off their negotiations for a commercial treaty shortly. The recent declarations to Press representative by the President of the new Directorate, to the effect that the granting of authority to the late Government by Parliament, now dissolved, to negotiate Treaties on the basis of concessions below the Second Column rates of the Tariff was an iniquity in itself sufficient to justify the revolt, clearly reveal the Tariff policy of the new Government.

Evidence is accumulating to show that the "Fomento de Trabajo Nacional" has submitted data to the new Government to prove that in their negotiations with England, France and other countries, the late Governments have shown leniency by no means compatible with the welfare of Spanish industries. A large number of newspapers hitherto antagonistic to the policy of Cambó and the "Fomento Nacional" have recently inserted tendentious articles in support of the views of the latter. The data furnished in a pamphlet of this kind which has appeared in Barcelona to show how Spain has been engineered into signing Treaties detrimental to her interests are, on examination in this office, found to be completely false, the compilers obviously feeling secure from discovery owing to the general indifference and ignorance concerning these questions.

In view of the fact that the Treaty between Spain and Great Britain has not yet been ratified by Parliament it seems desirable that these facts should be placed on record. At the same time it may be well to point out that, should commercial relations between Spain and the United States actually be broken off, and imports from the latter country cease, excellent opportunities may present themselves for firms established in Canada to deliver goods hitherto obtained in the neighbouring country. Unfortunately, Canada has not adhered to the Treaty between Spain and Great Britain, nor to the modus vivendi concluded with the Colonies and Dominions, and in all probability First Column rates will soon be applied to goods from that country unless an Agreement be arrived at. Firms interested in the prospects which may develop of doing business with Canada are anxious that the Canadian Government should come to a speedy decision.

3. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has pointed out that your despatch under reply would appear merely to be confined to a definition of the undertaking previously given. It is feared that the Spanish Government will not be satisfied without a definite assurance from your Ministers that their undertaking covers any future as well as existing privileges accorded to other States.

4. I shall be glad, therefore, to be informed whether His Majesty's Ambassador in Madrid may be authorized to give the Spanish Government formally on behalf of the Government of the Irish Free State an assurance that Spanish produce will receive treatment as favourable as that which the Irish Free State may have conceded, or may in the future concede, to any other country.

Office of the High Commissioner, York House, 15, Regent Street,

SIR, London, S.W.1, 20th November, 1923.

I AM directed by the High Commissioner to refer to despatch No. 619, on the subject of the "Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between the United Kingdom and Spain," and to say that the following point in connexion therewith has come under the notice of the Home Department concerned.

The Spanish Government wish the Irish Free State to concede to Spanish produce treatment as favourable as that conceded now or in the future to produce of "any other country," and it is not quite clear whether the words "any other country" are intended to include Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, etc. If the Spanish Government wish to have an undertaking now that any arrangement made with any of the above-mentioned countries, by way of Imperial Preference, should apply to Spanish produce also, such a course would be inconsistent with the whole basis of a system of Imperial Preference. I am, accordingly, to ask you to be good enough to ascertain and inform me at your early convenience whether the Spanish Government mean by "any other country" all countries except Great Britain and the Dominions, or whether the term in question is intended to mean all countries without exception.

IN reply to your letter of the 20th November, on the subject of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between the United Kingdom and Spain, I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to request you to inform the High Commissioner that the words "any other country" in the Note from the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs of the 8th August cannot be held to include any part of the British Empire.

2. It has invariably been held by His Majesty's Government that the grant of most-favoured-nation treatment to countries not forming part of the British Empire does not involve the extension to the products of those countries of any preference granted to Empire products.

3. In this connexion I am to transmit to you a copy of a Parliamentary Paper (Cd. 1630) containing Correspondence with the Governments of Belgium and Germany as to their commercial relations with Great Britain and British Colonies.

2. I also enclose a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Christiania enclosing a copy of a Note from the Norwegian Minister for Foreign Affairs relative to certain amendments to the mining regulations, which have been proposed by the Netherlands Government and accepted by the Norwegian Government. It will be observed that the latter have also suggested minor alterations in the French translation of the regulations designed to give a more accurate rendering of the Norwegian text. His Majesty's Government have no objection to the proposed amendments subject to the English version of Article 12 (2) (c) being amended so as to read: "The claim shall be given as a plain superficies the area of which, fixed in accordance with the request of the applicant and the character of the deposit, shall not exceed 1,000 hectares."

8TH DECEMBER. Confidential. Since position with regard to Tangier explained by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs at Imperial Conference, representatives of Great Britain, France and Spain have met in conference at Paris with a view to framing statute for the town and zone. Following are particulars of progress made.

French delegates, whose unyielding attitude in the early stages threatened to result in breakdown of the Conference, were eventually induced to make important concessions, with the result that satisfactory compromise expected. Main desiderata from the British point of view, namely, neutrality of the zone in time of war and the principle of the open door for trade in time of peace, assured. Sultan is to be recognized as titular Sovereign of the zone, but his authority will be virtually confined to matters connected with the control of the native population. General administration is to be entrusted to international assembly composed of representatives of signatories of the Act of Algeiras, except ex-enemy Powers and Russia, and of the native and Jewish populations. Distribution of votes on this body ensures its genuinely international character. In addition, there is to be committee of control consisting of the foreign consular representatives, whose duty will be to ensure observance generally of the provisions of the Statute, and who will have right to veto measures passed by the Assembly. This system and the arrangements for the allotment and tenure of various administrative posts are designed to provide adequate guarantee for the maintenance of the principle of internationalization.

* No. 373.

† No. 374.

In return for abandonment of claim that Tangier should be incorporated in the Spanish zone, Spain is to receive compensation in the form of minor territorial adjustment.

Tangier Statute provides for Mixed Tribunal of six judges, two British, two French and two Spanish. Of these, one French and one Spanish will act as Public Prosecutors. Code of law to be enforced will be drawn up by special committee of experts and based upon code of the French and Spanish zones of Morocco, which are practically identical. It would not have been possible to draw up special code for Tangier based upon British and French conceptions of law which are fundamentally different. When the new regime comes into force Consular jurisdiction at Tangier will be abolished and all foreigners subjected to the jurisdiction of the Mixed Tribunal.—DEVONSHIRE.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to draw Your Lordship's attention to Article 17 of Law No. 14 of 1923 relative to the petroleum industry, a copy of which was forwarded in my despatch No. 16 of this date.

The Article, translated, is as follows:—

"For the purposes of Article 38 of Law 120 of 1919 relative to deposits of hydrocarbons and of Law 96 of 1922 relative to fisheries in the waters of the Republic, territorial waters shall be understood to mean a zone of twelve nautical miles round about the shores of the continental and insular dominions of the Republic."

It is possible that this assumption of rights may have been inspired by recent claims put forward by the United States Government. I presume Your Lordship will not allow the claim to go unchallenged.

WITH reference to Your Lordship's despatch No. 28 of 11th April last relative to Law No. 14 of 1923 dealing with the petroleum industry in Colombia, I have the honour to inform Your Lordship that I addressed a note to the Minister for Foreign Affairs on 26th May last, pointing out that His Majesty's Government could only recognize the validity of Article 17 of the above-mentioned Law in so far as its provisions did not infringe the undoubted rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

2. The Colombian Government, in their reply, state that in their opinion both doctrine and practice relative to the question of territorial waters are uncertain, and they suggest that such matters and others of importance included in the jus gentium might usefully be the subject of an international agreement. They consider, however, that in the specific case of Law 14 of 1923, the rights of His Majesty's Government are not and cannot be infringed, inasmuch as Colombian legislation will always be adjusted to the requirements of international law.

Ministry for Foreign Affairs, Bogota,

18th August, 1923.

M. LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

THIS Ministry has given due attention to the note in which the British Legation, as instructed by its Government, points out that His Majesty's Government can only recognize the validity of Article 17 of Law 14 of 1923 in so far as its provisions do not infringe the undoubted rights which His Majesty's Government have in international law.

It is clear that doctrines and practice referring to territorial waters are at present passing through a period of general indecision from the legal point of view; and upon this and other important matters of the jus gentium, which lately have been under discussion, it would be of very great utility could an international agreement be arrived at which might have the sanction of the Great Powers.

Meanwhile, and for obvious reasons, the Colombian Government consider that Law 14 relative to petroleum does not infringe, and cannot infringe, rights of His Britannic Majesty's Government, inasmuch as Colombian legislation will always be adjusted to international law.

British Embassy, Rome,

Enclosure 2 in No. 381.

Translation of Note Verbale from Royal Italian Ministry for Foreign Affairs.

(No. 201505/13 of the 11th January, 1923.)

In their Note Verbale No. 580 of the 21st November last, the British Embassy asked for explanations in regard to the application of the Italian Royal Decree No. 860 of the 28th May last, on the subject of the anchorage of foreign warships in Italian waters.

In reply to that Note, the Ministry for Foreign Affairs has the honour to inform the Embassy that, according to the Ministry of Marine to whom the matter has been referred, the limit indicated in Article 3 of the above-mentioned Decree has been established at six miles, because that is the distance pronounced by Italy for her own territorial waters since the 6th August, 1914, according to Royal Decree No. 148.

The limit of territorial waters has not yet been definitely fixed by a general agreement between the nations, but it has always been defined as "the limit within which a state can exercise in fact its own sovereignty by means of arms without having recourse to the fleet."

Therefore, whilst for many years that limit could be tacitly held to be agreed as three miles, with the increase of the carrying power of guns, it is natural that it should be proportionately increased. In these last years also, other nations have extended it up to a maximum of six miles.

And in view of the fact that since the War, not only the carrying power of artillery, but also that of torpedoes has usually been much increased, it is held that it ought now to reach as far as ten miles.

Enclosure 3 in No. 381.

(No. 229.)

Note Verbale.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Embassy duly communicated to His Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs the substance of the Note Verbale of the Royal Italian Ministry for Foreign Affairs No. 201505/83, E/IC of the 11th January last, relative to the movement of foreign warships at a distance of six miles from the Italian coast.

According to that Note, the Royal Italian Government contended that the limit of Italian territorial waters had been considered as six miles since August, 1914, and that, in view of the increased carrying power of artillery, etc., it should be proportionately increased, and should extend even as far as ten miles.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Embassy are authorized to inform the Royal Italian Government that His Majesty's Government cannot accept the view of the Royal Italian Government in this question.

MR. The Competent Authorities to whom the matter was submitted by the Ministry have now stated that in their opinion the resolution does not conflict with the stipulations contained in the International Telegraph Conventions, and I should therefore be grateful if I might be informed in what points the Norwegian regulations are considered to conflict with the rules of international law other than those contained in existing Telegraph Conventions.

To all: I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a Memorandum which has been prepared in the Foreign Office, as to the attitudes adopted by the Russian Authorities, from 1909 up to the present time, on the question of the limits of territorial waters.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure in No. 383.

MEMORANDUM.

ON 20th January, 1919, a decree was issued by the Provisional Government of the Northern Territory of Russia "concerning the protection of marine, fishing and hunting industries of the coasts of the Northern Region." A translation of the decree is given in Annex (1).||

2. This decree is apparently a development of the policy of the former Imperial Russian Government, who passed a law in December, 1909, claiming twelve nautical miles as the territorial limit for customs purposes in all the waters of the Russian Empire. His Majesty's Government protested against this law at the time.

* No. 298 in Dominions No. 87. † No. 17854: not printed; it enclosed copies of correspondence as to the seizures referred to in No. 298 in Dominions No. 87. ‡ No. 300 in Dominions No. 87.

§ No. 301 in Dominions No. 87. || Not printed.

3. In July, 1910, however, a British trawler, the "Onward Ho," was arrested by the Russian authorities off Cape Kanin, at the entrance to the White Sea, whilst outside the three-mile limit. On representations being made by His Majesty's Government the vessel was shortly afterwards released.

4. Nevertheless, in January, 1911, the Russian Government introduced into the Duma a bill forbidding foreigners to fish in the White Sea, south of a line drawn from Cape Kanin and Cape Svyatoi, and also anywhere within twelve miles of the coast of the Government of Archangel, mainland or island; and a second bill was laid before the Duma in March, 1911, and became law in June, 1911, extending the fishery limit from three to twelve miles in all Russian waters in the Far East, in the Governor-Generalship of the Pri Amur district, the estuary of the Amur itself being excluded from the bill.

5. These measures were the subject of further protests on the part of His Majesty's Government and much correspondence with the Imperial Russian Government followed.

6. On the promulgation of the decree of 20th January, 1919, His Majesty's Commissioner at Archangel, therefore, reminded the Provisional Government of Northern Russia of the view of His Majesty's Government that the three-mile limit was the general rule for territorial waters and of the case of the "Onward Ho," expressing the hope that it was not the intention of that Government to apply their decree to British subjects. On 31st January, 1919, the Provisional Government replied that pending a general agreement as to fishery and sealing restrictions the provisions of the decree concerning the extension of certain prohibitions beyond the three miles of territorial waters would not be applicable to British subjects.

7. On 23rd May, 1919, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs informed Monsieur Nabokoff that the regulations for the preservation of seal hunting and seal fisheries along the northern coast of Russia had been engaging the attention of the competent departments of His Majesty's Government. His Majesty's Government saw no reason to depart from the policy they had consistently pursued of strongly opposing any extension of territorial limits beyond the existing limit of three marine miles, but they recognized that the circumstances affecting seal hunting were somewhat different from those affecting fishing in the ordinary sense of the word, and they would, therefore, be quite prepared to consider a convention specifically designed to protect the seal fisheries, provided that the wider question of the extension of the existing territorial limits for normal kinds of fishing was not thereby affected.

8. On 13th May, 1921, the Russian Soviet Trade Delegation communicated a telegram from Monsieur Chicherin to the effect that fishing and hunting, especially south of the line Kanin Nos—Svyatoi Nos, had been prohibited for foreigners since 1st May, 1920. Notice to that effect had been given to the Norwegian Government by the Russian Government on 15th April, 1920. Foreign persons and vessels interfering with that prohibition exposed themselves to the legal consequences provided for by Russian law. The Soviet Government had received information that two English ships intended to fish near Kanin Nos, and they would regret any compulsory steps to be taken against them.

9. The text of a Soviet decree "concerning the preservation of fishing and wild animal preserves in the Northern Arctic Ocean and the White Sea," as communicated by Monsieur Krassin on 2nd June, 1921, is contained in Annex (2)* to this memorandum.

10. A communication was addressed to the Soviet Trade Delegation on 27th August, 1921, with reference to these regulations in the same sense as that sent to Monsieur Nabokoff on 23rd May, 1919.

11. In acknowledging receipt of this communication Monsieur Berzin proposed that a convention for the protection of seal fisheries should be negotiated at Moscow; and on 13th October, 1921, it was suggested to the Russian Trade Delegation that the Soviet Government should transmit a draft convention to the British official agent at Moscow for discussion. Monsieur Krassin was informed at the same time that His Majesty's Government could in no case recognize any limit of territorial waters greater than three nautical miles.

12. In February, 1922, His Majesty's Government received information that the Hull steam trawler "Magneta" had been arrested by a Russian cruiser off Sem Island in the Barents Sea and had been subsequently wrecked; and on 5th March a telegram was received from Murmansk from the Hull trawler "St. Hubert," reporting that she had been arrested and taken to Murmansk. Both the "St. Hubert" and "Magneta" were, when arrested, nine or ten miles from the shore, and at no time approached within the three-mile limit.

* Not printed.

13. The acting British official agent at Moscow was informed of these facts by telegraph, and was reminded that His Majesty's Government could not recognize the Russian claim to extend their territorial waters beyond three miles. His Majesty's Government had on previous occasions insisted that British fish vessels must not be interfered with outside that limit; and had, moreover, specifically protested against the Soviet Government's decree of 24th May, 1921, prohibiting fishing by foreign vessels within the twelve-mile limit. Mr. Grove was instructed to protest immediately in the strongest terms against this unjustifiable interference with British shipping and to demand an assurance that such interference would not be repeated; to ask for the immediate release of the "St. Hubert" and her crew, and to claim compensation for any loss incurred by her detention; and to demand compensation for the owners of the "Magneta," the two survivors and the families of the ten men drowned.

14. On 22nd March, 1922, the Soviet Commissariat for Foreign Affairs replied to Mr. Hodgson's representations, maintaining the point of view of his Government, declining to entertain any claims based on the arrest of the British trawlers or the consequent loss of life of members of the crew and refusing to give the assurance asked of them that interference of a similar kind with British fishing vessels would not be repeated in the future.

15. On 4th April, 1922, Mr. Hodgson therefore informed Monsieur Karakhan that in these circumstances His Majesty's Government had no option but to take the necessary steps in order to protect British fishing interests in the waters in which the illegal arrests of these vessels had been effected, and that he had received instructions from His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to state that arrangements were being made for sending without delay a British ship for this purpose, the officer in charge being instructed to take such measures as might be necessary in order to prevent interference with British vessels fishing outside the three-mile territorial limit.

16. On 13th May, 1922, Mr. Hodgson received the following communication from the Soviet Commissariat for Foreign Affairs:—

"I am instructed by Monsieur Karakhan to send you the following information concerning the trawler 'St. Hubert' detained pending trial by the Russian authorities for illicit fishing in our territorial waters:—

The trial took place in the People's Court at Murmansk on the 8th March, and the verdict rendered read as follows:

The trawler, together with its equipment and the fish on board—except ten per cent. of the fish, which is to go to the crew—to be confiscated; the crew to be released and sent to England.

This verdict was, however, set aside by the Department of Judicial Control of the People's Commissariat for Justice and the case was returned to the People's Court for new trial. The crew of the 'St. Hubert' were placed on board the ship 'Ruslan' which left for Vardö, Norway, on the 10th March."

17. On 27th September, 1922, after a further unsatisfactory and desultory correspondence with Monsieur Karakhan, Mr. Hodgson informed him, under instructions from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, that His Britannic Majesty's Government intended to maintain the right of British vessels to fish outside the three-mile limit in waters off the northern coast of Russia, and that His Majesty's ships had orders to take steps to prevent any interference with vessels so doing.

18. By an order dated 16th February, 1923, the Soviet Council of Labour and Defence issued a list of sea areas which it pronounced to be of national interest as having an industrial value. The list, which is contained in Annex (3),* appears to indicate that, in addition to the coastal area in the Arctic Ocean between the Finnish frontier and Nova Zemlya and the approaches to the White Sea, the Soviet Government apparently proposes to establish a twelve-mile zone in the Behring Sea and along the Pacific coast as well as on the eastern shore of Sakhalin.

* Not printed.

19. The position has now been aggravated by the arrest on 31st March, 1923, of the British trawler "James Johnstone" by a Russian gunboat nine miles from Sem Island. The British official agent at Moscow has been instructed to make immediate inquiries and report.

(No. 436.)

MY LORD,

Stockholm, 5th October, 1922.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 425 of the 27th ultimo on the subject of spirit smuggling between Swedish and Norwegian ports, I have the honour to report that yesterday's Svenska Dagblad published a statement purporting to emanate from Norway to the effect that the Swedish Customs Authorities at Strömstad, a port situated about twenty kilometres from the Norwegian southern frontier, had notified all vessels carrying spirits that the Swedish Customs frontier had been extended to four miles from the coast, and that the vessels in question had at once shifted their anchorage, but it was expected that they would easily find anchorage beyond the four mile limit. To-day's issue of the same paper contained a correction of the above statement, explaining that the order in question was not based on any new decision as to the extension of the Customs frontier existing hitherto; that the Strömstad Customs Authorities have stated in reply to an inquiry of the Göteborgs Posten that the view held in certain quarters that the territorial limit was situated at a distance of three minutes from land is based on the fact that England, during the War, refused to recognize any other than the three mile limit; that it has been popularly believed ever since that the limit has been so fixed, in spite of the fact that among shipping people there has not been the slightest doubt that Sweden, Norway and Denmark as well as Finland still have a four mile limit, and that Norway, as is well known, has extended hers to ten minutes.

* Enclosures in 53121 and enclosure 1 in 63687; the last two enclosures only printed.

I have called the attention of the Secretary-General of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs to the above press statements, and reminded him that His Majesty's Government have decided views as to the extent of territorial jurisdiction at sea, which have repeatedly been officially communicated to the Swedish Government, notably recently in connexion with air traffic (see Sir C. Barclay's despatches Nos. 43, Treaty of 30th December, 1919, and 879 of 24th November, 1920), and that their refusal to admit jurisdiction beyond three nautical miles from the coast was by no means confined to the late War. I added that I trusted that the Customs would confine their action to Scandinavian shipping, as the first application of their rule to a British vessel would raise the whole question of the limits of territorial jurisdiction at sea, which was one on which His Majesty's Government were not prepared to compromise, and nothing but trouble would therefore result from such interference with a British ship outside the three mile limit.

Mr. Boström said his attention had not been called to the matter, but he would look into it. He thought only Swedish ships were engaged in this spirit smuggling into Norway.

I have transmitted a copy of this despatch to His Majesty's Representatives at Christiania, Copenhagen and Helsingfors.

I have, &c.,
PATRICK RAMSAY.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 5th October, 1923.

WITH reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the limits of territorial waters, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a pamphlet§ on the subject of the Laws and Regulations for the protection of the Fisheries of Alaska issued by the United States Department of Commerce, together with a copy of a letter addressed by the Board of Trade to the Foreign Office in the matter.

2. In connexion with these Regulations, His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington was asked to ascertain unofficially whether any prior specific claim to jurisdiction over the whole of Cook Inlet had been put forward at any time, and a copy of Mr. Chilton's reply is enclosed.

3. His Majesty's Government would be glad to receive any observations which the Canadian Government may be able to make on the point raised.

Mercantile Marine Department,

SIR,

Great Smith Street, London, S.W.1, 10th April, 1923.

I AM directed by the Board of Trade to transmit herewith, for the information of the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, a copy of a pamphlet relating to the laws and regulations for the protection of fisheries of Alaska which has been received from the United States Department of Commerce, Washington.

Under Articles 1 (b) and 7 of the Regulations for the Administration of the South Western Alaska Fisheries Reservation, 16th December, 1922, it appears that the United States Authorities claim jurisdiction over the whole of the waters of Cook Inlet. As this Inlet is about 45 miles wide at the entrance and has a maximum width of 62 miles and a minimum width of 8½ miles, it seems that the United States authorities are claiming to exercise jurisdiction outside the generally recognized limits of territorial waters.

* No. 384. † No. 400 in Dominions No. 75. ‡ No. 299 in Dominions No. 87. § Not reprinted.

The Board are not aware that any British interests are at present affected, but they think that if jurisdiction is exercised without dispute it may at some future date give weight to a claim to jurisdiction over the area as a historic inlet. They therefore suggest for the consideration of Lord Curzon that it may be desirable to ascertain whether the regulations are intended to apply to foreign vessels and if so to make a formal statement to the United States Government that His Majesty's Government cannot admit the application of the reservations to British vessels in waters outside the limits generally accepted in international law for territorial waters.

MY LORD,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C. 16th August, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Lordship's despatch No. 1059 of the 9th ultimo, regarding the question whether any prior specific claim to jurisdiction over the whole of Cook Inlet has been put forward at any time by the United States Government, I have the honour to transmit to Your Lordship herewith an extract from a letter on this subject addressed to His Majesty's Consul-General in New York by the legal advisers to His Majesty's Embassy.

As, however, it appeared from this letter that Messrs. Coudert's view was merely based on the Act of Congress of 14th June, 1906, and that they did not fully appreciate that this Act had already been taken into consideration by the Board of Trade, I accordingly instructed Sir Harry Armstrong again to approach Messrs. Coudert, and I have the honour to enclose a copy of Mr. Kingsbury's further reply. From this letter it appears that no specific reference to Cook Inlet was made in the original Act of 2nd March, 1889, but that under the first amendatory Act of 9th June, 1896, "Cook Inlet, Prince William Sound, Bering Sea and the waters tributary thereto" are excepted from certain restrictions concerning salmon fishing, thus implying a claim to jurisdiction on the part of the United States. This reference was apparently also re-embodied in the Criminal Code of Alaska.

On these and other grounds explained by Mr. Kingsbury, Messrs. Coudert are of opinion that a claim to all the waters of Cook Inlet has actually been made, both expressly and by implication, by the United States Government, and that such a claim is in accordance with what appears to be their usual attitude and policy in such matters.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER ADDRESSED ON 24TH JULY, 1923, BY MR. H. T. KINGSBURY OF MESSRS. COUDERT BROTHERS, TO SIR HARRY ARMSTRONG.

"THE United States appears to have asserted jurisdiction over the waters of Cook Inlet in Alaska. By the Act of Congress of 14th June, 1906, certain restrictions are imposed upon salmon fishing

"in any of the waters of Alaska over which the United States has jurisdiction, except Cook Inlet, the Delta of Copper River, Bering Sea and the waters tributary thereto."

(Fed. Stats. Anno. 2d Ed. Vol. I, p. 355).

This express exception of the waters of Cook Inlet constitutes a claim of jurisdiction over them, since, if no such claim was made, there would have been no reason to make the exception. Moreover, such a claim is in accordance with, and sustained by, the general rule of International Law as recognized both in this country and in England, that "the exclusive jurisdiction of a national extends to the ports, harbors, bays, mouths of rivers and adjacent parts of sea inclosed by headlands."

(See Moore's International Law Digest, Vol. I, p. 705, quoting letter from Secretary of State Buchanan of 23rd January, 1849).

This rule has been applied in this country to Delaware Bay, Chesapeake Bay and Buzzards Bay; also to Conception Bay in Newfoundland which is stated to be over twenty miles wide at the mouth, and to the Bristol Channel between England and Wales.

(See Moore's International Law Digest, Vol. I, pp. 735-743)."

DEAR SIR HARRY,

9th August, 1923.

YOUR letter of 6th August reached me on that day. I have read the circular from the Department of Commerce which you enclosed, with special attention to the marked passages, and I return it herewith as requested. The administrative regulations of 16th December, 1922, printed in this circular, constitute in my opinion an express claim of territorial jurisdiction over "all the shores and waters of Cook Inlet." Such waters are, by these regulations, constituted a part of the "Cook Inlet District" established by the regulations which are made applicable to the entire South-western Alaskan Fisheries Reservation created by the Presidential order of 3rd November, 1922.

I understand your inquiry to be directed to the question whether such a claim has been made and not whether it is sustainable or well founded.

I have made a further examination of the Federal Statutes relating to Alaska. The earliest specific mention of Cook Inlet which I have found is contained in the Act of Congress of 9th June, 1896, which excepted "Cook Inlet, Prince William Sound, Bering Sea and the waters tributary thereto" from certain restrictions concerning salmon fishing in substantially the same terms as the amendatory Act of 14th June, 1906, referred to in my former letter of 24th July, 1923. The original Act for the Protection of the salmon fisheries of Alaska, being that of 2nd March, 1889, which was amended by the Act of 9th June, 1896, and further amended by the Act of 14th June, 1906, did not contain any specific mention of Cook Inlet.

The reference to Cook Inlet contained in the Act of 9th June, 1896, was also re-embodyed in Section 180 of the Criminal Code of Alaska, being the Act of Congress of 3rd March, 1899.

I have been unable to find any other specific mention of Cook Inlet in the Acts of Congress relating to Alaska or in the Acts of the territorial Legislature or in the decisions of the Courts, but it is possible that there may be some incidental references to these waters not disclosed by the usual indices or digests.

I have also made some examination of the proceedings of the arbitral tribunals before which the Bering Sea fur seal controversy and the boundary controversy were argued. In these I find incidental mention of Cook Inlet, but as its status was not directly involved in either arbitration I have found nothing in regard to any express claims on the subject made by the United States. The papers relating to these arbitrations, however, are very voluminous and are inadequately indexed, so that it is impossible to state categorically that they contain nothing relating to such a claim without a most exhaustive and prolonged examination. The general course of argument in the Bering Sea arbitration indicates that the United States, among other things, claimed in general to have succeeded to the previous Russian claim of jurisdiction over the Alaskan waters to the distance of one hundred miles from shore. This claim was specifically made in respect to Bering Sea and it does not appear that Cook Inlet was within the field of controversy, but it may be assumed that a similar claim would have been made by the United States in respect to Cook Inlet if the status of that body of water had been material to the controversy.

In one of the earlier cases out of which the controversy grew, a full account of which is given in the report of the Governor of Alaska for 1887, it appears that counsel who represented certain British vessels which had been seized by the United States on Bering Sea contested the right of the United States to make the seizure on the ground, among others, that "Bering Sea is not a gulf or a bay and is not land-locked by the lands of the United States." It appears from the map that Cook Inlet is to a great extent "land-locked by lands of the United States."

In the arbitration concerning the boundary between Alaska and Canada there was much discussion in regard to the location of the boundary line with relation to the Inlets situated in the strip of land or lisière which extends to the South-east of the main body of Alaska. Here again Cook Inlet was not within the field of controversy and the status as to territorial jurisdiction of the waters of the Inlets which were within the field of controversy does not appear to have been a controlling factor in the situation.

In spite of the paucity of specific references to Cook Inlet in the statutes and other official documents, I am satisfied that the United States claims and has claimed territorial jurisdiction over its waters, both expressly and by necessary implication, and that such claim is in accordance with what appears to be the usual attitude and policy of the United States upon such questions.

Yours faithfully,

HOWARD THAYER KINGSBURY.

25TH JANUARY. My telegram of to-day.* Lord Curzon reports that on the discussion regarding Allied war graves, 24th January, Turks took up uncompromising attitude in regard to the area at Ari Burnu, which, at request of Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments, Graves Commission had set apart for cemeteries of Anzac troops. Turks insisted that area should be strictly limited to actual ground occupied by already concentrated and identified graves. In regard to other cemeteries, Gallipoli, they claim right to examine sites, and recommend, if necessary, that land demarcated by Graves Commission be restricted to areas of actual graves, also indicating that further exhumation and concentration might be necessary. British Delegation, supported by the Allies, absolutely refused to consider this, and stated that we could not be expected to evacuate Gallipoli until we were assured that the cemeteries already established might remain completely undisturbed. Please inform your Prime Minister.—DEVONSHIRE.

SECRET and urgent. My Prime Minister sends following message:—

Begins: Your telegram 25th January,† Gallipoli cemeteries. Attitude of British and Allied delegates in absolutely refusing to consider Turkish demands is most strongly approved by Commonwealth. Commonwealth Government desires to make it quite clear that in no circumstances can it assent to any of Turkish demands re Anzac graves. Should Turkish Delegation prove so unreasonable as to insist upon attempting to inflict this indignity upon Australia, it ought to be made perfectly clear to them that Australia will regard it as a casus belli. I do not doubt that a solid unyielding front by Allies is all that is necessary to induce Turks to recede from position they have taken up towards Gallipoli cemeteries. This we firmly believe we can rely on. But if, unhappily, it fails, we desire to make it quite clear that Australia cannot give way in this matter. HUGHES. Ends.

SIR,

Downing Street, 13th July, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a Parliamentary Paper (Cmd. 1814) regarding the Lausanne Conference on Near Eastern Affairs, 1922-3, which contains on pages 684 to 831 the Draft Terms of Peace which were presented to the Turkish Delegation on the 31st January.

2. The Turkish Counter Proposals are contained in the enclosure* to the despatch from His Majesty's High Commissioner at Constantinople of the 9th March, of which I enclose a copy.

3. As a result of the resumed negotiations at Lausanne, the Conventions relating to the Régime of Foreigners and to the Commercial Régime which appeared on pages 790 to 801 and pages 804 to 817 of the Parliamentary Paper have been revised, and I enclose copies of translations of the revised drafts† for your Ministers' information.

* F.O. print E.2800/1/44 (15th March, 1923). † Not printed; for the Conventions as signed see pages 139-173 of [Cmd. 1929].

4. The draft of the Convention relating to the Régime for Foreigners has been accepted by the Allied and Turkish delegates, but, in forwarding it, Sir Horace Rumbold reported that, while the text had now been definitely accepted by the Conference, the question of adding an article giving non-signatory Powers the right to accede was still reserved.

5. Similarly, Sir Horace Rumbold stated that the text of the Commercial Convention had been definitely adopted with the exception of two paragraphs in Article 9 (not reproduced in the translation), which were intended to preserve existing rights as regards cabotage in Turkey, and would probably be replaced by an arrangement made outside the Convention. Article 17, dealing with the adhesion of non-signatory Powers, and Article 18, in so far as concerned the period for which the Convention was to remain in force as regards Greece, Roumania, and the Serb-Croat-Slovene State, were still reserved.

6. Your Ministers will observe that both Conventions contain Articles which will render it possible to declare, at the time of coming into force of the Convention, that the provisions do not apply to the self-governing Dominions unless notice of accession is given.

I have, &c.,

31ST DECEMBER. Secret. Following for you from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Treaty with Turkey. Your telegram of 8th December* begins "Assumption on which our message of 16th November† was framed was that Canadian Government would wish to follow the procedure adopted in the case of the treaties with Germany, Austria and Bulgaria."

As we understand it, procedure referred to is that adopted with respect to Paris Peace Conference, and followed later with respect to Conference on the limitation of armament held at Washington. As regards participation of Canada, there were in that procedure four distinct, separate and essential stages.

A. Direct representation of Canada at the Conference at which treaties were drafted and participation in the proceedings of the Conferences by representatives of Canada, each representative holding a full power signed by His Majesty the King, in the form of Letters Patent, authorizing him to sign "for and in the name of His Majesty the King, in respect of the Dominion of Canada," any treaties, conventions or agreements that might tend to the attainment of the object of the Conference; the issuance of these full powers by His Majesty having been sanctioned by the Government of Canada by Order in Council.

B. Formal signing of the treaties on behalf of Canada by the plenipotentiaries named.

C. Approval by the Canadian Parliament of the treaties thus signed on behalf of Canada.

* No. 369 in Dominions No. 87. † No. 362 in Dominions No. 87.

In assuming that, as regards the treaties in which Canada is supposed to have a direct or immediate interest, the procedure here outlined is the one which our Government would wish to follow, Your Grace is perfectly correct. In the case of main political treaties concluded since the War, the rule seems to have been generally followed that, wherever the Dominions could be said to have a direct or immediate interest, the procedure was shaped to include their participation in the proceedings and their signature. That in the case of the Lausanne Conference a like procedure has not been followed with respect to Canadian representation and participation has been regarded by us as evidence that Canada, in the opinion of the countries by whom invitations to the Lausanne Conference were extended, could not have been believed to have the direct and immediate interest which she was supposed to have in the Conferences at Versailles and Washington. As mentioned in my telegram of 31st October,* we have no exception to take to the course pursued with respect to the present Conference. But as regards the procedure it must be apparent that, quite apart from any action or representation on the part of the Government of Canada, a different procedure has been followed in the present case from that followed at Versailles and Washington. In so far as one stage in the procedure is necessarily dependent upon the preceding stage it is difficult to see how a like procedure can be followed. Canada has not been invited to send representatives to the Lausanne Conference, and has not participated either directly or indirectly in the proceedings of the Conference. We do not see under the circumstances how, as respects signing on behalf of Canada, we can be expected to follow the procedure adopted as regards the treaties with Germany, Austria and Bulgaria, in the case of a new treaty or of any separate instrument regarding Straits. Ends.

Mr. Mackenzie King is, I understand, afraid that the representative of Canada may be asked to sign the treaty, and he does not want to be put in the position of refusing the request. SECRET. Your telegram 31st October, my telegram 16th November,* I now understand that Canadian Government, while entirely in accord with procedure adopted since 1919 as regards signature of International Conventions arising out of Conferences at which Dominions have had separate representation, feel that, as procedure followed at Lausanne Conference has been different from that, e.g., at Paris and Washington, in that Canada has not participated in proceedings, best course would be to omit signature by plenipotentiary on behalf of Canada of any Treaty with Turkey which may result from Conference, including separate Instrument regarding Straits, so that Treaties in question would be signed only by British plenipotentiaries who have negotiated them. 27TH JANUARY. Secret. In continuation of my telegram 8th November*, please inform your Prime Minister that I have now had opportunity of going fully into questions raised in his message to my predecessor 18th October,† regarding Near East crisis.

First, I should like to make clear sequence of events, as to which there appears to have been some misunderstanding. Mr. Lloyd George's first message to your Prime Minister was despatched from the Colonial Office in a telegram from Secretary of State to you at 11.55 p.m., on Friday, 15th September.‡ Semi-official communiqué authorized by late Government was not issued to Press till some time after 3 p.m., on Saturday, 16th September.

Your Prime Minister may also like to know that an answer to Mr. Lloyd George's message (which went simultaneously and in identical terms to the other Dominions) was received from New Zealand at 1.30 p.m., on Saturday, 16th September,§ i.e., before issue of Press communiqué here.

Next, as to publication of correspondence, I realize that your Prime Minister may well find it essential to make statement to Canadian Parliament, setting out purport of correspondence between the two Governments, and explaining in particular attitude of Canada, but at present juncture I should deprecate publication of actual text of telegrams. Part of correspondence is, of course, necessarily confidential, and I venture to suggest that it would be far more preferable if your Prime Minister could see his way to make general statement only, and refrain from laying any of telegrams before Parliament. Prime Ministers of Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand have already made similar general statements in Parliaments in autumn, and Prime Minister, Commonwealth of Australia, embodied in his statement very full account of contents of telegram of 15th September.—DEVONSHIRE.

MY LORD,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 18th May, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 147, of 15th November last, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency herewith copy of a note from the United States Government enclosing a new draft of the proposed treaty to replace the Rush-Bagot Agreement of 28th April, 1817, regarding the use of armed vessels on the Great Lakes.

Mr. Hughes explains that the views of the United States Government have been embodied in a new draft, which differs somewhat from that enclosed in Your Excellency's despatch under reference, as it is thought that this method will facilitate the negotiation of a treaty acceptable to both parties.

I shall be glad to receive in due course an expression of the views of the Dominion Government in regard to this draft for communication to the United States Government.

A copy of this despatch with enclosures is being forwarded to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

I have, &c.,

A. C. GEDDES.

His Excellency,

The Lord Byng of Vimy, G.C.B.,

&c., &c., &c.

EXCELLENCY,

Department of State, Washington, 12th May, 1923.

WITH your Confidential communication No. 887, under date of 28th November, 1922, you were good enough to transmit to me, at the request of the Canadian Government, a copy of a draft treaty designed to supplant the Rush-Bagot Agreement of 28th April, 1817, and also a memorandum concerning the strength of naval vessels now stationed on the Great Lakes. You informed me also, that the Dominion Government would be glad to receive in due course the views of the Government of the United States in response to the terms of the draft treaty.

I now have the honour to inform you that, after the most careful consideration of the terms of the Canadian draft treaty, the Government of the United States, in order to facilitate the negotiation of an arrangement acceptable to both countries, has deemed it expedient to embody its own views in the provisions of a fresh draft treaty. A copy of that draft* is transmitted to you herewith, and in parallel columns a copy of the Canadian draft† is set forth.

The following explanatory statement will make clear the position of the United States and will, it is hoped, reveal its effort to give practical effect to the high purpose animating both Governments by means of provisions enabling each to carry on its own domestic activities unhampered by unnecessary restraint.

The Preamble, adverting to the bond of peace happily long subsisting between the two countries, refers to their desire to "perpetuate the spirit" of the Rush-Bagot Agreement by an appropriate Convention. It is believed that this simple yet definite statement suffices. The reference in the Canadian draft to the Treaty for the Limitation of Naval Armament, signed at Washington, 6th February, 1922, seems to be hardly necessary, as there is no real connexion between the two, and it is deemed to be desirable to preserve the historic independence of the agreement relating to the Great Lakes.

* Extract only printed. † Not printed here; see sub-enclosure in No. 378 in Dominions No. 87.

Article One follows the Canadian draft except that there are added the words "the waters tributary to the Great Lakes," thereby somewhat enlarging the area of the waters designated.

The first clause of Article Two is identical with the Canadian draft. The second clause of the former, however, concerning the passage of vessels from the sea to the Lakes, differs from the Canadian draft. The plan proposed by this Government does not forbid the passage of vessels of the two classes referred to in Article Three (those necessary for the enforcement of police laws and regulations, and naval vessels or merchant vessels converted to naval use); but it simply confines the class for the passage of which a mutual agreement beforehand is requisite to naval vessels other than of the character described in Article Three. Thus, this clause when read in connexion with Article Three has a twofold purpose. It gives sufficient latitude with respect to the passage of vessels which ought to be permitted to have access to the Lakes without special consent; and further, it excludes passage without that consent to the type of vessels normally not entitled to the privilege. It is believed, moreover, that the precise terms of the second paragraph of Article Three with respect to naval vessels or merchant vessels converted to naval use amply suffice to cover treatment to be accorded those ships.

The Canadian draft of Article Two which is framed on a different theory would serve to bar passage without previous consent, not only to naval vessels whose presence on the Lakes was permitted, but also to any vessels well outside of that service, and used for public or private purposes, if they had been previously designed, built or ever used for any naval end. It is suggested that the American draft contains all sufficient safeguards and imposes no unnecessary restriction.

In Article Three, the American draft makes differing provisions for two distinct classes of vessels concerned. The first paragraph relates to such vessels "as may be necessary for the enforcement of police laws and regulations." These are ships employed for purely domestic purposes, such as enforcement of revenue laws, police protection, rescue work and the like. It is firmly believed that their number, specifications and armament should not be subjected to international agreement from time to time. On the other hand, to allay all possible fears or misconception as to their use, the American draft provides that their armament is to be limited to such as is appropriate to the purpose to be served, and also that they shall not be used on the waters designated for militia training, for naval manœuvres or for naval training other than that of their regular crews. It is also declared that they shall never be used for hostile purposes—even in time of war. Thus, this first paragraph as it stands, forbids every improper use of such vessels contrary to the spirit of the treaty, yet at the same time, gives reasonable latitude for the enforcement of police laws and regulations which impose a peculiarly heavy burden on the authorities of the United States.

The second paragraph of Article Three concerns naval vessels or merchant vessels converted to naval use. It is provided that they may be maintained "for training purposes only," that they shall never be used for hostile purposes on the Great Lakes—even in time of war—and that "the number, specifications and armament of such vessels shall be the subject of agreement from time to time between the American and Canadian Governments."

It is believed that the foregoing distinctive treatment accorded the two classes of vessels referred to in Article Three is closely responsive to the actual requirements of the present day. For that reason, it is calculated to eliminate all unnecessary friction, and thus to enable both countries to unite the more strongly for the abolishment of warlike acts on the Great Lakes.

According to Article Four, no vessel built on the waters designated in Article One for naval service in other waters shall have any offensive or defensive armament placed on board, while in the waters designated in that Article. It will be noted that the words "in other waters" are a variation from the corresponding paragraph of the Canadian draft. Other differences in the phraseology between the two drafts of this Article are slight and require no comment.

Articles Five and Six of the two drafts are substantially alike.

In conclusion, permit me to add that the Government and the people of the United States have been profoundly impressed by the practical value of the Rush-Bagot Agreement which despite its terms long since unresponsive to actual conditions has, through liberal and friendly interpretations on both sides of the boundary, served the real purpose for which it was concluded. It is with the warm desire to perpetuate the spirit of that Agreement by a fresh Convention, which by the reasonableness and flexibility of its terms may in no way weaken the common purpose of the two Governments, that the accompanying draft treaty has been prepared.

I have the honour to request that you be good enough to transmit the treaty together with the views expressed in this communication to the Canadian Government.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

His Excellency

The Right Honourable

Sir Auckland Geddes, G.C.M.G., K.C.B.

AMERICAN DRAFT.

Preamble.

THE United States of America, and His Majesty The King, etc.

Desiring to strengthen the bond of peace which has long happily subsisted between them, and in particular to perpetuate the spirit of the arrangement commonly called the Rush-Bagot Agreement, concluded between them 28th April and 29th April, 1817, by an appropriate Convention, have appointed to that end their plenipotentiaries, etc.

The President, etc.

Article One.—The present Treaty shall apply to the waters of the Great Lakes, the waters tributary to the Great Lakes, the waters connecting the Great Lakes, the international boundary waters of the St. Lawrence River, and the waters of Lake Champlain.

Article Two.—No armed vessel shall be maintained on the waters designated in Article One by either High Contracting Party, except in accordance with Article Three; nor shall there be passed, for any purpose whatsoever, from the sea into the waters designated, by either High Contracting Party, any naval vessel other than of the character described in Article Three, either armed or unarmed, without a mutual agreement beforehand.

Article Three.—Such vessels may be maintained on the waters designated in Article One by either High Contracting Party as may be necessary for the enforcement of police laws and regulations. The armament of vessels engaged in the enforcement of police laws and regulations shall be limited to such armament as is appropriate to that purpose. Such vessels shall not be used on the waters designated in Article One for militia training, for naval manœuvres or for naval training, other than that of their regular crews; nor shall they ever be used for hostile purposes even in time of war.

Naval vessels or merchant vessels converted to naval use may be maintained for training purposes only, in the waters designated in Article One, provided the vessels so maintained shall never be used for hostile purposes on the Great Lakes—even in time of war. The number, specifications and armament of such vessels shall be the subject of agreement from time to time between the American and Canadian Governments.

Article Four.—No vessel built on the waters designated in Article One for naval service in other waters shall have any offensive or defensive armament placed on board while it is in the waters designated in Article One.

Any such vessel shall be removed from those waters within six months of the date when it is ready for launching.

Each High Contracting Party shall promptly inform the other of any such vessel to be built on those waters within its territory, communicating the date of the signing of the contract, the date when it is ready for launching, and its main dimensions.

Note.—No further developments were reported officially during 1923, but the Prime Minister of Canada made a statement as to the position at the 4th meeting of the Imperial Conference on the 8th October, 1923.

TELEGRAM FROM SIR A. GEDDES (WASHINGTON) TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Dated 3rd May, 1923.)

(Paraphrase.)
(No. 211.)

Dry Law Decision.

I AM forwarding the text of the Supreme Court's decision, together with a covering despatch, by the next bag. Meanwhile, I telegraph the following information which I have obtained from interviews with the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary and Under-Secretary of State, and the Chairman of the Shipping Board.

1. The decision given by the Court is quite contrary to the Government's anticipation and is causing them much uneasiness in view of its probable consequences. Indeed, the Secretary of the Treasury informed me categorically that they had endeavoured so to present their case as to ensure an adverse decision on technical grounds.

2. There is no doubt that the Cabinet, whatever may be their formal official attitude, would be only too pleased if foreign Powers were to make representations on the subject. Such representations would greatly strengthen their position when the time comes to persuade Congress to pass the necessary legislation to permit the carriage of alcoholic beverages under seal by foreign-owned vessels in United States territorial waters.

3. Enforcement.—The Treasury Department, so Mr. Mellon informs me, and I know that it is so, is entirely without the staff and funds necessary effectively to carry out the new duties which it is now called on to perform.

I doubt, however, whether this will materially ease the position as effecting the great trans-Atlantic boats in British ownership with which public opinion is, of course, primarily concerned.

4. The regulations under which the decision will be carried out will come into force immediately on publication, and this, Mr. Mellon hopes, will take place on the 10th proximo.

This information is of great importance as touching vessels already at sea and which cannot arrive in United States ports until after the date mentioned; ships especially affected are those which are now making the voyage from London to Vancouver with a cargo of alcoholic beverages consigned to the Government of British Columbia and which also carry freight for San Francisco, where they must call towards the end of June to discharge.

I, therefore, called forthwith upon Mr. Hughes and entered a vigorous protest against the application of the decision to ships already at sea, while at the same time making, on behalf of His Majesty's Government, a formal reservation of all rights in the matter. He professed himself as being quite powerless in the matter and treated me to a lengthy exposition of the legal position. However, I eventually persuaded him to send for his Under-Secretary, whom he instructed to approach Mr. Mellon and the Attorney-General forthwith, with a view to finding means of meeting the difficulty.

He also made what he called an "informal admission" that, in his own opinion, no action would be taken in the case of ships already at sea.

Nevertheless, the position is that, in the absence of any administrative action on the part of the Government, these vessels and their cargoes become liable to seizure on entering territorial waters under the new decision and, in view of my knowledge of the type of American one finds amongst the port officials, I do not personally view the situation with the same optimism as Mr. Hughes, and shall continue to urge the case of these ships, which I have well in hand.

5. The Chairman of the Shipping Board, Mr. Lasker, professed to be bitterly opposed to the Court's decision, but personally, I am not at all sure that the Board are not, as a body, well pleased with it.

I have a strong suspicion that this is a political rather than a legal interpretation and is in fact a step towards the founding of an American Mercantile Marine. This suspicion may be wholly unfounded, but I obtained additional grounds for such a view from a conversation I had yesterday with one of the Dissenting Judges, Mr. Justice Sutherland, who made one remark which seemed to indicate that he doubted the legal purity of the majority decision. Naturally, however, he was very guarded and did not offer any observation which could be nailed down.

I am certainly of opinion that His Majesty's Government should enter a protest against this new interpretation of the law and, if necessary, take their protest to the World Court or some other International Court of Arbitration.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 26th May, 1923.

WITH reference to my Secret despatch Dominions No. 172 of the 14th May,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, regarding the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States prohibiting the transportation, importation, and exportation of liquor in United States territorial waters.

* No. 420.

Enclosure in No. 421.

(No. 578.)

MY LORD,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 4th May, 1923.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 211 of yesterday's date, I have the honour to transmit to Your Lordship under separate cover twelve copies of the Supreme Court decision prohibiting the transportation, importation, and exportation of liquors in American territorial waters, which has been communicated to me officially by the State Department without comment.

The first portion of the decision is devoted to a study of the Prohibition Act, and explains how the shipping companies' appeal came before the Supreme Court as the result of the Attorney-General's ruling of 6th October, 1922. The terms of Section 1 of the Eighteenth Amendment and the precise interpretation of the words "transportation," "importation" and "territory" in that Amendment, are then discussed. The decision goes on to refer to the arguments put forward by the defendants that the Amendment applies to United States ships wherever they may be, and not only when they are in American territorial waters, and points out that this argument is based on the "statement sometimes made that a merchant ship is a part of the territory of the country whose flag she flies." This long established doctrine of international law is dismissed by the Supreme Court as a metaphor and a fiction, and the contention of the United States Government that the Amendment covers foreign merchant ships when within United States territorial waters is held to be right. The liability of foreign vessels to the jurisdiction of the United States, while they are in United States territorial waters, is then reviewed. The decision then states that, as the Prohibition Act applies only to territory under United States jurisdiction with the sole exception of the Panama Canal, the Act cannot be held to apply to American vessels outside the three-mile limit. This opinion is not, however, to be taken as in any way modifying the undoubted right of the United States Government to control all American vessels on the high seas.

Finally, the plaintiffs' arguments as to the necessity of the carriage of liquor as sea stores is dealt with and is considered inadmissible, the fact that the liquor, whether sea stores or not, is transported through United States territorial waters being held to override any other consideration.
